Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

*A Parrot and his Playmate.

Mr. Archer, London, possesses two strange pets, one is Poll, a Parrot, and the other, Gyp, a terrier. Mr. Archer has had Poll for some years, but Gyp is a pup which he has only had for five weeks. As soon as Gyp was brought into the house Poll at once adopted him as a playmate and friend. On Sunday mornings Mr. Archer may be seen with his two pets taking a stroll—Poll perched on his shoulder and Gyp running by his side. Whenever Gyp moves from one part of the house to another, Poll immediately flies to rejoin her companion. Copied and sent in by William Robertson (age 13), 21, Lawrence Street, Partick, Glasgow.

*The Yellowhammer.

Now I, Yellow-hammer,
Desire to give praise
For plentiful orchards
And sunshiny days.
The spring gave me many
A bud for my bill,
And sent me a sweetheart

—Sent by Maggie Jeffery, Sartor House, Winner Street, Paignton.

What a Jackdaw Did.

A Jackdaw which had been taught to talk escaped from its cage, and in the course of its flight saw a man ploughing. It followed the trail of the plough to feed on the worms that were turned up. Presently the ploughman heard a voice behind him saying, "I'll nab you yet." He turned round, but saw no one. Although surprised, he went on with his work, when again came the words, "I'll nab you yet." This was enough. He turned and ran as if for his life, and meeting his master, told him what had happened. The farmer laughed heartily, and told him he was troubled with a guilty conscience. To quiet the man, he went back with him to the plough, making fun of him and his fears while on the way. The plough had scarcely started when the Jackdaw, who it is supposed discovered two worms, cried out, "I'll nab you both; I'll nab you both.' At this, both the farmer and the ploughman took to their heels, and did not stop till they were both out of the field.—Sent by E. C. Jenner (age 11), Teston, near Maidstone.

PELTON FELL & DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Institute Hall, April 8, Mr. J. Stanger in chair. We had a good turn up of members. Ballot taken for best feather show judge; result, Mr. J. Riseborough (Sunderland) elected. Carried, that best feather show be 6d. per cage, to be held on August 5. We settled to hold our annual and open show December 23; will other societies please notice date? We had two members nominated: Messrs. R. Bewicke and W. Catchpole, both of Newfield. Annual show judges will be elected next meeting, May 6. We are enrolling members at every meeting, and would be glad to welcome more (subs. 5s. per year and 1s. entrance).—Wm. Forster, Sec.

NEW CROSS AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held headquarters, 397 New Cross Road (April 6th), Mr. S. Alwin in chair. Mr. Tadman was elected a member. Quarterly balance sheet presented by the secretary, showing the society to be in good financial position. The proposed Ramble to Hildenboro' is to take place on Sunday, May 21st (particulars later). Young stock show arranged for June 8th (in addition to the monthly meeting of June 1), Mr. Meades judge. Also another Y.S. show July 6th; Mr. Robson, judge. Mr. Robson will give a lecture on May 4th, on "How to become a successful breeder and exhibitor"; Mr. Silver on June 1st, and Mr. Meades (on "Colour-feeding"), on August 3rd. Owing to Mr. Lewcock being unable to attend, his paper was duly read by the Chairman.—Barton and Hearn, Secs.

BORDER CITY (Carlisle) O.S.

Quarterly general meeting held April 5th, headquarters, Mr. G. Davidson in chair. Various correspondence was dealt with, and the communication from the Cockermouth F.A.'s chairman re formation of a joint County of Cumberland Bird Show was fully discussed; but this society does not see its way clear to fall in with the conditions as stated, there being only five (?) societies holding shows, and of these three at least are joint shows, and include poultry, etc. A rough draft of schedule for our open show on October 25th and 26th was formed. Fifty-four classes will again be given, although slight alterations are made from last year's classification. The country rambles were next discussed, and it was decided that the first of these take place on the last Sunday of this month, secretary to notify meeting place and destination through the Fancy Press.—J. C. Bell, Sec.

PUDSEY, STANNINGLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting, held April 3rd, Fleece Hotel, Stanningley, a good number of members being present. Mr. Kinder presided. Almost the whole of the evening was spent in discussing the revised Yorkshire Union rules, one or two of which have more disadvantages than otherwise, especially to the smaller societies. The rule "that all societies pay their equal share of judges' fees, whether holding an open show or not," and the rule "that no members' shows be held during the hours an open show is in progress," is simply off, and it is crippling the small societies at both ends. However, I hope the Union will not go down in membership as the mischief is done, and we shall have to "grin and bear it," and try to repair the damage another year, when I think there will be a better return to the annual ballot.—H. Raistrick.

CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL

HOW TO BECOME A SUCCESSFUL BIRD BREEDER.

By Claude St. John.—This article represents the author at his best. The subject matter leads the would-be aspirant step by step from the bed-rock of his hobby to the very zenith of success. No bird breeder can afford to miss this highly instructive contribution, written as it is by such a popular and true-hearted fancier as Mr. Claude St. John. Read it before embarking on the business of the 1911 breeding season, and it will both help you to cut down your expenses to the minimum (by avoiding waste) and to breed young birds with greater ease and certainty.

BRITISH BIRD-KEEPING FOR THE WORKING MAN.

By W. J. Pitcher.—The experiences of a Yorkshire working man. The author shows in a most interesting way that it is not always the one with the big aviaries that derives the most pleasure, but often the working-man, whose only hobby after a day's work is his birds. He advises the various kinds of birds that lend themselves to the requirements of the working-man hobbyist, and how they should be fed and cared for.

HOW I PRODUCED MY WINNING HYBRIDS.

By J. Ovenstone.—A very interesting and valuable article. Gives the author's own experiences extending over a period of about ten years, together with an account of his system of feeding, management, etc.

BUILDING AND FITTING AN OUTDOOR BIRD-ROOM.

By Henry Meeds.—Advising the cheapest and best methods to adopt in building and fitting up an outdoor bird-room or aviary. Giving full dimensions for same, and how the internal fittings should be put into place to the best advantage. The article is accompanied by a photograph of an ideal type of out-door bird-room, which enables the reader to more easily grasp the subject matter of the article.

THE TREATMENT OF, AND MEDICINES FOR, AILING CAGE BIRDS.

A feature which conveys information that is of vital importance to the would-be successful keeper of birds—information of a kind but seldom available through the usual channels telling the properties, etc., of most bird medicines, and how the ailments common to birds may be cured by them.

A CHEAP METHOD OF CANARY BREEDING.

By T. F. Morgan.—Emphasises the point that even "cheap" Canaries can be, and are, made to pay. The article explains in detail how a cheap breeding-cage can be made and fitted out, how the Canaries should be fed and managed, and closes with a few "Don'ts" that are very timely hints.

FAMILIAR FOREIGN SEED EATERS AND THEIR MANAGEMENT.

By J. H. Booth.—Dealing with some of the foreign hardbills commonly imported into this country, and their management.

A YEAR WITH THE WILD BIRDS.

By H. Norman.—The author gives it as his opinion that wild bird life flourishes in our fields and woods as it does in no other European country.

HOW TO SUCCESSFULLY MANAGE A CAGE BIRD SOCIETY.

By W. A. Dickins.—This article should be read by the secretaries, officials, and members of all cage bird societies, dealing out to them, as it does, many helpful hints on the successful management of a society.

The Most Reliable Authority on Bird Culture.

In addition there are numerous art and other illustrations of the peerage of 1910 in the Bird World. A lovely Coloured Plate of the sensation of the season, the Dartford Warbler, claimed at the Palace for 13 Guineas. Calendar, Postal, and other information. Standards and Descriptions, Lists of Judges of Cage Birds and their addresses, Officials, Cage Bird Societies, etc.

Some Diseases of Birds,

And How to Recognise and Treat Them.

G. YATES, M.R.C.V.S.

the appearance of the discharge there is usually a little feverishness, and the bird seems mopy and dull. Later the discharge loses its thin watery character and becomes thicker, tending to obstruct the breathing. During this time the bird continues to feed, and with suitable treatment the trouble will soon disappear.

Occasionally, however, the catarrh assumes a chronic form, and in this case the discharge is often confined to one side of the head only, and generally arises from disease limited to that one side. In the acute form there is little interference with health when the discharge becomes apparent, and it is seldom that death occurs from this cause; when it does it is generally due to the extension of the inflammation to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Exposure to draughts and moist conditions of the air are the principal causes.

Treatment should be early attempted by supplying warmth and by liberal feeding, with the addition of a little green-food, together with the administration of the following medicine:—Tincture Camphoræ Co., 3 drops; Sweet spirits of nitre, 3 drops; Glycerine, 5 drops. Give in the drinking water (four tablespoonfuls) fresh night and morning until the symptoms disappear. In cases that are of a chronic nature, attempt at treatment is useless, and it does not materially interfere with the health of the bird.

LARYNGITIS

This is a localised trouble—an inflammation of the larynx, popularly known as the "voice box," though this is not the case in birds, for in them the vocal cords are situated in the syrinx which is a modification of the windpipe, situated at the point where the windpipe divides to form the two bronchi, and varying very much in its complexity. Birds subjected to draughts, cold air, etc., are the principal sufferers, particularly where the subject is delicate and predisposed.

The symptoms depend upon the degree of the affection. In mild attacks there will be scarcely any noticeable change, but at other times the symptoms become alarming, owing to the fact that the mucous membrane of the larynx becomes swollen so that the opening into the windpipe is considerably narrowed, interfering with the proper intake of air, and the bird is seen to breathe heavily, a mucous discharge appearing at the beak, and there is noticed a difficulty in swallowing. A bird so affected should be allowed plenty of air space, avoiding draughts, whilst four drops of Glyco-Heroin, obtainable from any chemist, should be given in the drinking water (four tablespoonfuls) fresh twice daily until recovery occurs.

BRONCHITIS

Bronchitis is a very common ailment in birds, and is more often encountered where birds are kept in insanitary surroundings, which, with overcrowding and bad ventilation, inhalation of dust (irritants), and adverse changes in the weather, all tend to produce this disease. Although in itself not often fatal, yet the disease has a tendency to extend and invade the smaller bronchial tubes and the lungs themselves, producing broncho-pneumonia which is in all cases fatal. But with early recognition and suitable treatment this should be avoided.

Singularly enough, there is not much interference with appetite, the bird feeding. But in the intervals between "meals" it assumes a listless attitude. In the larger species there will be observed a slight noise of a wheezy character, this is not always perceptible in the smaller birds, but in most there is gaping. Provided the disease does not extend, then recovery occurs fairly rapidly, and there is no recurrence.

The bird should be placed in a well ventilated room, at the same time ensuring warmth. No alteration in the diet is necessary, but a little green food, if procurable, will materially assist in recovery. Give a course of the following medicine:—Carbonate of Ammonia, 3 grains; Tinct. of Squills, 3 drops; Glycerine, 5 drops; twice daily in drinking water. This, of course, is for one dose. Enough can be dispensed by any chemist to last one for a Seasonable Hints for Bird Breeders.

J. C. BARNES (Sheffield.)

This well-known judge and breeder deals with six important points connected with breeding procedure, and explains his own methods.

One Hen or Two?

(1) Regarding running a cock with two hens. This I am not in favour of. It is done in many cases with good results; of that I am aware. My advice is, if you wish to keep substance and stamina, in your stock, great essentials nowadays, either in breeding or showing, make a practice of running a cock with one hen. The progeny is stronger and larger, and the allround results better.

(2) Keeping both cock and hen together during incubation. Some fanciers, as soon as the hen has laid her complement of eggs, and has begun to sit, remove the male bird, declaring the hen will sit and feed better without him than with him. That is an opinion. My idea, and what I always practice during the breeding season, is to leave the cock with the hen whilst she is sitting, providing he does not molest her at all. If he should, out with him—clean away from her. Again, I contend that when both birds are left together, and the young ones hatch out, there are two attendants to wait upon the wants of the new arrivals; therefore the progeny get fed better and develop more by being well cared for.

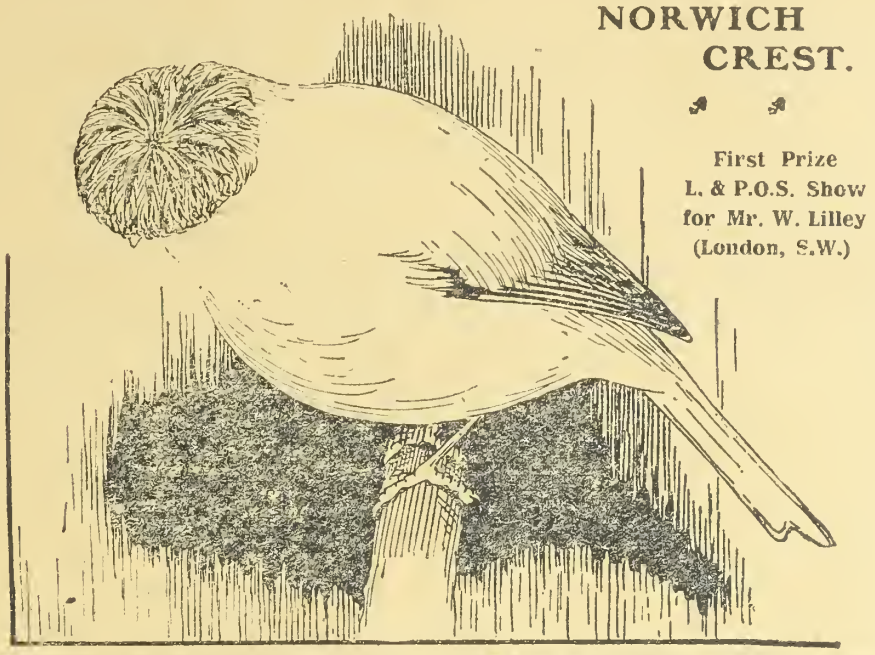
A Springtime Menu.

(3) Method of feeding. Egg and bread crumbs I prefer to any other mixture for the feeding. Boil your eggs (new laid, if possible, and I always use the very best procurable), say, for 15 minutes, let go cold, and then either chop very fine or press through a fine zinc sieve. The bread that you use should be at least two days old; more if possible. Run this through one of the mills advertised in CAGE BIRDS, or crumble fine between your hands. To one egg put about twice as much bread crumbs, with a little maw seed and soft sugar added. Rub well together. Administer this to your birds three times a day if convenient, as the oftener they are provided with fresh food the better they will feed. A little hemp seed you can give with advantage; in fact, I use a great amount during the summer months, and you will find your birds will feed on this equally as well, if not better, than they do with the egg food.

As regards green food, this I never use until the young birds have attained the age of three days; then I give little and often of the following, preferred in the order named: dandelion, watercress, and lettuce.

German summer rape, boiled for 15 minutes or so, then let go cold, and given once or twice a day in small quantities, is greatly relished, and partaken of with good results.

What to do with the Eggs.



(4) Removing eggs as they are laid. As each egg is laid, I take it from the nest (replacing the first egg with a dummy for the hen to sit upon) and place in a box partitioned into squares, each square numbered, so as to correspond to the number on my breeding cages. When the third egg has been deposited I return same on the evening the third was laid, and sit my hen, booking her to hatch 14 days hence. The reason that it is advisable to remove the eggs as they are laid is that they all hatch out together, and each youngster has an equal chance of getting fed by the parent birds, whereas if the eggs are left as they are laid they hatch out at different periods. The young ones vary in size, and the weaklings which come out of the shell last often go at once the way of all flesh.

Weaning the Young.

(5) Weaning youngsters. When the young ones attain the age of 28 days, or thereabouts, it is fairly safe to remove them from their parents. Place them in a large flight cage, so as to give them ample space to develop. Provide them with the usual egg food and a little crushed hemp for a few days, then give a little crushed canary seed amongst the crushed hemp. By degrees work them off this kind of food on to the whole canary seed.

Don't be in too big a hurry as regards getting them on to the hard seeds, as, if you do, bad results will crop up. Work slowly. Water I give from the very first when the young ones are placed on their own. Some fanciers don't give any water for a matter of six weeks or so, for fear of complications of bowel troubles, and so forth. In the water I mix a little Parrish's Chemical Food, just enough to make the water port wine colour; or I give a little of Allen and Hanbury's Byno Phosphates amongst the water. This method prevents the birds from contracting much harm should any of them partake of water rather too freely.

(6) It is perhaps hardly necessary for me to say that the usual method of pairing birds up is for one to be yellow and the other buff; and, for preference, one a clear and, the other ticked or marked.

The Black-headed Grosbeak.

A couple of years since I saw at a well-known London dealer's two large and handsome Grosbeaks, which interested me greatly. They were reported to be the Rose-breasted Grosbeak, but this was an obvious error. Not only did I fail to identify them, but they were so unlike that I concluded they belonged to different species. A year later, amongst a collection of skins made by a neighbour in California, I came across a specimen closely resembling one of the Grosbeaks. Quite recently at the same dealer's I noticed two Grosbeaks exactly resembling those seen two years ago, and have been at some pains to identify them. I find that they are the Black-headed Grosbeak (Hedymeles melanocephalus) of California, and are a true pair. The male is a remarkably handsome bird, and his size alone at once arrests the eye. He is quite as bulky as our English Hawfinch, but has a longer tail and is much better proportioned.

The following description is taken from a duplicate skin in my neighbour's collection, kindly given me. Head, chin, and sides of face deep black; nape rufous; wings lustrous black with broad white bar across primaries and conspicuous white margins to the primary coverts; rump bright buff; tail black, tipped with white; throat and breast deep orange-red; centre of breast and under parts of wings brightest yellow; length 7½ inches. The female is also a striking bird, but quite unlike the male. Her head and back are dark brown, mottled with some black; above the eye is a very distinctive, broad, white streak, and a light buff central stripe runs from the front to the back of the crown; breast pale yellowish; flanks lightly streaked with brown. I have since seen two more specimens, one of which resembled a female in every respect, except the brighter colour of the breast, and was presumably a young male; the other resembled an adult male, except in head markings, and was perhaps a male in its second season.

Some, at all events, of the American Grosbeaks do not acquire the adult plumage until the third season. For instance, a young male Blue Grosbeak (Guiraca cyanea), bred in my aviary in 1909, after its first moult, only showed two tiny blue feathers, and in its second season was only blue in patches.

This species winters in Mexico, from which country these particular specimens were imported. Another of the attractions of this fine bird is its melodious and powerful song, on account of which it is highly esteemed as a cage bird in its native land. My neighbour, who has taken its nest in California, tells me that it builds in swampy places. Despite its powerful beak, it seems a peaceable bird. It is also probably hardy, though this is by no means always the case with some of the larger Grosbeaks. Perhaps I may here venture a suggestion, which is that the Grosbeaks are frequently fed on much too heating a diet, such as hemp and sunflower seeds. I give them oats and live insect food, both of which the present species will eat with avidity.

The Rose-breasted Grosbeak.

There is another species closely related to, and sometimes confused with, the above. This is H. ludovicianus, which obtains its popular name from the rich rose colour of the breast. The head, throat, neck, and upper back are black, the rump white, the wings black with a white bar. The female is brown, streaked with dark brown and blackish, but we may note a resemblance to the female of the Black-headed Grosbeak in the yellow under wing coverts, and the three buff stripes on the head. This species is found in summer chiefly in the Eastern United States, wintering in Central America, Cuba, and Jamaica. Like the former, it is a fine songster and its clear fluting notes are heard not only in the daytime, but in the hush of the summer night, when the full moon shines brightly. As a general rule, when the male of any species is brightly coloured and the female a brown bird, the latter has to undertake the entire duties of incubation, but in this case we have an exception, for the male is quite as often seen on the nest as the female, and is much attached to the young.

The young are chiefly fed on live insect food, and the adults are also fond of the same diet, for which reason it is known to the farmers in Pennsylvania by the descriptive but inelegant title of the "potato-bug bird." It has been found to breed freely in captivity, and is altogether one of the most desirable birds that the aviculturist could possibly possess. If our dealers were only enterprising enough to import a few, which could easily be done, as it is a fairly plentiful species, and winters in an area not protected by legislation (except Jamaica), I predict they would sell like hot cakes.

Disaster to Indian Birds.

A consignment which should have been of the greatest interest to aviculturists has just reached this country. It originally contained many rare species in pairs, and some which had never been imported before. Unfortunately, after passing Gibraltar, the steamer encountered the full fury of the recent blizzard with disastrous consequences to the birds. The following species have, however, landed safely: 3 Purple-browed Rosefinches, 1 Red-mantled Rosefinch, 2 (unidentified) Rosefinches, 3 Streaked Laughing Thrushes, 2 Zosterops palpebrosa, 1 Blue-fronted Redstart, 3 Grey-headed Ouzels, 5 Orange-headed Ground Thrushes, 2 Giant Barbets, 3 Crested Black Tits, 1 hen Dhyal, 1 Shama, 1 Blue-cheeked Barbet, 1 Black Bulbul. The greater part of the above species were trapped in Northern India by the Army Officer who brought them home. The conditions are, of course, very trying. First there is the long railway journey to the port of embarkation; then the sweltering heat of the Red Sea (it is impossible to keep either mealworms or gentles very long in a high temperature); the Mediterranean is sometimes rough; then comes the Bay of Biscay and the English Channel, which are usually at this time of the year both stormy and very cold. To my mind, to give Indian birds a fair chance, they should be disembarked at Marseilles and brought thence overland.

USE OUR PICTURE POST-CARDS

OUR BADGE.

A reproduction of the design selected for the Membership Badge of "Cage Birds League."

It is with pleasure that we place before our readers the design of the badge of membership of Cage Birds League, the work of our versatile and popular artist, Mr. H. Norman. We feel that the simple and appropriate lines upon which this design has been worked out will command unqualified approval. The colour scheme is at once effective, rich and chaste, the wording "Cage Birds League" being in gold on a background of royal blue, while the figures of the birds are executed in natural colours upon a white background, with the triangle red. The effect, we venture to think, is distinctly pleasing.

The badges, it will be remembered, are sixpence each, and can be obtained in three forms: (1) To insert in the button-hole of the lapel of the coat; (2) To hang upon the watch-chain; and (3) in the form of a brooch. We shall hope to be in a position to supply them to members in a very short time now. The fee of membership to the League is 1s. The objects of "C.B.L." have been set out in recent issues, and we shall have more to say upon this point next week. In the meantime, the enrolment of members goes steadily on—several secretaries of societies have already notified us of batches of their members anxious to join and assist in carrying on the good work.

Sir,—I am pleased to see that Cage Birds League is taking on so much. I think that when it gets a full start it will do a lot of good, as it is quite time we had something of the kind to fall back upon. I enclose you 1s. 6d. for contribution and for badge when ready.—J. Fisher (Northampton).

Sir,—I will become a member of your League. I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS since it started. I have worked among birds ever since I was a boy, and in my time have kept most kinds of birds. I have no birds at the present time, not being very well in health; but I intend to go in for Crests when I get better. I wish "C.B." every success.—J. PARK (Shettleston).

THE LEAGUE BADGE.
Enlarged reproduction. The badge itself is the size of a shilling.

South African Approval.

Sir,—Allow me to congratulate you on your magnificent idea of the Cage Birds League, which I feel certain is supplying a long-felt want. It will no doubt be a great help to all bird lovers.—C. Chamberlain (Port Elizabeth).

A Certificate for Framing

SIR,—I see that Cage Birds League is highly praised by all bird lovers, and I would like to say a few words in favour of our League. If not too late, I would propose that all members who join the League have their names and the date of their joining the League written on a certificate, which no doubt could be got out in some design such as would represent Cage Birds League. This would not only make a first-class picture, but something we could keep in commemoration of the good work it represents. It would not cost much more, and I feel sure all our bird lovers as well as myself would gladly contribute to the above, and without the slightest hesitation be in favour of my proposal. I wish CAGE BIRDS and Cage Birds League great success and good luck.—F. W. Netherclift (West Ham).

One Good, One Wrong.

SIR,—I notice in your issue of April 1 a letter by Mr. Claude St. John, headed, "A Compromise." May I be permitted to state that I readily agree with his statements regarding Cage Birds League? I think the idea of having two grades is very good, while I think the idea of enrolling clubs en masse is wrong, as I expect the entrance fee would have to be paid out of the club funds, and a few of the members might object, and so cause strife in an otherwise peaceful gathering; whereas if everyone paid his own subscription there would be no drag on the club funds, which sometimes have quite enough taxes on them already. If preferred, the specials (as arranged) could be given for competition between members of C.B.L. only. I wish CAGE BIRDS and Cage Birds League every success.—CHAS. WATTS (Bow, London, E.).

CANARY QUERIES.

Foundling Chicks.

G. F. (Atterboro').—It is most likely that the hen was in the habit of flying off the nest, and in this way accidentally dragged out the young which would get entangled in her plumage or claws. You should raise the nest pan to the level of the perches or if a very little higher so much the better, as this will cause the hen to hop on the side of the nest before taking a fly to the perch, and thus allow any entangled youngster a chance to draw her attention to it, or to drop back into the nest. When the young are getting large and strong, if the hen has any difficulty in reaching to feed them you may then suspend the pan a little below the level of the perch from which she may want to feed them. After the young are hatched you should make a point of glancing over the floor of the cage each time you give fresh food to see if any youngster has been dragged out, and if so revive it in your hands until able to move about fairly well and then replace it in the nest. By the way, examine the hen's claws to see if they are overgrown, and if so, clip them to the proper length, but be careful not to make them bleed. You must not put the Goldie with the other hen until she has reared her young and is ready to begin nesting again. You should address a query to Mr. Weston on this point as it really belongs to his department.

Breeding Songsters.

Songster.—In breeding for a good ordinary type of songster it really matters little whether you go in for Seifert, St. Andreasberg, or Hartz. To a very great extent these terms are meaningless as far as the type of bird or its ability is concerned, and at best indicate the type of song the bird has acquired rather than any difference in the bird itself or its abilities to learn a good type of song if taken in hand for tuition at the proper time. It is therefore of no importance for your purpose whether you get Seifert or St. Andreasberg hens so long as they come of a really good singing strain. The birds usually sold as Hartz are simply such as have failed to acquire a really good type of song, or, perhaps, been through no proper course of training, and it would therefore scarcely be advisable to go that low down the scale when looking for the birds you want. For the Seifert cock you want a ticked or lightly marked yellow hen and if it is of a really good singing strain of bird it is of little moment what adjective is attached to it. The quality of the young will depend much more upon the nature and thoroughness of their tuition. They should not be allowed to hear any common singing birds from the time they are hatched. One or two really good singing Roller cocks will make their best companions, or failing that a Roller organ should be kept going at intervals for their benefit, until they are getting through the moult, when they must be caged up separately and kept under tuition constantly until they are in full song and the style of their performance has become fixed. If any particular difficulty occurs by the way, then I shall be glad to help you as far as possible on hearing of it.

A Trio.

Starlight.—(1) I take it you are certain the sexes of these birds are correct. Does the cock sing lustily when fighting, as you term it, the hen through the wire slide, and does he at other times feed her through the wires, she, on her part, popping down to him when he calls to her? If this is how things are going, then all you need do to "reconcile" them is to just draw the slide and let them go ahead, not interfering with their bickerings afterwards. If they do not act as described, give both a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea in the water for two days. Give a small teaspoonful of egg food every second day, and mix with a quarter teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure. On the alternate days, give the cock a half-teaspoonful of equal parts hemp, inga, and teazle, and the hen ditto of equal parts inga, linseed, and millet. Give the cock two or three leaves of dandelion daily, and the hen one small leaf—just enough to make her want the offerings of the cock. (2) Full details for working one cock with two hens were given a fortnight ago. The birds would probably do best in separate single breeders, or the two hens in each side of a double breeder, with the wires in slide blocked over, and the cock either run with each alternately each day, as you suggest, or allowed to put one hen to sit first, and then removed to the other. (3) Have never used the special food you name, so cannot speak from experience, but I have heard of others doing well with it. You should get the part of "Our Canaries" dealing with foods for young, and be guided by what you find there.

Making a Start.

Novice.—(1) As you have a fancy for Rollers and also only wish to commence by breeding songsters, you cannot do better than go in for Rollers. As songsters pure and simple they cannot be beat. (2) There is no indication of the length of your room from door to fireplace. If the cages would be not less than six feet from the fireplace the spot you have marked would do very well, otherwise on the opposite wall not too near the window would be better. This is the place I should favour in any case, although if no fires are kept in the room your choice would do very well irrespective of distance. (3) The size of aviary must depend solely upon your taste and inclinations. (4) Two pairs would do nicely for a start and not overburden you with attention to their needs. For economy's sake if you give home-made egg food it would be as well to say three pairs, as then one egg would just about feed them round two days, the one-half being preserved in the shell in a cold place covered with fine oatmeal to exclude air until the second day. (5) Answered separately. (6) You will find full instructions for feeding before and after mating in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," House's "Canary Manual," or "Our Canaries," any of which our Manager would send you. (7) Answered separately. (8) No, if you want the birds in pairs box-cages—a separate cage for each pair—are almost essential to success. Finally, instead of having an aviary as you suggest, I think you would do much better to get a nice little stack of cages fitting into a skeleton rack or on shelves, so that you could move any cage if necessary without disturbing the nest. Three tiers consisting of three single breeders on top, and two large flights below would suit your requirements very well.

Opinion on Seeds (R. T. B.).—No. 1, a very good sample of rape of the type favoured by high class German breeders. No. 2, an excellent all-round sample of hemp. No. 3, a very fine sample of Canary. All the above are of the best quality and eminently suitable for feeding the highest class of stock. No. 4 is also a good sample of Canary, very little inferior to No. 3 except in size, which is decidedly smaller. It would do quite well for feeding good birds but No. 3 is decidedly better.

Seed Sample and Bird Dying (R. M.).—The Canary is very small, but plump and bright. As the small sample you sent contained several undoubted mouse spoors, I did not investigate quality or flavour further. Get a sample less obviously contaminated, and if it is a larger seed also, so much the better. Cannot say whether this seed was the cause of the bird's death—only a post-mortem and analysis could decide such a question beyond doubt—but probably it was not, or some of your other birds must have suffered. It might have been due to a severe chill, consequent upon the prevailing weather at the time. See that the birds are not in the way of a cold draught, and that the attic is not subject to damp.

Canary Querists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "House's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Yorkshire Canaries," 1/-, post free.

In Part (Novice).—I am replying to what appear the most urgent portions, or first required, of your queries. The remainder will unavoidably have to stand over a week. No. 5.—If you get House's Canary Manual, 1/2, and "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., both post free from our Manager, and get the published parts of "Our Canaries," and the remainder as they appear you will be thoroughly well equipped in general knowledge to prevent you going wrong. No. 7. Yes, for all general purposes an aviary with wood back and sides is to be preferred. No. 10. Yes, provided it is kept scrupulously clean and fresh egg and bread food is decidedly to be preferred.

Hens Eating Eggs (First Clutch).—A vicious habit, in nearly every case, is the cause. You were, however, feeding the hen much too highly whilst sitting, and as this is her first clutch it is possible this may only be a temporary lapse. At any rate she is worth trying again. As an initial lesson, if she still has her nest, you might try the dodge of putting in a china egg, and also an ordinary Canary's egg from which the contents have been blown, and the shell filled with cayenne and mustard mixed to a soft cream with a little vinegar. Seal the blow-holes before putting it in nest, and let her investigate these as much as she likes. Give a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea in the water for two days. Continue your present feeding until the hen has gone to nest again, but when you set her next time drop off all the extra items of diet and limit her to the staple of Canary and rape only. Give a very little egg food on the twelfth day of incubation, and gradually go on to the daily supply necessary for the young if any are hatched.

Nervous Yorkshire (Dan).—It is very probable the birds are in an overfed condition. Treat them for a fortnight as advised to "Parc." Meantime, you must try to overcome the nervousness by gentle and judicious management. At present I suspect they are in a secluded place, where they rarely see or are seen by anyone, which would largely account for their obvious nervousness when anyone enters. Go about all your work methodically, and without flurry and bluster, frequently speaking or "tweeting" to the bird whose cage you are attending to, and twist the green stuff you give them in the wires at the end of a perch, "tweeting" to the birds meanwhile. Make a point of seeing the birds two or three times daily if possible, if only for a few moments each time, giving them a scrap of fresh green food or something—bathe, or fresh water, etc.—each time you go in. By these means, you must gradually win their confidence, and make them see that your visits are associated with some good to themselves. Kindly and judicious treatment and constant attention will do much to remove this nervousness, but medicines are useless. Keep them in a bright, well lit position.

Not Nesting (Curious).—Yes, there is the best of good reasons for the birds not going to nest in that you put them together much too early, and before they were ready for mating. Now, however, they appear to be coming in conditiou quite satisfactorily, so you had better leave them alone, and continue to exercise patience for yet a little while longer. In addition to the staple seed diet, give a small teaspoonful of egg food every second day with a quarter-teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure mixed in it, and on the alternate days a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and millet. Give two or three fresh crisp young leaves of dandelion daily. Your other queries, dealing with British birds, should have been on a separate sheet. See Mr. Weston's replies.

Not Feeding Young (Ireland's Eye).—There are so many causes which might lead up to this troublesome phenomenon that it is impossible to name any cause from a mere statement of the fact. The recent snap of cold weather might have been responsible. If the hen is a young one, it is quite probable she may have gained knowledge by experience with the late brood, and will do better with the next. If she has not laid her clutch of eggs when this appears, give 20 drops of chemical food in the water daily until she has done so, and give a spray of chickweed and a leaf (one only) of dandelion each day. If she has laid and commenced to sit, give the plain seed diet only, and during the last three days of incubation give a crystal of sulphate of soda, the size of a split pea, in the drinking water. When young are hatched, feed as advised in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. post free, from our Manager, or look up these replies in a few back issues. You would also do well to read the paper on "Sweating" hens, in Part VIII. of "Our Canaries."

Prolific Egg-Eating Hen (Urgent).—An overdose of chloroform—that's the best, and about the only rational, remedy for a hen that is so exasperating as to lay two eggs at a time, and at once set to and eat them. This excessive production in the first place may be due to over-feeding, and you would do well to give her two or three weeks' treatment, as advised to "Parc.," and let her have plenty of space for exercise, either in a flight or aviary. If her eggs are shelled and appear quite normal, it might be worth while mating her, or keeping her mated if this has already been done, and providing her with a specially prepared nest pan in which the eggs will roll out of her sight and reach as soon as laid, and you can then set them under a pair of foster parents, or distribute them among other hens with small clutches which happen to be just commencing to sit. The special nest pan you require is described and illustrated in Part VII. of "Our Canaries," which see.

Altered her Mind (P. D. R.).—The snap of cold only temporarily checked the nesting ardour of the hen, and by this time she is probably again under way with her domestic arrangements. If she is not, give six drops of syrup of buckthorn in the water for two days, and in addition to the usual seed diet, give a small teaspoonful of egg food (to the pair of birds) every second day, and for a week or so mince up three or four mealworms, and mix with it each time. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of two parts each hemp, inga, and millet, and one part each teazle, black rape, linseed, and gold of pleasure. Give three or four leaves of dandelion daily. A fortnight of this treatment should suffice, or less if the hen goes to nest within that time.

The intervention of the Easter Holidays makes it impossible for us to get all the Queries received answered in time for publication in this issue. They will be dealt with, however, next week.—EDITOR.

Very Wheezy (Novice, Aldershot).—I doubt whether any treatment will do this bird any permanent good. You must first of all remove the cause, which will be found in exposure to cold draughts; impure air, such as hanging near the ceiling or where the air is fouled by the fumes of burning lights in the evenings; or in extremes of heat and cold. See that all these causes are strictly avoided, and keep the bird in a comfortable, but not overheated, place, in a pure fresh atmosphere. Feed on a staple of three parts Canary to one part summer rape mixed together. Every second day for a fortnight give half-a-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it. On the alternate days give a quarter-teaspoonful of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure mixed together. Give a spray of chickweed daily. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence daily for three days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil well shaken together, two days in every three for a week, and every second day for the next week after. At the end of the fortnight suspend treatment for a week, and then repeat the above course again.

Egg-breaking (Novice, Leicester).—These mischievous propensities are frequently due to excess of lusty vigour, but it seems to have become a settled habit in this bird, and for this reason it will never be safe to trust him where eggs are get-at-able. It is certainly not due to his being too pure bred, as this vice is by no means a monopoly of the purest bred Norwich, or indeed any other breed. Fortunately it is the right sex you have to deal with, so in future when you expect the hen to lay, shut off the cock overnight with the wire slide, and remove the egg next morning before re-admitting him to the hen. On the evening of the day the third egg is laid shut him off permanently, or take him away to mate with another hen if you wish to do so, then you may give the first hen the three eggs back, and leave her to sit, hatch, and rear the young by herself. You must, of course, follow these tactics with each hen you mate him with, and when you do not wish to move him to another hen whilst one hen is sitting, cage him by himself for singing. You may, if you think fit, try him with an initial prepared egg, as mentioned in reply to "First Clutch," but as he will never be trustworthy, the above procedure is far the best.

No Energy (Parc.).—First of all, see that the cage is in no draught, but at same time keep it in a bright and airy place, free from great fluctuations of heat and cold, and not exposed to the fumes of burning lights in the evenings. Next examine cage carefully for the presence of red mites, and if any are found, thoroughly overhaul it, and eradicate them. For the next fortnight, give a staple diet of plain Canary only, and a small teaspoonful of summer rape twice each week. Give a spray of chickweed or two dandelion leaves daily. Limit diet strictly to this for a fortnight. Keep cage floor strewn with clean gritty sand. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. At the end of the fortnight put it on the ordinary diet for singing birds frequently given in this column.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Cockatoo in Poor Plumage.

Mrs. A. H. Y.—Give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia every fourth day in the drinking water, and on the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Continue this for one month and then report progress. Diet: Seed mixture—Two parts each Canary and White Millet seeds, and one part each maize, paddy rice, oats, hemp, and sunflower seeds—well mix and keep a supply in the cage; add a pinch of grit to the daily supply. Give a little boiled maize daily—boil till soft, drain off all water and then stir in a little flowers of sulphur. (Note.—This must be prepared fresh daily, as it soon turns sour.) It can have any of the following it cares for in reasonable quantities: Ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuits, plain cake, stale crust household bread, potato (without gravy), and lettuce. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Spray the bird weekly with quassia solution, choosing a sunny genial day for the purpose.

Parrot with Growth on Foot.

Mrs. E. J. G.—The bit of everything is not good for the bird. Confine its dietary to seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit. A pinch of grit (not sand) should be added to the daily supply of seed mixture, and a piece of clean cuttlebone kept hanging in the cage. A crust of stale household bread or piece of plain cake would come under the category of biscuit. Every fourth day, so long as the voidings are not watery, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking-water (one ounce), and on the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. So long as the surface (skin) of the swelling remains unbroken, foment with hot water, dry and paint with tincture of iodide daily. Should the skin break, you must stop the tincture at once and report nature of the sore. Let it take as much exercise as it chooses, as this will all help. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. If you have a vet. near you could show the bird to, it would be wise to do so, as probably the swelling could be taken away and rapid relief thus given.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

An Ailing Parrot.

M. B. W.—I can add but little to my former reply. These cases take time, and the recovery of many Parrots, when apparently in extremis is little short of marvellous. Use a little healing (zinc) ointment for the sore at the side of the beak—this will give the bird some relief. There is another alternative, viz., to hand the bird over to some vet. for a few weeks, so that it could have skilled treatment and almost continuous observation. A cure would be very probable under such conditions. I do not remember whether your bird gets boiled maize; if not, supply a little—boil till soft and then drain away all water—it must be prepared fresh daily, as it does not keep fresh. The lettuce is very wholesome and can be given in preference to any other green food. Do not give any more castor oil, but every fourth day give Dinneford's magnesia and water in equal parts, and on other days keep the drinking water well coloured with chemical food. If the bird will take it, a piece of stale crust or biscuit moistened in equal parts of chemical food and warm water will be a help.

Cockatoo in Bad Plumage.

W. Gerrett.—It is a very difficult case to deal with. By some means a bandage must be arranged over the sore, but it must first be fomented with tepid water, dabbed dry with a cloth, and then anointed with the ointment; after which it had better be left for a few days, and then the bandage removed and the operation repeated. I should give boiled maize daily—boil till soft, drain away all water, and then well dust with flowers of sulphur—it must be prepared fresh daily, as it soon turns sour. In addition, you must supply seed mixture, ripe fruit, plain biscuit, nuts, and a little boiled potato (dry); keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage, and add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, nor any kind of animal food whatever. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water (one ounce), and on the intermediate days give either citrate of iron or Parrish's Chemical Food in the drinking water. If you cannot manage the bandage you had better take the bird to your local vet., and get him to dress and bandage the wound—this would probably be the quicker method, and mean less suffering for the bird. Keep it quiet and out of draught, and tempt its appetite with anything it fancies, save tea, sops, etc. Bread or biscuit sopped in chemical food and water will be wholesome if it will take it. Report progress in a week or two please.

Green Singing Finch.

Serin.—In addition to the dietary you are supplying, give a millet spray as a change, renewing it as picked clean, also keep a slice of ripe apple between the bars of the cage, and supply a little lettuce or groundsel in lieu of the dandelion. Examine it for parasites, and if these are troubling the bird, scald out the cage, and get rid of them from the bird either by the quassia bath or pyrethrum powder. This bird is not a free breeder in a cage, but there is a prospect of its doing so. Fix up a Hartz travelling cage after removing the fitting and cutting away two of the bars for the birds to get in and out. This species crosses rather readily with the Grey Singing Finch, and also with the Canary, but not so readily as with the former. In either case, when there are young to be fed, you must supply a little of some good soft-food mixture daily, and green food ad lib. If you live near the country and can get live ants' eggs and other small insects success should be very probable. Give the bird a dose or two of Dinneford's magnesia—half teaspoonful to the ounce of water—with three days between the doses, and on the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. If the skin of the bare parts is hard, lightly anoint with clean vaseline, but do not use sufficient to run among the plumage.

An Ailing Grey Parrot.

S. J. W.—Get some Dinneford's Magnesia and mix a little with an equal quantity of tepid water, and let the bird have a few sips during one day, and after an interval of three days repeat the dose. On other days let it have a few sips two or three times a day of tepid water and Parrish's Chemical Food. Stir a little flowers of sulphur into the daily supply of boiled maize; the boiled maize should be prepared fresh daily as it soon turns sour. Keep a tin of Canary and white millet seed in the cage and supply such ripe fruit as you can induce it to take. A little plain biscuit moistened in chemical food and water is also very wholesome for a young bird. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage. The bird should be kept warm and out of draught. I consider the winds (no matter how warm the sun) too treacherous to subject a young bird to out of doors. If the bird is very weak, a few sips of very weak brandy and water may be given as a stimulant. Report progress in a fortnight.

Blue Tanagers, Quail, etc.

M. G. P.—(1) The Blue Tanager (Tanagra episcopus) is a native of South America. It can be put out of doors now as soon as the weather becomes settled. In the county of London I had this species out of doors all the year round for four years, and the birds are still alive. (2) These lovely little birds are often disappointing at first, but they ultimately settle down and become fairly confiding, but all Quails are fond of getting to cover. For the first year I always make a practice of keeping one wing cut of Painted Quails, and this is really good general practice with all species: after the moult it is generally safe to leave wings entire. (3) All Parrots, Parrakeets, etc., are destructive to shrubs, and Finches also to deciduous trees and shrubs, but the latter not usually so to fir, laurel, box, etc. There is only one species of Cockatiel, and this is quite harmless with small birds. (4) Yes, the Californian Quail I have found it, and heard of it as harmless with small birds, though a friend did have Finch fledlings just out of the nest destroyed by one. Everyone finds the Pekin a satisfactory bird.

Grey Parrot Weak (Mrs. A. H.).—Give this bird at once five drops of tasteless castor oil direct to the mouth, and if this does not act, repeat the dose in about 12 hours. Bathe its legs with hot-water (not hot enough to cause discomfort), dry, and then paint with neat whisky daily till relief is given. The bird must be kept warm, quiet, and out of draught. A supply of seed mixture should be kept in the cage, as the milk sop should not be continued any longer than can be helped. As soon as possible the diet should be confined to seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuits, with grit and cuttlebone. Well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food daily for the next month, but every fourth day, in lieu of the chemical food, put in one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia. Grit is best supplied by adding a pinch to the daily supply of seed mixture. Please report progress a fortnight hence.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. Weston.

Wart-like Growths (Sparrow).—I am sorry to hear of your trouble, and I am afraid I can do little to help you, for the case is one entirely outside my own experience. I expect the growths are the result of the presence of bacilli of some kind, and I should not be surprised to find that the trouble is of a contagious nature. Pity you did not send the body of the hen to our Mr. Yates for post-mortem examination. He, no doubt, could have elucidated the mystery. I should scrub the cage, perches, water-vessels, etc., with a strong disinfectant, such as "Izal," or Cook's "Cofectant" fluid), and keep the cock strictly isolated. A few drops of Condy's Fluid in the drinking water (sufficient to turn it the colour of light port wine), might relieve the mouth trouble of the cock bird. Give it fresh three or four times daily. I think you would be well advised to communicate with our Mr. Yates and get his opinion.

Bullfinch Weak (Fancier).—Your feeding is quite correct, but I should give the sunflower a little more liberally for a time; also try him with a little soft food (either egg-food or insectile food), and two or three small mealworms daily. Use a glass or earthenware water vessel and give a course of compound syrup of hypophosphates B.P. (Fellow's Syrup), half a teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of water. Give fresh daily for four days, then on alternate days over a period of a fortnight. This will "build up" your bird, give him an appetite, and enable him to throw off the weakness resulting from the accident. I have had great success in my own birdroom by the use of this syrup (ask your chemist to give you one ounce). It is not, of course, a "cure-all" (i.e., is no use for inflammation of the bowels and the like).

A Linnet "Gone Off" (Brown Linnet).—The position seems suitable enough as regards light, etc., but there should be no draught from the window falling on the cage. Birds often "go off" in seemingly unaccountable fashion just about this time of the year, and I am inclined to put it down in many cases to "pairing fever," that is, they get into too rank a breeding condition, the remedy for which is the provision of a wife. Try your bird with a course of the tonic recommended "Fancier" this week, and for the time being give him an unlimited supply of whatever he fancies in the seed line (whether hemp, niger, maw, etc.). If he doesn't eat he cannot, of course, last long. Some flowering chickweed, dandelion, and groundsel would be helpful.

A Linnet Matter (G. Quinton).—Your Linnets have gone into soft moult, as fanciers term it—that is, a moult out of season. Evidently you have been exposing them to variations of temperature—a fruitful cause of this trouble, and which needs to be guarded against in the case of birds kept in living rooms. I frequently hear of cases where the fire is dispensed with for a day or so (owing to some domestic reason), then resumed, and this kind of thing can spell disaster to birds kept in the said room, a fact which is not appreciated by many bird-keepers. It is also folly to take a bird out of a warmed room and hang him out of doors at the first hint of spring sunshine, and regardless of whether the wind be a bitter east or a balmy south. It is kindness of a very mistaken description. You can do little beyond keeping your birds comfortable until the soft moult is over. Every other day stir into their drinking water a teaspoonful of Parrish's chemical food (obtainable at all good class chemists).

LEGAL QUERIES.

Answered by "Barrister-at-Law."

J. H. M. Mitchell.—We cannot publish the details of your complaint for various reasons. Assuming all the facts to be as you state, then you have a clear right of action against the firm. You can sue them for the return of the money and for damages for failure to observe this agreement. You can also recover the amount of the carriage money paid by your wife. Should they send the amount claimed after plaint has been issued, they are liable for the costs incurred in issuing the plaint. If you employed a solicitor he could demand his costs from them. If the case is contested, and your solicitor won, you would get the usual order as to costs with the judgment. There are two kinds of costs: (1) party and party costs; (2) solicitor and client costs. The costs you are entitled to with the judgment are the former costs; but you are personally liable in any event for solicitor and client costs, which, however, in case like yours, would be comparatively small.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

W. Parr.—The cock Roller Canary had died of an infectious disease, a septicæmia, in which the causal organism exists in the blood stream; the spleen was very much enlarged, and the lung acutely inflamed. This disease bears no connection to septic fever, nor is it so fatal, but equal care should be used to prevent its spread by strict isolation of sick birds, and disinfection of cages, etc., occupied by the deceased.

M. C.—Cock Canary succumbed to broncho-pneumonia, originating in an attack of bronchitis. Keeping its beak open denoted bronchial trouble, with inability to inspire freely. It is a very fatal disease and one which seldom answers to treatment. The dieting was in every way correct, and would have no influence in the production of the disease.

Mr. John Jones. — The Canary was in a very emaciated condition, but at the same time there was no evidence of existing disease. Its death was brought about by exhaustion following pneumonia. I trust you may come to some amicable arrangement with vendor. I will, of course, enter more fully into the matter, but should require more detail than you have given me, as to length of time on rail, etc.

Blue Pigeon.—Pneumonia, following catarrh of the air passages, was responsible. The feathers would have reappeared with time, internal remedies would have been useless for this, local application of cocoanut oil, or an ointment of precipitated sulphur would have hastened their appearance. I have carried out your wishes with regard to the disposal of remains.

GENERAL.

Answered by The Editor.

An Apology (Festy Gibbins).—We cannot publish this apology until you send it with your full address attached, and witnessed by two other persons, giving their full addresses, too (not for publication, but so that we may satisfy ourselves as to the bona fide nature of the apology).

Cage for a Goldfinch (H. Smith).—We will deal with this matter by means of an article. It may interest others amongst our readers.

A Spring Perch (J. Freeman).—We are afraid this is not sufficiently novel for our "Illustrated Ideas" column. We have seen similar perches in the dealers' shops.

Catching (Mato).—You cannot legally catch birds in the suburbs (the near suburbs, that is) of London; they are protected all the year round. There is not such a thing as a "license" permitting bird-keeping.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

The Art of Painting and Preparing Cages.

Meeting, April 10th, at headquarters (60, Paddington Street), with Mr. A. W. Curtis in the chair. Letters were read from the Dean of Carlisle (expressing pleasure at the Association's continued prosperity) and Mr. S. Turner. Mr. C. Sadler was elected a member. The quarterly statement of accounts, showing cash balance of £21 11s. 1½d., was confirmed as read. The sale of the three last Cage Birds Annuals was effected, thus giving, as a result, a special prize of 5s. for the young bird show on July 1st (one extra copy sent). A discussion ensued as to the conditions under which the forthcoming "home-made cage" competition was to be judged. After giving various kinds, the appointed judge (A. W. Curtis) explained that full details would be sent out in the secretary's usual circular. A special vote of thanks was accorded Mr. W. Shepherd for so ably presiding at the last meeting, in the unavoidable absence of both the chairman and vice-chairman. The chairman then called upon Mr. H. Peverell to give his demonstration on the art of preparing and painting cages, etc.

In bewildering array, bottles, tubes, tins, brushes of all descriptions, and samples of painting on numerous pieces of prepared wood, were placed upon the table in front of Mr. Peverell, who said he would endeavour to instruct the members in the best and most economical way to prepare a cage for painting, making paint, and painting. The elementary principle to observe, as a preliminary, in the art of painting, was scrupulous cleanliness. The starting point, then, was to dissolve half a packet of Hudson's Extract of Soap in half a pail of water (not too hot) as the most effective means. In washing the cages in the solution there Mr. Peverell commenced washing operations upon an old show cage) an old half-used paint brush was the most effective for the purpose. Care should be taken to start at the bottom of the cage, and work upwards, otherwise it marked it. To obtain an even surface, and to break the face of the old paint, so that it may more readily adhere to the new, it is, he said, necessary to use a piece of pumice stone, being particular to see that both are kept constantly wet whilst undergoing the process. After rinsing in plenty of cold water, dry with a sponge, and finish with a chamois leather. Never use soda, as it takes off the paint. It is a good plan before painting breeding cages to use a little disinfectant in the water.

Making the Paint.

Having placed the cage on one side to get tho roughly dry, Mr. Peverell proceeded to make his paint. Taking a suitable-sized piece of white lead ground in oil, and placing it in a tin can and pouring in a small quantity of ordinary light oak varnish, he commenced to amalgamate it with the aid of a short length of 1-inch wood. Having reduced it to the consistency of a thick cream, he proceeded to strain it through a piece of lady's old silk stocking that had been previously wetted into another tin by rubbing it through with a fitch. Any piece of old cloth would, he said, answer the same purpose, providing it was not fluffy. The finer the texture the better would be the body of paint, and the easier would it pass through when wetted. The correct article is a strainer, but as fanciers only use paint about twice a year, that was unnecessary. To obtain the Hedgesparrow egg tint, Mr. Peverell squeezed from three tubes (Windsor and Newton's, 3d. each) a small quantity of Prussian blue, Emerald green, and raw Sienna on to a pallet board, mixing it together by the aid of a palate knife, and when sufficiently blended, turned it into the white paint already mixed, thus producing the desired colour for the inside of the cage. Here Mr. Peverell paused to say how useful it was to buy tubes of colours, for whatever shade of colour that was squeezed it was all ready to hand at a moment's notice, without the least trouble, and they could be kept indefinitely.

However good your paint, it would be useless if proper brushes were not used. For instance, it would be utter folly to start painting with a new brush, for it would result in streaky coarse marks, and leave a percentage of the hairs from the brush adhering to the painted surface. The best brushes to use were the ordinary Sash Foot, which are obtainable in various sizes at prices ranging from 6d. each. Before using a new brush, it is essential to bind it half way up with string, fastening the ends up with a small tack on either side. This prevents the hairs spreading whilst painting, and as it wears down a layer or two is gradually undone (here Mr. Peverell demonstrated with a brush, which to be thoroughly understood must be seen). After showing and explaining the use of fitches, varnishing and dusting brushes, etc., Mr. Peverell painted the show cage already prepared.

Painting Precautions.

The first caution was never to dip the brush in the paint without afterwards patting it against the sides of the can to remove all surplus, so as to prevent the paint dropping about. The correct mode of painting the show cage was to begin at the bottom and top, then both sides, and lastly the back. The brush should be wielded up and down, then cross-ways, and then once more up and down finishing with lighter and slower strokes, leaving the cage lying on its back for 30 minutes, when it would settle beautifully even, and without the trace of a brush mark. For the outside of the cage, the best and most economical was twopennyworth of vegetable black (enough for 20 cages), mixed with equal parts of japanner's gold size, turpentine, and ordinary oak varnish. This in itself will not produce the deep black tone so much required, so it is necessary to give it a second coat of ordinary Black Japan which then gives it a depth of colour and surface of unsurpassable soundness.

In painting roughly made cages or boards equal parts of common whiteuing and white lead should be mixed together with japanner's gold size to the consistency of a paste, but if too stiff to use, ease it with a little turpentine. This should be laid on with a broad knife (price 6d.), drawing it both ways to get an even surface. This will dry hard in the course of three or four hours.

In painting new cages the knots must first be "killed" by brushing them over with a liquid called "patent knotting." After this the first coat or priming should consist of raw linseed oil, and white lead. The next coat, equal parts of white lead, varnish, and turpentine, and lastly white lead and varnish with the desired tint added. To produce a glossy surface upon the finished work, it is necessary, after each coat has been well dried (two days interval if possible), to rub it down with pumice powder, using a 4-inch by 2-inch piece of felt, keeping both felt and paintwork constantly wet, otherwise it will raise the colour.

The following were answers given to various questions asked by the members: Mr. Peverell was a strong advocate of French oil varnish and white lead against all enamels. He did not care for drop black, as it was not a good dryer, and was very treacherous to use. For stopping holes, crevices, etc., the best thing was white lead, mixed with whitening. A white ground was preferable, as it gave a better colour to the finished work. French polish is useless over varnish, as it has no lasting properties. In putting on a finishing varnish the best results are obtainable whilst in a temperature of over 90 degrees. Brushes will keep in water when not in use, also in linseed oil, but the best way is to rinse them in paraffin, and afterwards wash them in soap and hot water, and they then keep indefinitely. Varnish brushes should always be kept in linseed oil. After glass-papering a surface, the dust should be removed by a brush called a duster. Patent dryers, and terebine he considered useless. To preserve the bloom on the paint, the surface must first be rinsed in cold water before washing and the washing water should not be hot. He was not aware of what enamel was composed of. He would not recommend zinc ground in turps in preference to white lead, as it is of a greyish appearance.

Various other questions were also asked, and in conclusion a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Peverell for his interesting demonstration, and for the masterly answering of questions put to him. A vote of thanks to the chairman closed the meeting.—Victor Wynn, Hon. Sec.

The Keeping of Blackbirds.

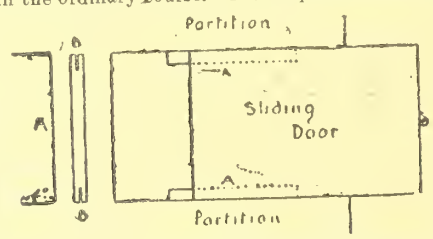
SIR,—Seeing in CAGE BIRDS of April 8 an article by Mr. Ford on the feeding of Thrushes and Blackbirds (which I read with interest), I should like to ask Mr. Ford if he can give me any information on how to keep the tail feathers from getting broken, as my Blackbird always breaks his. I think that Mr. Ford's Blackbird "Jimmy Driscoll" looks splendid on CAGE BIRDS frontispiece. Perhaps Mr. Ford can also give me a wrinkle on how to arrange my cages when I am cleaning the birds out; or any other little information. I look forward every Friday to CAGE BIRDS with great pleasure.

A. HOPKINSON.

A Trio of Popular Birds.

Sir,—The Linnet is greatly outclassed by the Goldie for plumage, but it is not the quality of plumage that makes his possession so desirable; it is his fine song and docile disposition that bring him in such request, perhaps more so than the brilliant Goldfinch. The tender attachment to which these birds are so susceptible is astonishing. The bird has apparently a very flexible throat, as he will easily pick up and unite with his own strain the song of other birds; but they should be taken from the nest for this purpose, as other birds do not pick up foreign strains so readily. The Linnet lives a long time in captivity if taken care of, and he has the advantage over other birds of singing all the year round. The nest is usually found in some low bush or furze, nicely interwoven with grass and wool, and lined with hair and feathers. He readily mates with the Canary, as they greatly resemble each other in their habits and nature. Fine Mules for song are the result. To keep him in good health, feed him on teazle, dandelion, and thistle. The Siskin is a bird of passage, and is found in great numbers in the southern provinces of Russia. He is more common in Scotland than in England. He will easily mate with the Canary. The song of the Siskin is not disagreeable, but greatly inferior to that of the Goldie and Linnet. The Bullfinch is a bird in much demand. His charming plumage and noble appearance make him a great favourite. He has no song. He pipes about three notes; but he can be readily taught to pipe tunes, even so far as to excel his master. As a hybrid breeder, he is valuable.

JOHN BLESSINGTON.



Birds Seen and Heard During an Easter Ramble.

Sir,—The wife and I are resting on one of the prettiest and best-wooded commons in Surrey. We are listening to the birds singing around us. I am also wondering if an account of the birds seen during our Easter holiday would be deemed of sufficient interest by the editor of "C.B." for publication in our paper. I mention this to the wife. She says: "Try; you never know. I am sure you can write as well as some." Her faith in me is great, I will admit; still, I'll try. I will start at the beginning, viz., Good Friday morning. We left home on the tandem at 8 a.m.; weather grand. The first birds seen were, of course, Sparrows, with nothing else for the next five miles. The next we saw, to my surprise, was a Great Tit, quickly followed by Thrushes, Blackbirds, Chaffinches, and Crows. We only saw two Greenics and a Lark in addition to these for the following twenty miles. The most common birds, next to Sparrows, were the Chaffinches. By the way, what a difference there is between the country Sparrows and their London cousins! One would hardly know them at first sight, their markings, bib, etc., showing up in a way never or rarely seen on the town-bred birds. All birds to a bird-lover are handsome, but I have often stood and admired an old cock Sparrow and thought, "Well, you are handsomer than some of our other Britishers, which are more kept and more thought about." How would a class for Sparrows at one of our big shows take on? If it did, I am sure many would be surprised at the beauty of the pick of them. They are hard to steady, I know, but so are some other birds. But I digress. We arrived at our journey's end in fine form after an enjoyable ride, made more so by our interest in the birds we noticed. It is surprising how much shorter the hills seem when you are thinking of something else. A call on relatives and meeting two friends made the time pass quickly, and we soon found it dinner-time. After dinner off we went to the woods, and nearly the first bird we saw was a Pied Wagtail, which was quickly off on seeing us. Robins and Hedge Sparrows came next, with Thrushes singing all around. The Nightingale is said to be our best songster, but a Thrush is not far off, particularly so before he is quite singing his loudest. Anyway, the Thrush I am referring to now is good enough for me anywhere. Robins, Chaffinches, and Hedge Sparrows were also singing strongly, and a Blackbird made off with his well-known screech, as if of fear that we had come to look for his mate's nest; but not a nest could be seen anywhere. Once into the middle of the wood all is silent, except for the double call-note of the Great Tit and of the Tom Tit. At other times I have seen many other kinds of birds in this wood, but of these I will tell more perhaps at another time. Suddenly we hear a harsh note, and a bird dashes by. It is a Jay rushing through the wood. We stop in the wood for a couple of hours, and then off we go to tea. Looking for birds is nice, but you get hungry nevertheless. After tea a walk over the common, a visit to a fancier, and a look over his birds passed the time away. The only other species of bird heard was a Yellow Hammer in full song. Next day we were off for a long walk through the valley and up the hill. A Peacock was calling loudly when we left (this was, of course, not flying loose, but in a gentleman's garden). We also stood and admired the Geese and the young ones on the common—four Geese with 39 young Goslings. How would this suit our Canary breeders? Here we saw the same kind of birds mentioned before, including another Wagtail or two, and a few Wood Pigeons. After a stiff climb to the highest point in Surrey, and after staying to admire the scenery, we returned home to a late dinner and early tea, after which we follow the usual custom of Saturday nights—go up town and admire the shops, just as if we had never seen any before, and were not born and bred in the town of the biggest number of shops in the world. On our way a very large flock of birds passed high overhead, travelling at a great pace in the shape of a wedge from west to east. Possibly they were Starlings, but they were much too high up to see. Next day (Sunday) off we went for another long ramble. This time we found the first nest, it being a Thrush's containing two eggs. A little further on we found a Hedge Sparrow's and Blackbird's nests all ready for eggs; and within a few yards we espied several more nests freshly made, besides many of last season's. Our next find was a grand Blue-headed Duck with two drab-coloured hens. And what a colour was the old drake's head and the gloss on the feathers! Oh! if I could only get that gloss on my British birds. Farther on we came to about a dozen Guinea Fowls with their peculiar call, "Come back, come back," the two cocks being easily picked out from the hens. We came next to a spot which was a veritable Paradise for birds. We saw here all the birds I have mentioned above and others. Several Black-headed Tits were there, and many Yellow Hammers, Greenies, etc., and two or three Linnets. One old cock Yellow Hammer looked grand, as he sat on the top of a bush singing his well-known song. Doubtless the reason for this fine collection of birds was the nearness of many fowls which had to be fed, and also a wired-in place for young Pheasants. Two or three very fine Turkeys were strutting about. We were loth to leave this place, but time pressed and dinner-time approached. Afternoon and evening we passed sitting and reading on the common. Next day (Monday) we went off to the meet of the Drag Hounds, this proving of great interest. After dinner we sat on the common, where I write this, resting before our ride home, after one of the most enjoyable Easter holidays I can remember.

Sliding Door for Partition of a Breeding Cage.

Sir,—Below will be found an idea which I claim to be original. It is only intended for those who have double breeders having too narrow an entrance to allow of a sliding door in the ordinary course. Cut a square out of the wood partition and in the top and bottom of it (the door) cut two saw marks "B" about ¼in. deep. Then bend two wires, as at "A," so that they can be knocked into the wood; cut them about ¼in. from each end. Thus the door will fit on the wires. We shall then have a sliding door which requires no unsightly slides, which offer a home for red mite.

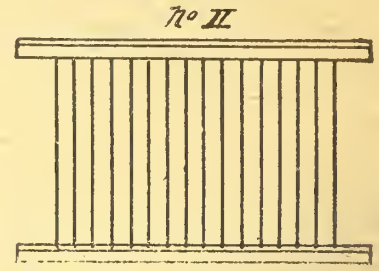
F. MITCHELL.



Norwich Plainhead C.C. of Ireland.

Sir,—If your correspondent "Ligoniel" will refer to the 1st of April issue of CAGE BIRDS he will get an answer to his question No. 1. As regards question No. 2, eight members paid their annual subscriptions. No. 3, three societies applied for the club's patronage—Banbridge, Larne, and U.O.A., Belfast. On the committee of the U.O.A. being informed of the position of the club, it was then unanimously agreed that no patronage of any other club would be asked or accepted for that show.

A Hint for Bird-catchers.

How to make a secret call cage.

Sir,—This cage will be found useful for bird-catchers, who do not wish to be seen carrying cages. Simply make five doors, the same as in sketch 2. Bore a hole in each end, and a knitting-needle run through from top into ground. The cage can be built in a few seconds.

The Training of Chaffinches.

Sir,—Would any reader of CAGE BIRDS or our good friend Mr. A. Woodruff kindly say how to train Chaffinches to sing covered up? I have one or two good birds, but they will not sing in the black handkerchief. Is there any particular food they should have?

The Lancashires and Lizards of To-day and Yesterday.

Sir,—I see in CAGE BIRDS that Mr. Fuller says my day is past. I can't help that, Mr. Fuller; I have had a good day, and shall try again. In your last letter you say you object to my getting Mr. Donnelly to write letters to your friend. I have never done that; I can write my own letters, and no letters have been sent with my consent. You say I said after the meeting I would get someone to warm or show you up. I have never said so, and your informant has told you an untruth. I did not stop after the meeting. I know who your informant is, and could show something up if I wanted to. I don't need to defend Mr. Donnelly, as I think he can hold his own.

JOHN DEWSNAP.

A Strenuous Fortnight.

Amazing Recovery of a Hen Canary.

SIR,—I find the experiences of others so interesting, that I am writing mine, if you consider them worth a little space. On February 9 I was full of excitement to welcome two new hens for mule and hybrid breeding. Spotless cages, seed, and baths were all ready, and at 11 a.m. I cut the string and opened the box. A beautiful colour-fed Norwich was soon eating bread and milk and enjoying a bath; but the poor little Bullie hen could not extricate herself from the case, and was apparently dying. I laid her on the cage floor and wetted her bill with warm milk. For two days she was fed every hour from dawn to bedtime. Her extreme tameness saved her life. A slice of apple was the first thing she could be bothered to eat herself. I called her "Cupid," because it pierced my heart to look at her. But no one would have it, so now with her extreme docility "Gretchen" is enquired for. In spite of being told by the dealer, "return when better," postal order went instead; for who could be so cruel as to send the poor mite another journey? Assuredly it would be her last! But where are my hybrids coming from? The Norwich, a real "orange girl" (quickly named Nell Gwynne, after the famous actress who started life selling oranges), was the admiration of all beholders. Content and blooming, she was my hope. A keen cold morning I placed her in the sun, as usual, in a large double cage, one end in shadow, to find her an hour later apparently in a fit. Could it be a sunstroke? Seizure after seizure for four intermediate days. I sat on the floor and put her feet in warm water and held cold swobs of cotton wool on her head for many half-hours. Sometimes her left leg twitched, sometimes she turned her dear face to the wall and tap, tap, tapped involuntarily, hour after hour. No sign of sleep or rest at all. One compartment I lined with flannel as her paralysed feet could not hold the perch. If the worst was over, and she ate a meal, an attack quickly followed. At first I was hopeful when she ate, but soon found it made her worse, and I only allowed her 3 or 4 pecks at rusk and milk at a time. From Monday until Thursday in this desperate plight spoilt her fine feathers. In spite of fresh sand twice a day, she was such a deplorable hopeless object. Her left eye had fallen in (this does not sound true), and her leg lay along the ground. I went out and got a bottle of chloroform, also one of nut vomica, "a powerful nerve tonic." Half a drop is an infant's dose, but "Nell Gwynne" got two in her water pot, and every hour a peck at rusk and milk, 6 hird seeds, and about a dozen of maw a day. Only dry arrowroot biscuit was left before her, which, though blind and shaking, she worked away at, getting very little off. I had made up my mind the next bad attack in mercy to use the chloroform. From Thursday to Saturday the symptoms were in abeyance. Ringing the dentist's bell had cured the toothache! Ten days later her illness had left no trace. "Nell Gwynne" bathes and flies with the best; her lovely plumage is once more our pride and glory. I hope her quite human comprehension that I meant well by her will continue, and that, the best of friends, we may together rear children who will make a name for themselves in the bird world. The twitching leg, the tapping bill, and that dreadful eye, could only be credited by those who saw them.

SUNDERLAND.

Redpolls and Goldfinches and their Hybrids.

Sir,—Without any effort on our part we are into spring, the period of activity and rejoicing in every direction. And nowhere is there greater activity or more rejoicing than among British birds. The woods resound with their sweet melody, and all around we see evidence of new life. No one can listen to the morning and evening songs of our familiar friends without being inspired. Many a weary wanderer has rejoiced at hearing even a tiny woodland Warbler. Fanciers are more immediately concerned with the British birds they have in their own homes. Were reliable figures available, it would be quite a revelation to know the number of feathered friends that pass annually from natural freedom to a state of captivity. There is an impression abroad that it is inhuman to keep birds that love freedom, and naturally are ever on the wing, confined in a cage. But those who argue in that way are not acquainted with the way in which the birds are cared for. Fanciers are, as a rule, the most considerate; indeed, their first concern seems to be regarding their feathered pets. I have known men—and your readers know them—who pay a visit to the bird-room the first thing in the morning and the last thing at night, not to mention making it the first journey at dinner and tea times, to ascertain if the birds are right, and to supply their wants. The Redpoll is frequently the first bird to find its way into the home. It may be on account of his modest cost, but often it is because of his attractiveness. Lively and nimble, he is all alert. He seldom rests when in health during the daytime; he is ever on the move, jumping from perch to perch, and from wire to wire. Once an inmate, he usually comes to stay. He seldom loses his good name unless he gets out of the cage; in which case it is most difficult to get hold of him; and then he tries the temper of the best-tempered. But once back into the cage the trouble is soon forgotten, and he returns to his former position in the affection of the owner. He can be bred with the Canary, the Goldfinch, the Bullfinch, etc. A hybrid from the last-named is difficult to obtain, but one between a Redpoll and a Bullfinch is valuable, and a male has been known to fetch twenty to thirty pounds. He mates freely with the Canary, but it is an ordinary mule, and has to compete with the Goldfinch-Canary. The Goldfinch-Redpoll hybrid is really a charming hybrid. It resembles both parents. He is worthy of better treatment than what he gets usually at our British cage bird exhibitions. With the development of exhibitions there may be provided a class for each distinct hybrid, which would be a strong encouragement to produce hybrids. The Goldfinch is the most beautiful of the Finch tribe, and is a general favourite in the aviary. The British Goldfinch is small and tight in build and feather. In a prime condition he is of splendid plumage—a deep, rich blaze, well tanned and nicely mooned, with bright yellow bars. He is quite at home in captivity. The Siberian Goldfinch is larger, and carries the same plumage on a larger scale. He is generally reckoned to be not quite so hardy, but this is as much a question of opinion as anything else. The British and Siberian Goldfinches are used extensively for producing mules and hybrids. The Goldie is commonly put up with the hen Canary. The progeny is unequalled as regards whistling. As a long liver he is unsurpassed. He is a suitable husband for the Bullfinch hen, and the progeny is a successful winner on the show bench. The hybrid by him requires to be colour-fed, so as to bring out to the full the rich plumage. The Goldie can be used with other hen Finches with excellent results.

The Proposed Union for Lancashire and Cheshire.

Sir,—With reference to the above, I should be glad if secretaries of societies in Lancashire and Cheshire would let me know as early as possible what is their society's decision re the above.

An Egg Food Problem.

Sir,—I have several pairs of birds flying loose in a room. Could any of your readers advise me how to avoid the egg food intended for the young being eaten by the other birds not nesting?

Madam.

The Springburn, Possil Park, and District C.C.

Sir,—Referring to the letter of Mr. McLeod in Cage Birds of April 11, re the above-named club calling a meeting at the Reid Hall, Queenshill Street, Springburn, I may say that this advertisement caught the eye of a good number of fanciers in the district, and they turned up at the hall and held the first meeting. I was elected secretary. Mr. Twamley (Springburn), as treasurer, proposed that we hold another meeting at the same place on April 26, at 8 p.m., to enable other fanciers to come and join the new club. If they cannot attend, will they drop me a postcard?

John Waugh, Secretary.

Is it a Record in Canary Breeding?

Sir,—Perhaps the following will be of some interest to fanciers. On March 25 I put together a last year's cock Canary and a two-year-old hen. On March 29 she laid her first egg. She laid five eggs altogether. On April 14 she hatched four young ones, out of the five eggs, and all are doing well at present. Will some fanciers please say whether this is a record or not—a total of twenty days from the time of putting them together to hatching the young birds out? I have paired the same cock to another hen since, and she is now sitting on four eggs. This is my second attempt. I tried last year without success. I wish all a successful breeding season.

The Handrearing of Blackbirds.

A Reader Relates His Method.

Sir,—The Blackbird makes, in my humble opinion, a better cage bird than the Thrush; not that it sings any better, but it looks better in a cage, and is generally fancied more. Still, both are very desirable pets if you have the room for them; and they can be kept for years if properly fed and looked after. These birds do well out of doors, but should never be placed in a draught or hung in the blazing sunshine without some kind of shade over them. Some fanciers I know much prefer an old Blackbird—one that is caught after its moult, and subsequently tamed down to cage life. But as a rule an old bird does take some taming before you can steady it. Some will tell you (and they may be right) that the song of Blackbirds is more natural if the birds are adult caught. That is, of course, quite feasible, but you often have to get several, even then, before you can get a good one to sing. Some birds I have had which had been caught never did sing well in a cage, whilst others would do so quite readily after only a few days' confinement. Some would refuse food no matter what one offered them, whilst others were just the opposite, and would take anything. The great thing is to have a bird tame; and the best way to tame one is to bring it up from the nest by hand-rearing. Remember that if you can get the early nests, three out of four, or four out of five, from these nests will generally be cocks; in fact, I have had from these early nests all cocks. And this is a great advantage. The young from the late nests are nearly always hens. This I have found out from experience and careful observation, as I have always been a great lover of the nesting habits of birds, watching them and their ways, both with the naked eye and through glasses. These birds I have brought up on a bread and milk diet, with crushed hemp seed; but this feed I have long since given up. I like best: barley meal, hard boiled egg, and crushed puppy biscuit, with a teaspoonful of soaked ants' eggs. I find that the birds will do well on this, and will thrive rapidly. I don't much care for the scraped raw meat for them; but if they should look a bit "dicky," I might give them a little to strengthen them. I never think of giving these birds either earth worms or meal worms when hand-rearing them. I generally find that they are more delicate than the Thrushes, but when you get them well established there is not much between them, for both will live for years if well looked after. After they are able to feed themselves and are well on whatever mixture you select (any good mixture can now be got), they should be caged singly, as they will do much better thus, and hung out of doors, so that they can hear the old ones singing. These birds are very fond of bathing, and should have a bathe daily, the bath to be hung on the door if possible to keep the cage dry; and it should be cleaned out daily, or the birds will soon get their feathers messed up, and then is the time they begin to droop. Very fine sand answers the purpose of floor-covering very well; I prefer this to sawdust, as the birds can pick up the grit, which is quite essential for them under cage treatment. Another thing worth considering is, Blackbirds should always be moulted out of doors. I know that some fanciers have not the convenience for doing so, but every effort should be made to do so if possible, for the birds not only come through the moult quicker, but better. Great care, of course, must be taken to see that they are not placed in a draught. The young birds at their first moult will not attain to their best plumage, but in the second, and particularly the third years, the best results will be obtained. These birds can be taught to pipe short tunes quite readily if one happens to be able to whistle; this whistling would have to be repeated daily when you go to feed them. A pair of these birds would breed quite readily in a large aviary, or they might be tried as a cross with the Thrush. Anyway, they make nice aviary birds. That is, if you have a large-sized outdoor aviary. On one occasion I kept a cock Blackbird and a cock Thrush in a large home-made cage at the end of my house. My ideas were: how well they would look, and how they would sing one against the other, both of them being very tame with me, I having hand-reared them. Although they were tame enough with me, they had not been together long before they were not by any means tame with each other; the battles they must have had before I noticed them! For the cage bottom was covered with feathers, and one bird was badly injured about the eyes. That lesson taught me never to put two cocks together in a cage, if it were a large one. There are now, and have been for some time, freak specimens of this bird and the Thrush, but it is very rarely you can get the chance of finding a nest with them in. I have never been so fortunate, although several birds with white plumage have been seen about here (in Ramsay). One bird was found dead recently that had a pure white tail and white in its wings—"cause of death not known"; but plenty of feathers were found near it, as if it had been in some battle.

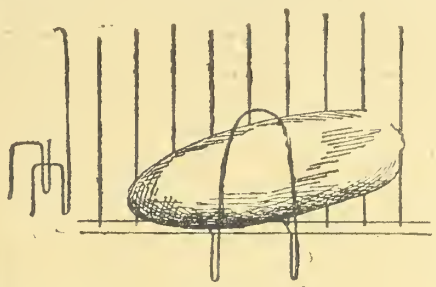
Missel Thrushes versus the Jackdaws.

A Tragedy of Bird Life.



Sir,—Doubtless all parent birds do all they can to protect their newly-hatched young ones from harm, but no British bird that I am aware of is more determined and aggressive than the Missel Thrush. The following instance came under my notice last year:—A pair of Missel Thrushes had a nest of young in a sycamore among the clump of trees on the south front of Cheltenham College; one morning a young bird, nearly full-fledged but unable to fly, had fallen from the nest; intending to try and return it, I picked up the little waif, when instantly, with a scream of rage, one of the old birds flew in my face with a force that could scarcely be credited. I felt the effects of the blow for hours afterwards. However, I placed the little bird behind a wire screen under the building, where the old birds could gain access to it, and had scarcely done so when a marauding Jackdaw from the elms opposite came on the scene. Now this Jackdaw and its vicious mate were very much in the black list; a pair of Blue Tits had reared a family in a cavity under a stone step of the building, and one lovely morning had brought out the little fluff balls, like bumble bees, to introduce them to the outside world, and with endless fuss and twittering were leading the little mites about the lawn; when, with a raucous caw, down came one of these Jackdaws and snapped up a poor little Tit. Catching it by the head, he struck it heavily on the ground and swallowed it in a moment, and though several willing hands besides my own tried hard to save them, in a few minutes the pair of Jackdaws had accounted for all the family of youngsters, and the poor little pair of Tits were left wild with grief and excitement. As soon as the black brigand had noticed the little Thrush, he perched on the parapet straight above it. But before his plan of attack could mature, with a rush and a shriek, one of the old birds stooped at him like a Falcon. Not even the "Tar Baby" himself, or any boxer who ever donned mittens, made a swifter "duck" than did the Jackdaw, and the Thrush passed over it; but no sooner had he stood up again than the second Thrush struck him like a bolt, and knocked him into the space between the parapet and roof. After a few minutes, during which the birds returned to their nest, the Jackdaw crawled out of its hiding place and started to fly away; instantly the Missel Thrushes attacked it furiously, almost bringing it to the ground, so that it was with difficulty the discomfited bird flew off through the cedars in Thirlestaine House gardens, and I lost sight of them all. But the end was not yet. Several days after, when crossing the cricket field, just at the spot where annually the county wickets are pitched, and where Mr. Jessop either delights or disappoints the crowd, I walked so close to a Jackdaw, without its flying away, that I picked it up to find the reason. Wasted, till it seemed only a bunch of feathers, and blinded frightfully, the poor bird was a pitiful sight; its eyes had been pecked till there was a ring of raw flesh round them, oozing with matter. It was so close to the scene of battle I witnessed that I have no doubt it was the same bird the Thrushes had attacked, and it was trying to find its way home. I bathed its sightless eyes, but it refused all food, and died the same evening. The remaining Jackdaw departed from the elm, and our small birds were left for a time in peace.

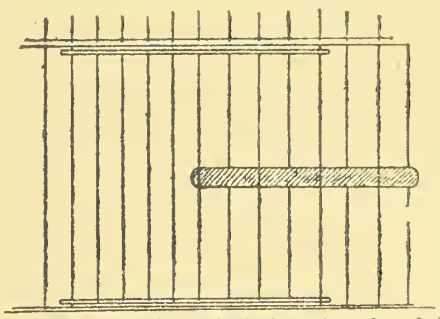
Illustrated Ideas

No. 500.
A Cuttlefish, etc., Holder.
Sent by Mr. W. Hibbert, 52, Edenson Street, Beswick, Manchester.



I send you a sketch of a holder for cuttlefish, green food, or anything to be given to the birds. It is made out of cage wire and fits on the cage front. The idea is my own. I have taken Cage Birds the best paper for bird fanciers) now for a few years, and I have not seen it illustrated. It is easy to make, and is very handy. I think the sketch will explain itself.—W. Hibbert.

No. 501.
A Useful Spring Door.
Sent by Mr. V. J. Diss, 147, Bergholt Road, Colchester.

I send you a sketch of a spring door I use on my cages, one which I find very useful, as no fastener is required. This is a very simple hold-fast—simply a piece of clock spring threaded under and over the wires about four inches long. It costs almost nothing. The spring must not be fixed in any way.—V. J. Diss.

Plentiful Pigeons.

Woodpigeons appear to be more plentiful than ever this winter, and "country shoots" have been arranged in many districts. The landowners in Essex have been compelled to organise a raid upon the birds in pure self defence.

A Sea Parrot.

A queer-looking bird is the Puffin, sometimes called the Sea Parrot on account of its Parrot-like beak. This bird breeds on the Farnes and St Kilda, arriving in the early part of April. It nests in holes dug in the peaty soil, and lays one white egg. The young ones are fluffy-looking objects—mere balls of black down.

London Sparrows' Enemy.

The domestic cat is practically the sole enemy of the London Sparrow, and the total consumption of the young birds by cats must equal, if not exceed, the slaughter of grouse in Scotland during the month of August. London Sparrows prefer to nest in the ivy and other creepers, and the young are easily secured by the watchful enemy.

Canary Breeding for Beginners
By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.
Post Free 7d.
A practical, up-to-date guide to Canary Breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby.
Contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing, and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, etc.
All the details of bird-breeding explained, while it shows the way out of all difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

In the Courts.

HILARIOUS HOUR AT SHEFFIELD.

On April 13, at the Sheffield Quarter Sessions, the Court had a brain-freshening interlude of comedy, says the "Yorkshire Telegraph and Star." Talking Parrots were discussed, and the Recorder, counsel, and witnesses vied with one another in humorous repartee. The Recorder was lenient, and bound over two brothers, namely, James and Stephen Marshall, bird dealers, of Nottingham, who were convicted of obtaining money by false pretences, the sums amounting in six instances to between £1 and £2 10s.

Squawking or Talking Parrots.

The prosecution's allegation was that accused had effected several sales of Parrots on the understanding that they could say "perfectly proper words," as Mr. T. E. Ellison (counsel) remarked, such as "Pretty Polly," "Polly wants her breakfast," and "Any mortal thing," or could imitate fowls and cats. Stephen Marshall, whose case was first heard, left a wrong name and address. In no instance did the Parrots talk. Two died, and one lived, but did not live to talk.—Mr. Coutts Trotter (counsel for accused): It is better than talking to live. (Laughter.)

Harry Foley, meat salesman, now living at Grindleford, said his birds died.—Counsel: They didn't say anything before they died, did they? (Laughter.)—No, sir.

Your Parrots are both dead and silent for ever? (Laughter.)—Yes, sir.—Counsel was putting another question when Mr. Coutts Trotter objected. Just at the moment one of the Parrots in court squeaked. "Even the Parrot protests," remarked counsel, amid laughter.—Witness said that they died within fourteen or fifteen days, but they should have spoken before that, even in the changed surroundings.—Mr. Coutts Trotter challenged that view.—Witness retorted: I will bring you a bird, and if it doesn't talk in two hours, I'll give you the bird. (Laughter.)—Mr. Coutts Trotter: Very well. That offer may be considered.

William Jones, of the Corner Pin, Burlington Street, said accused came to his house with two birds, which he said could mock a fowl, a cat, and repeat anything after a person.—The Recorder: This bird (one of those produced which was gurgling horrible noises) does seem able to imitate fowls and cats. (Laughter.) I don't see much grievance there.—Mr. Ellison: It depends on the cat. (Laughter.) It would be a very unpleasant cat to have in the room.—Witness said he gave £2 5s. for the bird he purchased, accused telling him that he had kept the bird to teach the others to talk. It has only screeched, and my missis asked me to take it out into the kitchen. (Laughter.) She could not stand the screech.

Mr. Coutts Trotter: Do you know what the bird is?—I call it a Rose-breasted Cockatoo.—Counsel: Would you be surprised to hear that it is a Galah Parrot,—The Recordor: What is that?—Counsel: Galah Parrot, sir. I can give you the proper scientific name. (Laughter.)—The Recorder: No, don't. (Renewed laughter.)

Better than Ducks.

Mrs. Jones bore out her husband's view.—Mr. Ellison: Did it say anything at all?—No, but we made a lot of attempts to teach it. (Laughter.) It could squawk, and could make a better noise than the ducks out in the back yard. (Renewed laughter.)—The Recorder: Have you ever succeeded in making it imitate anything you wanted?—No, sir. I couldn't make any impression on it at all.—Mr. Coutts Trotter: Mrs. Jones, you get rather angry when you think about this Parrot transaction, don't you?—I do, sir.—Did you have that feeling rising up when you tried to teach the Parrot? (Laughter.)—No; I tried to teach it with patience.

E. S. Wilson, bird dealer, said the birds produced were Rose Cockatoos, and worth about 9s. 6d. each. There were isolated instances of such birds uttering just a single word.

Accused said he never sold the first Parrot to Foley as a talking Parrot, but to learn to talk, and he gave a wrong name and address so that if the birds died the purchasers could not find him. (Laughter.) They expected the birds to be replaced. He could not guarantee the birds to live. It was untrue that he had said the second bird had been used to teach the other birds he had; but it could talk, and so could the one sold to Jones, if they had sufficient time to become accustomed to the strange surroundings.

A witness stated he purchased a similar bird from accused, which began to talk after he had had it fourteen or fifteen months, and another witness deposed to having a bird which, after eight or nine months, would say three or four good sentences.—Mr. Ellison: Can it say "Not Guilty"? (Laughter).—No; but it can say the dog's name.—The Recorder: What is the dog's name?—Gip. (Laughter.)—Mr. Ellison: What did the dog say? (Loud laughter.)

Charles Harris, manager for Do Von and Co., large Bethnal Green Parrot importers, said the birds were worth 15s. to 25s. if they could not talk, but £3 15s. to £5 if they could. They were Galah Parrots, and fresh surroundings might stop their talking for a long time.

Counsel for the defence held that it was simply a case of puffing of wares, and described the charge as ludicrous, preposterous, and oppressive.

The verdict was one of "Guilty." The second defendant then entered a plea of guilty, and both brothers were bound over, nothing else being known against them.

Club Reports.

AMBLE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held April 1st, Gardeners' Arms, when the following classes were arranged for first feather show: Norwich 2, Borders 2, Yorks. 1, A.O.V. Can., Linnet, A.O.S. Brit. Bird. Mr. H. Scely (Chopping-ton) was elected judge.—J. T. Crackett, Sec.

MUSSELBURGH O.S.

Second "smoker" held April 15, ex-Councillor Jas. Young presiding over a large gathering, which quite equalled the first "smoker." Mr. Young said it was a pleasure to be chairman of such an enthusiastic body of fanciers, and he had no doubt the society would be one of the foremost in the county. A most enjoyable evening was brought to a close with a vote of thanks to the chairman.—W. Nisbet, Sec.

POPLAR AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Finch show, held Mar. 29th, and in the absence of Mr. A. J. Marley, who was to officiate as judge, Mr. P. Pine, one of our members, kindly undertook the judging, his awards being well received. As the number of birds staged was small, it was thought it would be a good opportunity for a judging competition, with two prizes for 1st and 2nd nearest the judge's awards. The business closed with a very hearty vote of thanks to Mr. P. Pine, which was responded to enthusiastically.—H. W. Cook, Hon. Sec.

LEADGATE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Open Linnet show and usual monthly meeting held Church Square Hall, April 1, Mr. E. Westthorp presiding. This was our first venture in open show business. It proved a decided success, there being 37 birds to face the judge, Mr. J. Stanger (Pelton Fell), his awards giving entire satisfaction. There were 4 prizes. 1, Mr. W. Davison (Chester-le-Street); 2, J. Maddeson (Newcastle); 3, W. Adams; 4, G. Harling; vhc, J. W. Elliot; hc, R. Humphery; c, T. J. Colling. After judging we held our meeting, when it was decided that Mr. W. Foster (Pelton Fell) judge Y.S. show July 8, and Mr. W. Reed (Sunderland) judge annual show January 6. We enrolled three new members; this concluded a very pleasant evening. J. A. Turnbull, Sec.

LEIGH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Very successful table show of British Goldfinches, held headquarters, Railway Hotel April 12, when some very good Finches were put down to be judged by our vice-president, Mr. P. Hart, whose awards gave every satisfaction: 1st, Hampson; 2nd, Clark; 3rd Banks. After the show, Mr. Hart gave us a very good lecture on the Goldfinch. The Goldfinch, he said, was his favourite. He dealt clearly with the points that we wanted to go in for, and the faults to avoid. He told us how to feed and treat them, and also impressed upon us to use the bath, and always show them in a very clean and good condition. A little time and trouble given in this way would well repay anyone. We had a very good attendance. When the lecturer had finished, we had a nice discussion; several of the members asked questions, which Mr. Hart readily answered, and all admitted it to be a very instructive occasion. We concluded by giving a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Hart.—R. Charleson, Hon. Sec.

COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

Meeting, held Arcade Temperance Hotel, April 15th, Mr. J. Simpson presidiug. Secretary reported that Messrs. J. Penman, and J. Leitch had promised silver cups to the society. Decided, that Mr. Leitch's cup be given for the best Canary and Mr. Penman's for the best hybrid, Mule, British or Foreign bird, at the annual show. Secretary was instructed to get tenders for show printing. The following sub-committee, Messrs. Petrie, J. Simpson, Cowan, A. Beveridge, and the secretary were appointed to draw up a code of rules for the society, and lay same before next meeting. Report of conference submitted. Agreed, that we proceed with the scheme, and four delegates were appointed for a year, namely, Messrs. A. Cunningham, D. Wright, J. Simpson, and the Secretary. The delegates were given some suggestions for the next meeting of the League. Mr. A. Simpson reported that a gold medal had been promised for competition at the annual show. On the conclusion of the business, Mr. J. Veitch gave a short lecture on Crests and Crestbreds, and Mr. Joseph Reid one on Yorkshires. Questions were asked and answered. Three new members joined, and one was proposed. Next meeting, 17th May, Arcade Temperance Hotel. An invitation to be present at a lecture on British Birds was received from Dunfermline C.B.S., and it was hoped as many as possible would be present.—Joseph R. Reid, Sec. (Please write on one side of the paper only.—Ed.)

ASHTON-U.-LYNE & DIST. C.B.S.

Lecture on the Yorkshire Canary.

Lecture delivered by Mr. H. Foden on April 4, on Colour-feeding, Washing, and Staging the Yorkshire Canary. Mr. Foden was concluding his lecture of March 14 on the Breeding and Rearing of the Bird of Position, and "old hands" in the Fancy, as well as the novices, received many valuable tips. Prefacing his lecture with a washing exhibition, he washed two Yorks., which looked very dirty. He gave an able and thorough lesson on how to wash a bird for the show bench. While the birds were drying he proceeded with his lecture, and the following are a few of the many useful tips thrown out. Removes birds from flight to moult in breeding cages in pairs; advises a hole in the side of each cage about 2 inches from the top, about 1½ inches in diameter, with a wire down the centre, the hole in each cage to be exactly opposite the hole in the cage next to it. This causes the birds to stand up to see the birds in the other cage. Starts colour-feeding 1st round birds at 10 weeks, 2nd round at 8 weeks, 3rd round at 6 weeks. Makes food as follows: 1 egg, 6 tea biscuits, 2 teaspoonfuls colour-food to start with and increases up to four. Birds well into moult, give 2 teaspoonfuls of linseed meal mixed with colour-food, but advises to grind your own seed in seed mill, thus insuring sound and wholesome meal. If using egg-cake he found the following a good recipe: 1lb. flour, ½oz. baking flour, 6oz. castor sugar, ¼lb. mutton suet, 6 eggs, grind up and use as necessary. Takes seed-box off and adds 1 teaspoonful of Canary seed to each bird's lot of food. Believes in rum and saffron, but if economy is an object, he suggests 3d. saffron to 1 quart of boiling water; let this cool, bottle, and add to drinker as required three times a week. When birds are well through moult, gives tonic as advised in previous lecture—i.e., 1 gill port, ¼lb. honey, 3d. common citrate of iron, put honey in hot water to dissolve, pour in port, put citrate of iron with these in a pan to dissolve on the fire, and when cold bottle, colour drinking water to port-wine colour. Impressed on all the necessity of keeping birds in good condition during moult, as otherwise colour results were far from satisfactory. To this end he advised all to keep birds on soft food right from the nest, of course, only giving after six weeks old about twice a week. Questions he invited as being the best way to gain information, and he was soon bombarded with these. Answers: Covers up during moulting. Does not use hot pepper till nearly finished, and uses then as he considers it good for fastening colour. Mixes colour-food and gives the night before, thus getting colour well into food. Washes three days before show; next day if birds do not bathe, sprays them. Believes in glycerine in washing water, but not as a spray. Borax softens water, but has a tendency to draw the colour. Leaves birds in room where washed, covered up, to cool with the room. Bath on next day in the birdroom. Birds coming back from show he gives ¼ part milk ¼ part luke warm water as a pick-me-up. Gives colour-food two or three times a week during show season. Cleans out as usual during moulting. He gave two instances re dirty cages. 1st, dirt almost up to top of front rail; the owner believed a certain amount of heat was derived from it, and therefore helped birds to moult; 2nd, 8 cages stacked on top of each other had a large cobweb with a spider in it; the owner said it was a preventative for red-mite, but lecturer sarcastically remarkked: "I did not see what was between the cages." He believes in Spanish for exhibition birds. A vote of thanks was moved by Mr. Harley, and seconded by Mr. Baron, and a few complimentary remarks by the chairman concluded a most enjoyable, interesting, and instructive evening. —J. R. Colville, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Fortnightly meeting held Fawcett Street Cafe, April 15, Mr. J. Farrer presiding. An animated discussion was held on matters relating to membership of the club. New members will be welcomed. —J. Jeffrey, Hon. Sec.

DEAL, WALMER AND DIST. F.A.

Sixth annual meeting held April 6, when Councillor Redsull presided. Balance sheet read and passed unanimously, showing the association to be in a good position financially with a balance of £9 19s. 10d. The association are holding a 20-mile radius show in November.—W. H. Thompson, Hon. Sec.

MORPETH AND DIST. C.B.S.

Special meeting held April 15th, headquarters, Earl Grey Hotel, to reconsider next meeting. It was proposed that we alter our date to May 13th, as April 29th will not suit, other societies in the district holding theirs on same date. This will give members of other societies a chance to come and hear Mr. Clark's lecture on "The Common-sense of Canary and Canary Hybrid Culture."—Jas. Nicbol, Hon. Sec.

NORTHOWRAM AND DIS. C.B.S.

On April 3rd, at the Queen Victoria Inn, Mr. S. Dean (Great Horton) gave a very interesting lecture on pairing and breeding. He dealt with the room, cages, and the most suitable birds to put together; he also gave the members a good idea about young birds. He illustrated many excellent points. His 18 years' experience proves he knows what he is talking about. Questions were asked and were answered in a very praiseworthy manner. The chairman, Mr. S. Smith, proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Dean; Mr. H. Tasker seconded, and this brought a very pleasant evening to a close.—S. Sykes, Sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting held April 6, Wentworth Cafe, Mr. T. Flemming (president) in chair. After the correspondence had been dealt with, the business of the grand draw of Canaries was proceeded with. The following have promised birds, viz., Messrs. A. Hobson, C. Hobson, Bennett, Falding, Thorpe, Drabble, and Lindsay; in addition to which, others will be brought. The financial statement and auditors' report were submitted and accepted. Judges engaged for the three shows are: Nest feather, July 8, Mr. G. Browning; open show, December 9, Mr. W. A. Cowgill; final show, December 28, Mr. J. C. Barnes. A very nice show of British was held, six different varieties being on view. Mr. W. T. Furniss judged, and made a few remarks on the birds staged. Awards: 1, 2, 4, A. Hobson; 3, c, Lockwood; vhc, hc, Scott. Mr. A. Hobson also gave a brief talk on British birds, showing how to pick out winners, and the best way to steady them; the best seed mixture for various birds; wild seeds, and several other items were very interesting to British bird fanciers. Messrs. J. W. Atkin and A. White were elected members. A vote of thanks to Mr. Hobson for his remarks, and to Mr. Furniss for judging, brought the meeting to a close.—J. Woolhouse Assist. Sec.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Meeting, held April 12th, headquarters, Sydenham Hotel, Small Heath. Chair occupied by Mr. Willmott (vice-chairman), 20 members being present. The shows were decided upon, the first to be held June 28th, and the second July 22nd. The secretary announced that two silver medals had been given the club for competition in the novice section, and same gentleman had also provided the award cards free of cost. This was received with applause, and it soon brought others anxious to follow this splendid effort to make the club's first show a marked success, the total number of specials promised at the meeting being 12; so members please note and do your best. The question of judge was left over until May meeting, so the Secretary could write several of the leading experts in the district and report on same. Decided and passed that a novice who had won two money prizes in open competition be not eligible as a novice to exhibit in the Novice section of the 1911 shows (nest feather only). A show manager was elected for all 1911 shows. The secretary reported and read the letters which had appeared in the Press upon the proposed nest feather show festival for the district; the meeting was fully in sympathy with the movement and hoped the secretaries of the societies mentioned would take same up and report their decision. Chairman Willmott makes a special request to all members for their attendance at the May meeting so that all may have a voice in the passing of special show rules along with the classing of the birds, and prize money awards; also a prize list is open for specials, etc. Secretary will also be glad to receive all changes of address by return, as all will be notified of the meeting. Rule books are now ready (price 2d.), and the several overdue subs. for the quarter ending July 15th will be esteemed.—J. Sheppard, Hon. Sec.

PORTOBELLO C.B.S.

General meeting held April 4, President in chair. The following gentlemen were appointed to judge show in November, viz., Messrs. G. Marlin (Hamilton), and J. Hogg (Oakley). Mr. Leckie delivered his splendid paper on the Mealy and Lesser Redpoll, and it was a treat to the members to hear such a discourse. At the close Mr. Leckie was given a vote of thanks for his kindness.—J. Bell, Sec.

SHETTLESTON AND DIS. C.B.S.

Meeting held Houston's Restaurant, April 8. There were a good turn out of members, Mr. McFarlane presiding. Agreed, to lower annual subscription to 3s. 6d. (from 5s.), and a motion was made that we confine our show to a 3-mile radius. Our next meeting is to be held on May 13, when a lecture will be given by Mr. Christie (Glasgow); we hope to see every member present with a new member. A. Berry, Sec.

PENDLETON AND SALFORD O.S.

Meeting held April 10, Irwell Castle Hotel, Mr. Lythgoe in chair. We had a very good muster of members and friends (including Mr. Woodhead, who promised to give us a lecture on Yorkshires on Monday next), to hear Mr. Cook's lecture on Norwich. He cut his lecture very short as time was getting on, and we might want to ask a few questions. We kept him very busy as he had a good number of questions, and he answered them as only Sam Cook can. A hearty vote of thanks brought a very enjoyable evening to a close.—J. Critchley, Hon. Sec.

LOCHGELLY C.B.S.

Meeting held Drill Hall ante-room, April 10, Mr. T. Taylor in chair. Mr. J. Halfpenny was unanimously appointed treasurer in place of Mr. T. Wildridge, resigned; and the following three members were elected to Committee: Messrs. P. McCue, T. Peel, and J. Grewar. After considerable discussion it was agreed that local membership be closed July 31, when all members' fees must be paid; any member not paid up or joining after that date, will not be eligible to compete for members' confined cup. Delegates' report from newly-formed West of Fife Cage Bird League was then read, and after a long discussion it was agreed to go on with the League. Delegates appointed for next meeting: Messrs. W. Duff, J. Sneddon, P. McCue, and W. Whiteford. Three new members were nominated and accepted. Chairman intimated that as all business was now well forward, there would be no general meeting till first week in July.—Wm. Whiteford, Sec.

LEYTON C.B.A.

Meeting held Lion and Key Hotel, High Road, April 3, Mr. J. A. Bartlett in chair. Chairman explained that owing to the Leyton Constitutional Club being in liquidation, we had been obliged to find a meeting place temporarily. Next meeting (May 1) will be held as above, when the committee hope to be able to announce they have arranged for new headquarters. The Chairman called on Mr. J. S. Clarke for his promised lecture on the Crest. Mr. Clarke suggested that a discussion take the place of the lecture, and said he would be pleased to discuss any question the members cared to put to him. This was unanimously agreed to. Questions relating to double cresting, double buffing, uses of yellow blood, cinnamon blood, cinnamon Crest breeding, the high price of the variety, and many others were most ably dealt with. A vote of thanks to Mr. Clarke was proposed by Mr. S. C. Rhodes, seconded by Mr. F. Wallace, and carried with acclamation. A vote of thanks to the chairman closed a very pleasant evening.—Forse and Son, Hon. Secs.

LAISTERDYKE B.F.A.

Meeting held April 8, at headquarters, The Railway Hotel. Mr. J. S. Clarkson (Halifax), a well-known breeder and exhibitor, delivered a lecture, of which the following is the gist:—Gentlemen, it is not my intention to read a paper, as I prefer to not my intention to read a paper, as I prefer to "toddle" on in my own way, to give you my ideas and methods, gained by long practical experience, and extending over a good number of years—ideas I have found to work well. Nevertheless, my advice to you is to keep to any methods you have proved to advance the welfare of your stock. Further, I should like to point out that you must not think you have only to do as I tell you, and you will breed a roomful of winners, because you will be very much mistaken, as birds, like human beings, have their funny little ways which we have to study; and we have to use our own judgment a good deal during the breeding season. Mr. Clarkson commenced with the breeding of Yorkshires and the way he managed them; the next question he tackled was taking away the young ones from the nest, and when to do so; also what he did after taking them away. He also gave us some good points upon the wild birds, and the breeding of Mules and Hybrids. The lecture was of a very interesting nature. Our chairman, Mr. E. Padgett, asked if there were any questions. The following members asked questions: Messrs. Pownal, Swaine, Taylor, Pynah, and Padgett. The lecturer answered these in a very satisfactory manner. Mr. Oddy proposed a vote of thanks to the lecturer. Mr. Swaine seconded. Mr. Clarkson responded, and said he hoped he had done a little good.—J. E. Hudson, Sec.

POPLAR AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held April 6th, Mr. T. G. Hunt in chair. Apologies were read from Mr. P. Thomasson, and also one from Mr. A. J. Marley explaining the reason for his inability to judge Finch Show. Chairman moved adoption of the balance-sheet, which was accepted. Scrutineers were appointed for the ballot papers, viz., Messrs. P. Hunt and A. Barber. Officers for the forthcoming year:—Chairman, Mr. T. G. Hunt; vice-chairman, Mr. P. Wyatt; treasurer, Mr. T. G. Hunt; auditors, Messrs. Braithwaite and Priseman; secretary, Mr. H. W. Cook; committee, Messrs. Pine, Kidman, Priseman, Braithwaite, Cowles, Barker, Francis, Wyatt, and Teasdale. Our delegate on the Federation gave his report of recent meetings, and it was unanimously decided that same be adopted, and that we continue affiliated for the ensuing year, our delegates to represent us being also appointed, in Messrs. P. Hunt and Mr. P. Wyatt. Secretary gave report for past year, congratulating the members on the healthy state of the society, and whilst regretting his inability to bring out the young stock and annual shows at a profit, the principal fault was with the members, owing to their bad support at both shows; and it was to be hoped they would rally round better during the coming shows. He also pointed out that it was hardly fair to expect one-half of the members to support the other half. The report was carried. Votes of thanks to retiring officers were now proposed, and all were thanked most heartily. The secretary, in thanking the members, stated it was to be hoped that those members who had neglected their duties would come forward with their support. They did not want members on the books, paid or not paid, whom they did not see from one year's end to another. A discussion brought the business to a close, and a vote of thanks to the chairman concluded meeting.—H. W. Cook, Sec.

HANLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Albion Hotel, April 5th, when a good number of members were in attendance, Mr. H. Cook in chair. After a fair amount of business it was decided unanimously to hold a nest feather show at Albion Hotel on July 8th, a local judge to be elected at one of next meetings. Will our members kindly note that our meetings in future will be held every four weeks?—G. Lawton, Gen. Sec.

WARRINGTON C.B.S.

Meeting held March 30, Mr. Walters in chair. Mr. Metcalf gave a lecture on the Yorkshire Canary, which was very interesting and instructive. Mr. Knowles proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Metcalf, which was seconded by Mr. Weston. Mr. Bretherton, another old member, has rejoined. Mr. Baxter (Runcorn) will be proposed at next meeting, when it is to be hoped there will be a good muster of members to discuss show business.—G. M. Nelson, Sec.

SOUTHEND & S. COUNTIES O.S.

Interesting meeting held headquarters, April 12th, the chair being taken by Mr. Hutson. The standing rules were revised, and some additions made. Two new rules are: (1) That all birds shown shall have been the property of exhibitor at least one month before show date. (2) Any bird faked or trimmed disqualifies all entries made by owner of faked bird. An interesting discussion and conversation employed the members for the rest of the evening, several bemoaning the fate of lost young birds owing to the recent cold spell. The members' motto seems to be "Nil Desperandum," and they are keeping their "peckers" up. There seems to be plenty of young stuff in and around Southend, one member alone having over twenty youngsters in the pans.—Wm. C. Lockwood, Hon. Sec.

NATIONAL GREEN-MARKED Y.C.C

The following gentlemen have been nominated for official positions of the club for the ensuing year; should any gentleman desire his name to be withdrawn, I should consider it a great favour to receive an early intimation of the same:—President (one required), W. H. Shackleton and R. Sutcliffe; vice-president (one required), Messrs. F. Hammond, R. B. Wright, T. Ogden, and W. Crabtree; hon. sec. and treasurer, Messrs. F. Armstrong, F. Hammond, and J. Crowther; committee (inside), Messrs. H. H. Towers, W. A. Cowgill, R. Halliday, F. Townsend, S. Dean, W. Crabtree, H. Hill, T. Ogden, F. Hammond, W. H. Shackleton, H. J. Chittenden, H. W. Walsh, L. Ogden, L. Dykes, R. Sutcliffe, H. W. Battye, P. Drake, J. Crowther, J. Bailey, J. Thomas, A. Sutcliffe, E. Clegg, J. Wilcock, and J. Greaves, (outside), Messrs. J. W. Ramsden, A. Ambler, T. C. Crawhall, A. Hirst, J. Currie, and R. B. Wright.—F. Armstrong, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

At the table show of British birds, held under the auspices of this society, the judge, Mr. E. E. Smith, remarked that it was the hardest task he had had for some time to select what he considered were worthy of premier honours. The show was followed by a very interesting paper on British Birds, which was read by the secretary. It referred to the various species of British, the best methods and food for keeping them in health and vigour, together with notes on moulting and preparing for exhibition, the best species to exhibit, etc. The paper was heartily enjoyed by the crowd of members present. The questions that followed were many, and they were ably answered by the secretary. We had some important business to transact, namely, the alteration of date of nest feather show; we were compelled to alter this, as we could not get a suitable hall for the original date. The revised date is July 22nd, in Forresters' Hall. Will all members kindly note this and other date on their syllabus? We had another addition of new recruits. Now, you members, don't forget next meeting, May 2nd; arrangements for nest feather show.—John A. T. Wardale, Press Correspondent.

SWANSEA AND DIST. C.B.A.

A splendid meeting was held at the Market Coffee Tavern, April 11th, Mr. J. H. Ford presiding. Decided, to fix date and place of first feather show at next meeting. The classification was proceeded with. Decided, to have twenty classes: Nor. 4, Yorks. 4, Bord. 8, A.O.V. 1, Mules and Hyb. 3; also 21 classes for old birds. A suggestion was thrown out that to give a little encouragement to members to make a large entry we should have a trophy for competition, which was enthusiastically taken up, and 27s. was subscribed towards it. After this splendid response the following resolution was carried: "That the cup subscribed for by the members be competed for annually at the first feather show for the best young bird bred by a member, to be won twice by a member before becoming his property (not necessarily in succession), and that the Society give a gold-centred medal to the winner." One of the members, who wishes his name not to be mentioned, said that if the cup was won by the same member in 1911-12, and therefore becomes his property, he would give the society another cup in the place of it, to be won on the same conditions. We are greatly indebted to the donor, who has on several occasions shown the great interest he takes in the society and the Fancy generally. It will put fresh zeal in our F.F. shows, and I hope all members will show their gratitude by giving us a record entry. The final stage in the table show for this season will be at next meeting, when nine classes for British will be open for competition. The entries the earlier part of the season were disappointing, but now there are at least four members running very close to each other for the two specials for most points. Our next show is bound to produce a record entry.—S. H. George, Sec.

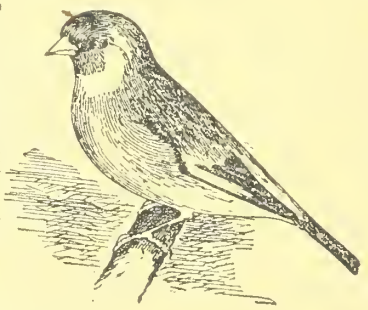
Price 7/6 Carriage Paid.



Or 2/6 down and three payments of 2/- a month.

A STANDARD WORK.

This is a standard work. It deals with the most fascinating section of the cage bird cult. Its author has the highest reputation. It covers the ground completely. There are 128 pages, sixteen coloured plates, and many art illustrations. The combined brains of Mr. Charles Houlton and Mr. H. Norman have produced a work that will live for ever. A permanent record of human achievement in cage bird culture. What is a Hybrid? The most interesting form of cage bird in existence. Why is Cage Bird Hybrids the most delightful and fascinating book on the subject ever published? Mr. Houlton has given the result of a lifetime's experience. He has a practical pen, and his splendid exposition of the art and practice of hybrid breeding is a national work worthy of a casket of gold.

MARVELLOUSLY COMPREHENSIVE.

First of all are considered at great length the question of cages and aviaries for hybrids. All the various methods of housing are thoroughly and carefully described. So painstaking is the writer that even the perches are minutely detailed; nests and nesting material have a chapter to themselves. Mr. Houlton's special cage for hybrid breeding is clearly described and illustrated. All the foods, natural and artificial are enumerated. Egg and other soft foods and their feeding values dealt with. The selection of the stock is debated at length. The hens which need light and dark exhibition mules described. The proper breeding procedure for Dark Goldfinch Mules gone into. Egg-binding and its treatment. The food supply. Care of the young hybrids. All these topics are treated with that experience and skill only an expert of Mr. Houlton's standing could bring to such a task.

Chapter VI. is a particularly interesting one. It deals with the production of the Light Goldfinch Canary Hybrid. Have you ever engaged in that alluring game—trying to produce such a rara avis? Mr. Houlton's remarks will entrance you and give you points that never before struck you. How to breed Sib. hens. The importance of Cinnamon blood. Results of in-breeding. All the various hybrids are dealt with in detail comprehensively and absorbingly. Chapter XXVII. is also a delightful one, and traverses the question of the hybrids that are awaiting production. The standard points of exhibition hybrids are set out at length. Right throughout this magnificent book on almost every page appear tricky little sketches happily illustrating the text. Mr. Norman is in his element. Every problem of feeding, moulting, management covered comprehensively. How to Wash Hybrids—Illustrated.

In fact one glance at this superb present to bird-keepers is sufficient to make a Purchaser—every bird-keeper ought to secure a copy of

"CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS"

If only as an ornament to their birdy libraries.

WHY NOT HAVE THE BEST?

When you can get such just as cheap as imitation third-rate articles? If you possess single breeding cages, you will require Nursery Cages. Mine are 2/6, and nothing elsewhere to equal them; all fitted complete. Flight Cages I have of the best and handiest on the market.

The "Standard" Double Breeding Cage

is the same class of cage and size as used by nearly all the four thousand breeders in Norwich; it is stained and varnished outside, lime-washed inside, has double hopper, sand trays, two sanitary drinkers, ditto nest-boxes, ditto egg-pans, the whole lot FIVE SHILLINGS. Others, same size, fitted complete, Three Shillings and Sixpence. If room and circumstance, however, permit, you should have my Patent "Perfection." The original "Perfection"—not only in name, but in usefulness. Five illustrations of this can be seen in my catalogue.

Clean Red Cow Hair, 7d. per lb.; White Cow Hair, 1/- per lb.; Forest Moss. 6d. per bundle; or Moss and Cow Hair mixed, 6d. per lb. Charpie, all hand-picked and imported direct by me from Germany, sample 3d. This is the material used by all the great Continental breeders. Beware of cheap imitations. Cow Hair and Moss, medicated, 3d. per lb. extra. Postage per lb. 4d. extra, two lbs. 5d. The above are not substitutes for nesting material, but the genuine articles used by all experienced breeders. The "Combination" nest lining, as brought out by myself, 3d. post free, for sample. For everything else just send for my money-saving catalogue.

THE LATEST—1911.

THE "ECLIPSE" SEED CRUSHING MILL.

Reg. No. 579671.

Acknowledged by the leading experts to be the Finest Mill everintrodnced to the Fancy. The Mill advertised in 1910 is a mere toy in comparison with the "Eclipse." Read particulars—

The "Eclipse" Mill has the following advantages over other Mills. It can be entirely turned inside out, taken to pieces, thoroughly cleaned and overhauled and put back into action ready for grinding either coarse medium or fine grades. By using this Mill you do not harbour waste seed, which, in a few hours would turn sour, thereby being injurious to birds.

Another advantage in this Mill is that the bottom part of the mill being closed it acts as a receptacle for the fresh ground seed. This Mill is made of Metal throughout, and the above illustration is an actual photograph of same.

Price 1/6 each. Trade supplied.

Improved Aluminium Rings to open; Nos. 1 to 25, 9d.; 1 to 50, 1/4; 1 to 100, 2/-; post free. Celluloid rings, same size, in 7 colours, 6d. per dozen. Punch bars, best tinned, 10d. dozen, 40in. long; wire, best tinned, 7lbs. 1/9; nest pans, complete, with linings and hangers, 2/6 dozen; Canary eggs 6d. dozen; nest linings 8d. dozen, post free. Enamelled tin seed boxes, with loose glass fronts, 2in. 1/4, 2½in. 1/8, 3in. 2/-, 4in. 2/4 per dozen. New Illustrated Price List on receipt of P.C.

have earned a reputation by their consistent winning throughout the season at all the leading shows. The following facts, which can easily be verified, are sufficient evidence in support of this claim.

During this season I have won over 60 first prizes, 40 seconds, 40 thirds, 30 fourths, and 30 specials in hottest competition, including all the leading shows.

I have also bred both Yorkshires and Norwich that have secured premier honours at the Crystal Palace Show, 1911. My customers also have had wonderful success on the Show Bench, with birds bred from matched pairs supplied by me. Proof of this is filed and open for the inspection of all.

Any fancier requiring birds for Stock or Exhibition, cannot do better than send a postcard for my Free 1911 Illustrated Catalogue.

I have the largest collection of high-class birds in the country, and I defy all competition. The following are a few prices:—

YORKSHIRE COCKS.—Grand, lengthy birds, full of type and quality, and in full song, 6/-, 7/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/- upwards. Smart, ERECT, racy hens, beautifully feathered, 3/-, 4/-, 5/6, 6/-, 7/6, 10/-, 12/6, 15/- upwards, in yellows, and buffs, Clears, Ticks, Marked, also Self Greens and Cinnamons.

Properly matched pairs, unrelated, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- upwards, in all colours.

NORWICH PLAINHEADS.—My strain has proved its quality throughout the season, winning regularly all the season and coming on top at the Crystal Palace Show, 1911, with bird bred by myself. I have won the O.N.P.C. Unflighted Trophy, The Illingworth Challenge Cup, and run second in Old Bird Competition.

I have a few good stock birds for sale, bred from my winners. Also a few grand birds from other well-known strains, same price as Yorkshires. Also few good Norwich Cinnamons.

I can also offer splendid value in Siberian Cock Goldfinches and Bullfinches, Crests and Crest-breds, Scotch Fancies, Border Fancies, Goldfinch or Linnet Mules, Seifert Rollers, etc., etc.

SPLENDID MULING HENS.—Buffs or Yellows, 3/-, 4/-, 5/-, 6/-, 7/6, 10/- each.

Travelling Cages, 3d. extra.

REMEMBER.—I invite you to come and see my birds at any time; but if unable to come, send a P.C. for my free Illustrated Catalogue, and remember I send every bird on seven days' approval at my risk.

EASY PAYMENTS ARRANGED WITH BONA-FIDE FANCIERS.

AMATEURS are specially recommended to try one of my matched pairs of Yorkshires or Norwich at 10/6, 12/6, or 15/- per pair. Guaranteed unrelated and on approval. They cannot be equalled for value.

I receive scores of TESTIMONIALS similar to the following every week from satisfied customers. These are filed for the inspection of my numerous visitors.

7, James Place, Dunfermline, 24th April 1911.—Bird to hand quite safe, and gives every satisfaction. This is my second deal with you, and I hope we may have a few more. Fanciers up here are very loth to send across the Border for birds, but I hope to let them know that I have found every satisfaction in Joe Thomas.—Robert T. Campbell to Joe Thomas.

Wesley Street, Cavon, Ireland, April 22, 1911.—I beg to acknowledge safe receipt of Yorkshire hen. Your selection has given more than satisfaction. A similar bird would not be got for double the sum. The more I see of your business the more I am convinced that implicit confidence may be placed in you by all fanciers seeking either birds, cages, or accessories.—Thos. J. Allen to Joe Thomas.

Etc., etc. I guarantee equal satisfaction to you.

Send for my Catalogue of birds, and every requisite for the Bird-room, and don't forget I guarantee satisfaction.

Spring Song.

The song of the Greenfinch is round and melodious, spoilt only by the long drawn out "zee" with which he ends it. The shy Bullfinch pipes, hiding himself in the hedgerow where the brambles are thickest. Every few minutes a Chaffinch sings, and another answers him from a distance. There are Linnets singing everywhere, their breasts daily becoming richer in colour, until presently one will hardly recognise the brownish bird of the winter months.

Handy Cases for Nutshell Booklets.

At the request of a large number of purchasers of these Booklets who wish to keep their copies clean and tidy, we have made a neat cloth case which enables the readers to fix in by means of elastic bands any six booklets or less that they have by them. Price 6½d. post free, or with any 6 Nutshells 1/8 complete.

British Birds & Their Hybrids.

Their Management and Exhibiting.

F. WINES (Yeovil).

A lecture recently delivered by this well-known West Country fancier before the Yeovil and District F. and F. S.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: Your Secretary asked me the other evening if I would give a paper on British Birds, by way of a little instruction, and so help to spread a little enthusiasm in regard to British birds and their hybrids. You will kindly excuse my shortcomings, as it is some years since I attempted such a thing; but I will do my best to make what I have to say as instructive as possible with the little knowledge I possess, and I trust I shall be able to do something to awaken enthusiasm.

Great Scope for Success.

I have often felt that South Somerset offers a fine field for progress and improvement in these two sections of the Fancy, viz., British birds and their hybrids. Any southern fancier taking up with these birds thoroughly will find far greater scope for success than is presented in the Canary section. It only needs tackling properly to make headway, and to taste the sweets of success. Once there has been a real good show in these sections at a Yeovil show, or a South Somerset show anywhere, others will follow suit, and soon these shows will compare with any other representative exhibitions in the Kingdom.

And we want, too, to see this little show of ours flourish. I am quite sure that, with a little pushing, the whole of both sections can be worked up to standard pitch, and ours will equal both in quantity and quality the show of any other district—I mean in regard to the British bird and hybrid sections.

The Need for Guarantors.

Now, one of the first steps towards a successful show is to get various persons interested to guarantee a class, or classes, according to their desire, or means, and so cover any possible loss from short entries. When exhibitors pick up schedules and find classes so secured, they invariably send their entries there, for they are sure of receiving prize money, and will also know that men who run the risk on the class, or classes, will do their best to see that those classes are properly looked to; and such men feel proud to know their guarantee against any loss has bred confidence in exhibitors. And this is no exaggeration, for I can point out to you several leading shows where prize money in all, or nearly all, classes, is subscribed by guarantors and banked months beforehand. If the classes pay their way by having sufficient entry fees to cover all prize monies, the guarantee fund is returned to the respective subscribers. If the entries fall short, the difference is taken from this fund, and the balance returned to the guarantor.

I have suggested a system worth adopting by all show committees, and I have shown how any club can offer unlimited classification without running any risk; and perhaps some of your members will fall in with the ideas and so advance the status of your society and your shows.

Necessary Things to Learn.

Now for a few moments' consideration of the birds. Let us see if we can find any ways and means to secure a few show specimens to warm up our enthusiasm a bit. We want first to acquire a knowledge of the various birds we mean to keep and exhibit. We want to find out the kind of cages to keep them in; the food to give; the sort of show cages to use for the different specimens, so that they will look well when on view; and other minor matters relative to success.

Mules and hybrids can all be kept practically in the same manner, and as they consist of seed-eaters almost entirely, various Finch mixtures, and egg food, and ripe wild seed of various kinds (many times written on and depicted in the Press by various authorities) may be given them; and in the moult, colour-feed them as you do Canaries, when you will, if you have a good stock to work upon, be in the running for prizes.

I will touch briefly upon the standard quality of merit in the different birds to be shown. The highest standard of excellence is the Clear Mule or Hybrid. The next standard of excellence is the Evenly Marked, and the third, the Self Dark Mule or Hybrid. All the rest are of a nondescript character, and are intermediates between the standards of excellence; and so, as they approach nearer and nearer the particular standard, they are of more value as show specimens. Those pertaining to clear and evenly marked are of much more value than those that are nearly self dark. These few outlines will serve somewhat to guide you toward possessing the right sort for show. Yellows in all crosses are more difficult to obtain than buffs, particularly those with size, shape, quality of feather, and good markings, etc.; therefore, when you happen to possess a good yellow, you may expect to be amongst the winners oftener than not.

Various Crosses Considered.

The Goldfinch-Canary is the most numerous in the Mule section. The Linnet-Canary, the Greenfinch-Canary, the Twite-Canary, and the Canary-Bullfinch follow numerically in the order named, and many beautiful specimens there have been out.

Hybrids between two British birds are very attractive in a show, and when you see Goldfinch-Bullfinches, Linnet-Bullfinches, Greenfinch-Bullfinches, Goldfinch-Greenfinches, Linnet-Greenfinches, Redpoll-Siskins, Siskin-Greenfinches, Redpoll-Linnets, Bramblefinch-Chaffinches, Redpoll-Bullfinches, at shows, it speaks well for the perseverance of many persons who must have spent years to produce them. Of all these, it is claimed by some that the Canary-Bullie is the most rare. Well, at the present time, I believe I am correct in saying, there are three crosses of greater rarity and these three are the Redpoll-Bullfinch, the Siskin-Bullfinch, and the Bramblefinch-Chaffinch; and there have been only a few of these shown.

Keeping and Moulting British Birds.

We now come to consider a few of the British birds. There is here such a large field for work that one hardly knows where to start. Let us take the Finches. Linnets, Siskins, Redpolls, Twites, and Buntings first, as they generally appear in schedules. We must secure large, good-shaped, well-marked, good-coloured, and well feathered, healthy birds of each species we mean to show. We must, in order to attain the highest results, use those ways and means so often quoted and published within the last three or four years.

We come next to the process of moulting the birds out successfully. All kinds of soft-billed British cage birds, and, of course, all birds practised upon, will not turn out a success, for there are many outside reasons why a bird has a poor moult, or fails to take the various foods which go to produce the beauty of plumage, quality of feather, and high condition necessary to complete and perfect its appearance.

The Menu.

I get a supply of Finch and Linnet seed mixtures; I also get hemp seeds in bulk, and supply all seed-eaters with the mixture. With the exception of Bullfinches and Siskins, I add hemp seed to the birds' diet. Sunflower seeds and groats I crush, and also give to all of them. In the way of green foods, I give dandelion, and groundsel, and sometimes watercress and chickweed; and we should do well to collect the following wild seeds and plants as they come ripe in the summer and autumn, tie them up and hang up in bundles for use; give the birds a supply during the moult, and through the early winter, viz., plantain (of which we may get plenty with little trouble), poppy-heads, nasturtium, marigolds, various thistles, hardheads, blackheads (or, to use the proper name, knapweed), small-leaved plantain, starbelia (or corn spurry), wild turnip, charlock, catlock (or ketlock), red neize, and sheep-sorrel; we also want various berries—elder, mountain ash, privet, hawthorn, bramble, etc. All these assist those bird, which will eat them to improve the colour during moult. You may procure them ripe in the moulting season, and when the various birds are yet at liberty in the open country, you may see them feeding regularly on the seeds and berries just quoted.

I had intended making a few remarks on soft-billed British birds, but I fear I have made this paper too long already, so I will conclude by asking you to persevere and cease not in your efforts until you attain the highest degree of success.

A Tip for Exhibitors.

Just one word more, which will be very appropriate at this particular time, viz.: I get my British birds used to me by giving them a little tit bit each time I go into the room, and it is surprising how soon they get to know you, and will take it from your fingers. In preparing the British birds for show, get your birds accustomed to being taken out in your hand; place them on a corner of a silk handkerchief, and exhale warm air on the feathers gently. I then take another corner, and gently draw it over the feathers, removing all dirt, and I well open out the feathers; it beautifies them if they are separated for a few minutes, and it will greatly assist in bringing out the colours of the head and wings in Finches, Linnets, Bullfinches, and their allied mules and hybrids at the early shows, and indeed all the season. I thank you all, gentlemen, for allowing me to address you.

The Shows.

WALKLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S

Meeting held St. Philip's Schoolrooms, Westmoreland Street, April 13th, when we had a question night by ballot, and a very interesting time we had, novices getting enlightened very much. Also, we had a British bird show, when some very nice birds were staged. Mr. Furniss placed the cards, and made a few remarks on same. We made two new members in Messrs. Wood and Simpson, bringing the total of new members up to 27.

CLASS 1: 1, 2, vhc, hc, Ritson; 3, Rose and C. Scott. Next meeting, arrangements for nest feather Show.—J. Scott, Sec.

BATH AND DISTRICT F.A.

Table show and judging competition, held Foresters' Hall, April 20th, when there was an excellent attendance of members and friends. Mr. R. Hallett presided. About 20 birds were staged in the cage bird section, the majority Britishers. Some really good Yorkshires were shown. Mr. A. C. Brackstone judged. During the judging the secretary (Mr. W. H. Knowles) stated that the inter-show arrangements were being pushed forward. Owing to the success of the present show, it was decided to hold another on May 18th. Two members were elected. A pleasant evening was concluded by a vote of thanks to the judges.

YORKS.: 1, 2, Russell. GOLDIE, ETC.: 1, 2, Chivers; 3, Russell. YELLOW BUNTING: 1, spl, 3, Russell; 2, Chivers. A.O.S. BRT.: 1, 3, Russell; 2, Chivers.

BRIGHTON C.B.A.

April table show held, when Messrs. H. James and F. Dandridge judged the British birds and Canaries respectively, their awards appearing to give every satisfaction.

Cadman Bros. won the special offered by Mr. F. Dandridge for the most points in the show with a splendid team of British. The following is the complete list of points gained by those who have judged at two or more monthly shows: W. Cadman 203, A. Goble 200, E. Cadman 196, H. Akehurst 190, S. Sparks 178, G. Absalon 156, F. Dandridge 105, E. Brooks 84, E. Jacobs 52.—Will H. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

EDINBURGH AND DIST. C.B.S.

Second of the season's series of table shows held Cairns Memorial Hall, Gorgie-rd., open to professionals and novices. A capital entry of nearly 50 British birds faced Mr. A. Cochrane, who officiated as judge. The exhibits were of the tip top order, some real stormers being staged in great style. Mr. Cochrane's findings gave general approval.

GOLDFINCH: J. Brown; 2, Watson; 3, Allan; 4, Geo. Mackie. LINNET: 1, 7, J. I. Mackie; 2, Russell; 3, Hay; 4, 5, Allan; 6, Ferguson. BUNTING: 1, sp. Weekly Linnet singing contest, held St. Lawrence' Working Men's Club, Lawrence Street, when 20 birds competed; some very good singing was heard. Result: 1, 2, W. Weaver; 3, W. Wilson; 4, F. Littlewood. Mr. C. Jackson kindly judged, and Mr. F. Littlewood acted as timekeeper.—J. W. Smith, Sec.

CASTLEFORD.

Linnet contest for time, held George and Dragon Hotel, Bridge Street, before a good number of fanciers and friends. We had 40 birds to sing for three good prizes. After a very close finish between the first six, the winners were: 1, A. Fowler; 2, G. Kirk; 3, T. Piper. Anyone wishing to join to sing for our Whitsuntide contest can do so by applying at the headquarters. CAGE BIRDS has brought our club from the bottom to one of the biggest Linnet clubs in Yorkshire. We wish the paper every success.—Walter Dobson, Hon. Sec.

WIGAN.

Open Linnet contest, held Weavers' Arms Schools, April 22nd; 22 birds entered from Wigan, Leigh, Westhoughton, Blackburn; some very good singing was heard before a fine company. Winners for quality: W. H. Topping 1, 3,; T. Mawdsley, 2. For time: 1, R. Layland, 111; 2, B. Wharton, 100; 3, A. Parker, 60. Judges for quality, Messrs. W. H. Topping and J. Macfarlane; timekeepers, Messrs. R. Macfarlane, E. Parker, and T. Burton. After the match the members spent a very nice evening with songs.—A. Parker, Sec.

SHEFFIELD.

Weekly Linnet singing contest held "Britannia," Worksop Road, April 23rd, when 15 birds were entered for 3 special prizes. Worrall, 1st, 2nd, 3rd. Contests every week-end.

Weekly Linnet contest held Fitzwilliam Hotel, Milford Street, Attercliffe Common, April 22nd, when 24 birds entered for 3 special prizes (3 minutes' time singing): 1, Thompson, 61 sec.; 2, Bisby, 55sec.; Wadd, 48; Bisby, 47; Williamson, 47; Bobs, 45sec. April 23rd, when 22 birds entered for 3 special prizes (3 minutes' time singing): 1, Wadd, 61sec.; 2, Thompson, 51sec.; 3, Thompson, 50 sec.; Williamson and Wadd, 49sec.; Williamson, 45sec.; Robinson, 44sec. Contest every week, and Whitsuntide club going strong.—A. Brown, Sec.

BLACKBURN.

Blackburn Lark F.A. contest held April 21st, when 15 birds contested and a very good and enjoyable contest took place. There were five prizes. Winners, 10 minutes' hanging: 1, R. Airey, 9min. 48sec.; 2, F. Lea, 8min. 39sec.

Kindly publish corrected report of All-England contest held April 15th, for time and quality (4 prizes). Prizes for quality singing; 1, Globe Inn Linnet Club, Leigh; 2, Joseph Dobson, Blackburn; 3, 4, W. H. Topping, Blackburn. Prizes for time singing: 1, 4, Wigan Linnet Club, Wears Arms, Wigan; 2, J. Referee, Mr. Joseph Dobson; bird man, Mr. John Roberts. Next contest for members only takes place Old Red Lion for quality singing only, on May 6th. Will our distant members take notice of this?—T. Slater, Sec.

LEEDS.

Leeds Central Linnet and C.C.—Result of club match held Plasterers' Arms, Skinner Lane, April 23rd: Mr. T. Dobson, 1st and 2nd; C. Burn 3rd. Timekeepers, Messrs. G. Tate and Butler. Next match, April 30th, 1 o'clock.—Bob Smith, Hon. Sec.

Leeds Linnet F.A. King's Head usual quality singing contest held King's Head, Shannon-st., April 15, when 20 birds entered. 1 and 2, shared by T. Stead and H. Hayes, 3 shared by H. Wigfield and C. Prince. Judges, Messrs. J. and W. Naylor and J. Melia. Also on April 16, when 22 birds entered for 4 good prizes. After very good singing the result was: 1, H. Hayes; 2, T. Stead; 3, Sissons; 4, shared by A. Varley, C. Prince, S. Butterfield, and W. Sissons. Judges, Messrs. J. Melia, C. Cooper, and W. Naylor. On April 17, Easter Monday, all-England match for quality. Visitors and singers from Durham, Barnsley, Morley, Sheffield, Dewsbury, Horseforth, Derby, etc. After very good singing, the result was: 1 and 2 shared by W. Bisby (Sheffield) and W. Sissons; 3, W. Sissons. Judges, Messrs. S. Hardcastle, W. Naylor, J. Melia. 25 birds entered. On Easter Tuesday we had a quality and time match, Castleford Club turning up in full force, and birds coming from all parts of England. The room was packed, and the birds did record time, the quality being very good. 56 birds entered—record entry for the year, time singing five seconds a break, which takes a lot of doing, as lots of birds were doing a lot of 4 and 3, which did not count. Quality winners: 1, Hayes; 2, P. Maddan; 3, W. Sissons. Judges for quality, Messrs. A. Jennings and W. Naylor. Time: 1, J. Kirk (Castleford); 2, W. Sissons (Leeds); 3, A. Sweeting (Castleford). Time-keepers and tappers, Messrs. D. Clegg, J. Melia (Leeds). W. Dobson, J. Nelson (Castleford). Also usual quality singing contest April 22, when 12 birds entered. 1, T. Stead; 2, C. Prince; 3, H. Hayes. Judges, Messrs. W. Naylor, S. Hardcastle, J. Melia, also April 23, when 26 birds faced the judges, Messrs. W. and J. Naylor and J. Melia; visitors from all parts of Lancashire, when very good singing was done, to the delight of a very good company: 1, W. Sissons; 2, T. Stead; 3, C. Prince; 4, H. Hayes.—W. Sissons, Hon. Sec.

Cuckoo and Swallow.

The Cuckoo has been heard, and a Swallow seen in the county of Surrey. An easterly wind was blowing at the time with a dull sky, and the air not at all warm.

How Dotterels were Caught.

When Dotterels were plentiful the birds were caught upon the marshy sheep-walks by means of nets with the mesh just large enough to admit the bird's head. After dark the catchers gently drove the Dotterels towards the nets, while others stood just behind them with lanterns, which attracted the sleepy birds, only to become entangled in the nets.

Pipits Singing.

Meadow Pipits arrive soon after the Wheatears. One may observe a little brown bird singing in the air, much like a Lark, but not so strongly. He rises to a certain height, and then descends in a slanting direction, with outstretched wings, singing to the ground. Apparently he has no method as to his descent, he will come down anywhere, he is so wandering and irregular in his course.

Club Reports.

NORTH LONDON C.B.A.

Meeting held headquarters April 19th, Mr. Mortlock in chair, and there was a splendid attendance of members, also several ladies. The feature of the evening was a lecture by Mr. J. Robson, entitled "General Management." This proved one of the finest ever given. Several points as to early breeding and consequent results appeared to hit rather hard in several quarters, judging by the various questions raised. Another point was the advisability of keeping a proper breeding record and the marking of youngsters, and samples of rings were on view. At the close of the lecture, Mr. Robson was bombarded with questions, the majority being upon actual cases experienced this present breeding season. Many other items too numerous to mention were discussed, but owing to the lateness of the hour, the chairman was forced to close the discussion. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Robson.—R. P. Harper, Hon. Sec.

SOUTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Annual general meeting, held April 6th, Feathers Hotel, Westminster, president, Mr. R. L. Crisp, being in chair. He presented the prizes to the respective winners. The result of ballot was announced by Mr. V. Wynn, who very kindly acted as scrutineer, as follows:—President, Mr. R. L. Crisp; vice-presidents, Messrs. W. G. Elsmore, J. Robson, A. E. Pattrick, H. Knight; committee (London), Messrs. H. Smith, H. E. Trugham, F. Easterling, J. Tyson, C. W. Mahey, and G. J. Warley; (provincial), Capt. Fellows, Messrs. H. E. Parrott, F. J. Gibbs, H. Creber, W. A. Dyer, J. Lashbrooke; treasurer, Mr. Crisp; auditors, Messrs. Males and Tringham; secretary, J. W. Rennie. The balance sheet, which showed an increase of £1 8s., was approved. Notice of motion by Mr. Easterling: That no judge shall adjudicate at more than one show in the cup competition—Carried. Notice of motion by Mr. J. W. Rennie: That three 10/6 specials be competed for at three shows in champion section for most points; the shows to be ballotted for at annual meeting after the show season—Carried. Notice of motion by Mr. R. L. Crisp: That a fresh president be elected yearly—Lost. The following recommendations to the committee met with the favour of the meeting. 1. Points to count, first seven, and so regulated according to the number of entries. 2. Eight shows for champion section, instead of ten. 3. The cup and trophy competitions to be held jointly at four shows. The challenge cup having been won outright, it was decided to have another cup, the following sums having been given or promised: Mr. R. L. Crisp £2 2s.; Mr. W. G. Elsmore £1 1s., Mr. J. W. Rennie £2 2s., Mr. A. E. Pattrick £1 1s., Messrs. Hawes Bros. 10s. 6d., Mr. F. Easterling 5s., Mr. C. W. Mahey 5s., Mr. H. Bousfield 10s. 6d. Mr. H. Knight promised a lady's gold watch chain on the same conditions as the 10s. 6d. specials. Also decided, to have prize cards for the club. Meeting terminated with a hearty vote of thanks to the president.—J. W. Rennie, Hon. Sec.

GATESHEAD AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held April 12th, Mr. Tindle in chair. Balance-sheet presented and passed. Following judges finally selected: Messrs. J. Robson, J. H. Roe, J. Bailey, J. F. Dewar. Following gentlemen were proposed and elected members: Messrs. J. W. Lawson (Gateshead), and Hutson (Birtley). We had a good turn up of members to hear Mr. Shepherd's lecture on "Our British Birds," but through unforeseen circumstances he was not able to be with us. We hope to have the lecture at some future date. We spent a very pleasant evening together. Mr. Maddison, our noted British bird and Mule breeder, being present, we found in him a good substitute. A great many questions were put to him as to his experiences in the Fancy. He made the room ring with laughter at some of his answers. Will members please note that their subscriptions for 1911 are now due, and have to be paid in to the secretary by the end of May according to rules?—A. Holden, Sec. and Treas.

Cuckoo!

Across the lawn with hasty stride
Houseward the Vicar came and cried,
"Come out, and hurry up, my dear,
The Harbinger of Spring is here:
I've heard him twice—there!—didn't you?—
'Cuckoo!'"

"'Blithe Spirit, bird thou never wert!'
So Shelley's lines, I think, assert,
'Thou wandering voice!' Oh, I must go
And let the good 'Spectator' know
He's calling here, days ere he's due,
'Cuckoo!'"

Behind the Vicar's orchard trees
The gardener's boy lay at his ease,
His hollowed palms together pressed,
And 'twixt his thumbs with skilful zest,
Cooking a knowing eye, he blew—
"Cuckoo!"

—Habberton Lulham in the "Evening Standard."

ASHINGTON & HIRST DIS. C.B.S.

Meeting held. Mr. Rowleys, April 22nd, Mr. J. Miles presiding. Mr. W. Hall was appointed secretary in place of Mr. Barron, who has given up, owing to ill-health. Decided to have a first feather show, and to fix date and place at next meeting, May 20th. Will anyone in the district wishing to join please send their names to me?—Wm. Hall, Sec., 107, Rosaland Street, Ashington.

SCOTCH FANCY CANARY NATIONAL DERBY O.A.

Martin and J. McLennan (Edinburgh), W. Beattie (Dundee), W. Thornton (Blackhall), W. Montgomery (Cockerhill). Readers are reminded that the membership closes on 31st May next.—T. Smith, Hon. Sec., and Treasurer.

STIRLING AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Douglas Hotel, April 1st, Mr. W. Summers in chair. Following gentlemen proposed and have consented to judge annual club show, November 18th. Norwich and Crests: Mr. J. Winter (Edinburgh); Scotch Fancies and Borders, Mr. Hamilton (Hamilton); Mules, British, and Foreign, Mr. R. V. Raine (Cathcart). We have extended our radius this year to 15 miles, and if any fancier inside that wishes to become a member, I will be pleased to supply him with any information. Membership fee, 2s. 6d. and 6d. entry money for each bird. Next meeting, May 6th, for enrolment of members.—W. Bishop, Sec.

KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

Meeting held headquarters, April 20, Mr. J. Stenhouse (president) in chair. Agreed, to engage Mr. R. B. Gibb as Yorkshire judge at open show. Full list of judges: Scotch Fancies, Mr. C. Berwick (St. Andrews); Borders, Mr. Mossie (Annbank); Yorkshires, Mr. R. B. Gibb (Ibrox); Crests, Mr. W. Paul (Uphall); Plainheads, Mr. W. Hampton (Brechin); Mules, British, and foreign, Mr. A. W. Watson (Edinburgh). Delegates at West of Fife C.B. League gave their report. The following were appointed to attend next meeting: Messrs. J. Stenhouse, J. Veitch, A. Anderson, and A. Dickson. Mr. J. Cordery was granted permission to try and collect as much as will purchase a cup for best Mule or British bird shown by a member at open show. Secretary reported donations of 25s.—A. Dickson, Sec.

YORKSHIRE C.B.S. OF IRELAND.

Meeting of council held recently, Douglas Hotel, Eden Quay, Dublin, Mr. P. Gillen presiding. Unanimously decided that Mr. H. Norman be elected to judge the Canary section at open show, to be held November 2nd and 3rd. Mr. G. Wilson (Cumberland) will judge the Britishers. Mr. W. Hawkins (Queenstown) has kindly decided to present a cup for the young bird show (decided to be held July 7th), said cup to be presented to the winner of the best bird in the show of the opposite sex to the winner of the Rowan cup, and to be won three times, not necessarily in succession, and to be called the "Wm. Hawkins' Cup." Birds to carry the society's closed ring. It was proposed, seconded and carried unanimously that the best thanks of the council be conveyed to Mr. Hawkins.—D. Carroll, Hon. Sec.

WEST. COUNTIES O.S. (Plymouth)

Monthly meeting, held at Morley Street Oddfellows' Hall, Plymouth, on March 18th, when the following arrangements were made for the coming season, viz., Nest feather shows, May 17th, June 28th, July 19th. Classification to be two Yorkshire, 2 Norwich Crest, Crestbred, Cinnamon, A.O.V. Canary and 3 Mules, closing with 4 British and 2 Foreign. Mr. Lugg (Messrs. Speller and Baker's), promised a special prize at each show for the best British Hardbill. The classification for open show was agreed on, the schedule remaining as last year, with the addition of an extra non-flight class in Yorkshire Section. It was also decided to apply for patronage of S.Y.C.C., S.N.P.C., and C.C.C. The members heard through Mr. Snell that Mr. W. H. Tavener, who held the post of secretary to the W.C.O.S. some few years ago, had lost all his stock by a gas accident, and a vote of sympathy was unanimously passed to him in his misfortune.—T. Pope, Hon. Sec.

NORTHOWRAM AND DIST. C.B.S.

A smoking concert was held at the Queen Victoria Inn, April 19th, when a good attendance of Northowram and Sowerby Bridge members and friends were present to celebrate the winning of the cup by Mr. F. Townsend of the last-named society. The cup was filled several times by prominent gentlemen, and toasts were heartily honoured. These were interspersed with musical items, the evening proving most successful. Mr. J. Farrar sang in fine voice, and Mr. T. Sutcliffe, in "Cabman's Story" and "Vanity Fair" was very much appreciated. Mr. McAndrew created loud applause by his songs, while Messrs. J. Farrar and H. Tasker were greatly admired for their rendering of duets; Messrs. McGrayan and J. Wallocks also contributed. Mr. J. E. Priestley accompanied very efficiently. Mr. F. Townend acted most efficiently as chairman. A very enjoyable evening was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.—S. Sykes, Sec.

CODNOR PK & EASTWOOD C.B.S.

The members entertained the Eastfield Side C.B.S. at the Portland Arms, Jacksdale, on Easter Monday, when a most enjoyable time was spent. Ample justice having been done to the good things provided, the tables were cleared for the programme presented by Mr. J. H. Mitchell, Mr. J. Adnitt (Vice-President) occupied the chair, and an able chairman he made, too. J. H. Mitchell proposed the toast of "The Eastfield Side C.B.S." It was, he said, a great honour to give a toast to such a hearty lot of fanciers as the Eastfield Side, and he hoped it would not be the last time they would assemble together, for there was nothing that made friendship more than a jovial time together. Mr. C. H. Martin seconded, and Mr. Amedley and Ambrose then sang to us. The latter, whose age is 74, rendered a song in a most excellent voice. Mr. Ambrose has been a Canary breeder for the last 50 years. He caused much laughter with his "jokes" and "toasts." J. H. Mitchell suggested that the two societies purchase a cup between them and put it up for competition at the two open shows for most points gained by each society at both shows, the society that gains most points at both shows to hold cup for twelve months. This suggestion came in for a long discussion, several questions being asked which J. H. M. explained. The Eastfield Side C.B.S. then threw out a challenge to play the C.P. and E. C.B.S. at cricket this coming season, which was accepted. A most enjoyable evening was spent with such vocalists as Messrs. Smedley, Wright, Crawthorne, Mitchell, and Ambrose. Mr. Crawthorne obliged at the piano. Our society is trying to arrange the return gathering for Whit Monday. Then for the match.—J. H. Mitchell.

CLYDEBANK AND DIST. C.B.C.

Meeting held 118, Glasgow-road, Mr. Sheriden presiding over a good attendance. Decided to hold First Feather Show in Clydebank Shipyard Dining Hall, July 1st. Mr. Miller (Anniesland), who gave great satisfaction at our pair show, has again kindly consented to judge. Annual show fixed for Oct. 28th, Conservative Hall, Kilbowie-road. Mr. Allan Roberts judge. Mr. McGown gave a very satisfactory report of subscriptions collected for cup, and was highly complimented by the members, the amount to date being £4 9s. 6d., which, with other subscriptions coming in, should bring us up to the desired £10. The club is fortunate in having secured Charles Don, Esq., as hon. President, who is a benevolent and, as is well known, an ardent sportsman; he has promised a handsome cup for competition. Members please note change of meeting place to Clydebank Shipyard Dining Hall. Next meeting, May 18th, 7.30 p.m., when it is expected our Hon. President will be in attendance. Following new members proposed and seconded, viz., Messrs. D. Ramsey, J. McBride, C. Hamilton, T. Ross, J. Ward, and J. Spence.—James Hart, Sec.

GLASGOW AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Adjourned annual general meeting held April 18th. The President (Mr. R. B. Jarvie) occupied the chair, and there was a large turn-out of members, over 60 being present. Before business, the Secretary was kept busy receiving duplicates and cash (over £30 being paid that night) for subscription sale in aid of the club's funds. Mr. R. B. Jarvie was unanimously elected President, with Mr. W. Hutchison and Mr. R. T. Anderson as Vice-Presidents. Mr. F. Bowman, 5, Parkview, Tollcross, was re-elected Sec. Treas., Mr. J. Strank. Following were elected on committee; Messrs. A. Maxwell, J. Brown, F. Taylor, R. Thomson, H. Appleyard, F. Paling, D. Graham, C. Martin, J. Kidd, G. McLaggan, A. K. Chalmers, J. Laurie, T. Forrest, T. Godber, A. Sloan, J. C. Sinclair, J. McLeod, S. F. Wood, A. Roulstone, E. Barron, J. McLay, Allan Chalmers, and M. Craig; Auditors, Messrs. C. B. Whitelaw and A. Muir. Date of show next considered, and after a lengthy discussion, in which everyone took part, it was eventually carried to hold show on January 2nd and 3rd, 1912. Other business, including classification, had to be left over until next meeting, which will be advertised in Fancy Press, and I respectfully ask Scotch Fancy exhibitors wishing classes added to become members and attend the meeting.—Fred Bowman, Sec.

EDINBURGH AND DIST. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Cairns Memorial Hall, April 18. Mr. Charlton presided over a capital attendance. Six new members were admitted. Membership now totals 69, and with an extra special push the total of 100 could easily be attained. Tynecastle Hall has been definitely fixed for the annual show, at a very nominal charge; also permission given to stage birds on Friday evening previous to show. A very hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Whitefield for the active part he had played in securing the Hall under such excellent terms. Secretary intimated that one of the members contemplated partnership, and it was desirable to come to some definite understanding re partnership members. It was finally decided that both individuals of a partnership must join individually, and in a points competition the points won to count half. It was unanimously decided to appoint a sub-committee to draw up a classification for the members' approval at next meeting, the following gentlemen kindly consenting to act thereon: Messrs. Brown, Thomson, Craig, Whitefield, Watson, Goodfellow, Denholm, and Todd. It was decided to delay the appointment of judges until next meeting. The question of staging was remitted to the hands of Mr. Whitefield and secretary. It was intimated that Mr. John Galloway was presenting a handsome special to the best bird exhibited by a member at table show that evening. The meeting was finished in good time, and adjourned to the adjoining hall to survey the awards placed by Mr. A. Cochrane, this gentleman receiving applause for his kindness in officiating as judge.—J. I. Mackie, Sec.

ASHTON-U.-LYNE & DIST. O.S.

Members spent a most enjoyable evening on April 18th, at headquarters, P.S.A. Rooms. A smoking concert and presentation to Mr. H. Foden, the late secretary, and Mrs. Foden, constituted the programme. Mr. and Mrs. Foden are going to Canada, and thus another genuine fancier and successful breeder is lost to England. The artistes providing the entertainment were: Concertina solos, Mr. H. Foden; tenor solos, Mr. Baxter; humorous songs, Mr. E. Barstow; dulcimer selections, Mr. H. Gospel; Lancashire elocutionist, Mr. Platt; Indian club swinging, Mr. J. Dowling; and accompaniments, songs and patter, by Mr. Don. Favier. Every item was pleasingly rendered and enthusiastically received. At an interval in the programme, the chairman, Mr. Foxall, made the presentation to Mr. Foden on behalf of the members. He presented an enlarged photographic group of the members, handsomely framed in fumed oak, and having a silver plate with the following inscription: "Presented to Mr. H. Foden by the members of the Ashton-u-Lyne and Dis. Ornithological Society in recognition of his seven years' services as secretary, April 18th, 1911." To Mrs. Foden was presented a beautiful gold pearl set brooch, in a velvet case, to show the esteem in which she is held by the members. Mr. Foxall, in an able and complimentary speech, pointed out that Mr. Foden was one of the originators of the society; he had rendered energetic services as secretary since the beginning. The speaker expressed the general feeling at the loss the club was sustaining by Mr. Foden's departure. He also referred to Mrs. Foden's many good qualities as a fancier's wife, and her ready welcome to all visitors, even if their "boots were dirty." On behalf of the members he wished them success in their new home. "Harry" made a feeling reply, thanking all on behalf of his wife and himself, and stated that the picture would always be a valued possession, and a reminder of many happy times spent amongst the members. The company, upstanding, sang "For he's a jolly good fellow," and "For Auld Lang Syne." Usual votes of thanks to the artistes, chairman, etc., brought to a close what will always be a memorable evening in the history of the society.—J. R. Colville, Sec.

NORTH SHIELDS & DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held April 23, at headquarters, 37, Howdon-rd. The attendance was poor, due no doubt to the inclement weather. After the usual business, Mr. Whittaker gave a practical illustration of egg-food preparing, which proved both instructive and interesting. The meeting closed with the best thanks to Mr. Whittaker. Mr. Hunter presiding. Will members please remember nest feather show in July? R. P. Fox, Sec.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

Meeting held Howard Hotel, Glossop, April 1st, but I am sorry to say very few members put in an appearance. Mr. F. Hamer (Oldham) was confirmed as a member. Owing to the small number present it was decided to leave the auditing of balance-sheet until next meeting. On a suggestion from Mr. A. Hordern, it was decided that we have a First Feather Show, at Shaw, on a date yet to be fixed. The proposed Lancashire and Cheshire League was discussed, it being eventually decided that the Secretary (Mr. J. Rukin) be appointed delegate. Mr. A. E. Bosworth (Rawtenstall) proposed that we have a rule with the object of compelling anyone residing in same house as a champion to show as a champion. Next meeting Old Board's Head Hotel, Manchester, April 29th, 6 o'clock, when it is hoped we shall have a good muster of members. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Garner, as chairman, concluded meeting.—John Rukin, Hon. Sec.

EDINBURGH (Open) O.A.

Adjourned meeting, to conclude general business, held March 11th, Buchanan's Hotel. A large number of members present, a fine spirit prevailing. The officials were gratified at the interest taken, and hope this interest will be kept up. Mr. D. Martin (president) occupied chair. Arising out of the minutes was Mr. W. Thornton's (Blackhall) decision re secretaryship, he having been elected at the previous meeting; unfortunately he intimated he could not accept, which was received with much disappointment. Mr. A. Begbie again proposed the re-election of the present secretary; seconded by Mr. W. Whitefield, and unanimously agreed to. In accepting office for the third term, I desire to return my sincere thanks for this further proof of their confidence in me; and they may depend upon it I shall do all I can to carry out my duties in a faithful and satisfactory manner. It was decided by a majority of votes to run this year's exhibition for two days, it being felt that the work to be overtaken was too much for a one day show. On the first day judging takes place, giving those who officiate in that capacity ample time in which to handle the exhibits; catalogues, too, will have all the results printed in the different classes, and will be on sale in the evening. On the second day prize money will be paid from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.; the sale of birds will, as usual, be at 3 p.m., and immediately after, the committee will be able to render assistance to the exhibitors in boxing the birds, etc. We are sure our supporters will appreciate the motive for the change. Date of show fixed for Dec. 8th and 9th. Buccleuch Parish Hall, Buccleuch Street, Edinburgh, again chosen and secured. Classification: Scots, 21 classes; Belg., 3. Prize-money, 32s. per class—1st 12s., 2nd 9s., 3rd 6s., 4th 3s., 5th 2s. The finely got up prize cards of Mr. Garrioch, Edinburgh, were again selected. Following gentlemen elected judges (having since agreed to undertake the duties): Messrs. A. M. Baird (Paisley), R. Brown (Duns), D. Caldwell (Baillieston), and W. Rodgers (Colinton); Belg., Mr. J. Kean (Edinburgh). The secretary was requested to write for patronage of the United Kingdom B.C.A. Should this meet the eye of Mr. W. B. Cobb, the esteemed secretary of that association, I hope it will remind him of the application. The name of Mr. R. Menzies (Edinburgh), with his permission, was added to the honorary committee (already published).—J. R. Meikle, Sec.

PLUMSTEAD & WOOLWICH C.B.S

General meeting held club-room, Trinity Schools, Beresford Street, Woolwich, April 20, Mr. J. Perkins in chair. There was a good muster of members and friends. Four cups were allotted to be won outright for members gaining most points at forthcoming shows—one for champion Nor. or Yorks, one for novice Nor. or Yorks, one for A.O.V. Can., and one for British, mules, hybrids, and foreign. Decided, that country outing take place May 27 to Dartford, to go by brake, and then a ramble round the district, which abounds with bird life. Mr. Easterling kindly promised a gold centre medal for best young bird shown at young stock show, July 1, instead of June 24, as previously arranged. Mr. G. Gardner is to judge. Also decided, to hold members' show only this year, to take place Dec. 2, when Mr. H. Norman will judge. This brought business to a close.

The Chairman then called on Mr. Easterling to give his promised lecture on the "Yorkshire and its Management." Mr. Easterling was accorded a hearty reception. The lecturer said it gave him very great pleasure to be favoured with the invitation to come down again and give a little advice to the novices, more especially on the subject announced—"The Yorkshire and its Management." As there had been so much said on this subject, both through the Press and by papers being read, he hoped they would bear with him if he repeated anything that had been said before. He here passed round a coloured plate which he thought would be a very good starting point for this evening's chat. The plate depicted an ideal show bird, also an ideal stock bird. The lecturer based his remarks upon the difference between a stock bird and a show bird. He enumerated the bad faults in Yorkshires—large and coarse beaks, flat heads, guttered backs bad wing carriage, and drop tails. He proceeded to explain the way to out-breed these bad faults, but he said it was easier to breed bad faults than to breed them out. It is only, he added, by careful study and carefully selecting your birds that you can expect to succeed in breeding the ideal bird that is wanted on the show bench to-day. He also impressed on all present the necessity for cleanliness in the cages; also the foods should be fresh, and given often, great care being bestowed on the sand trays, which should not be left to get dirty. It was better to clean them out twice a week, than to let them run a week.

The lecturer having kept all his hearers rivetted for about three-quarters of an hour, said he would be very glad to answer questions. Queries came thick and fast. The lecturer was ready with an answer, to the general satisfaction of all. The Chairman moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Easterling for so kindly coming among us, and giving us such an amount of information, which he hoped all would find of advantage. This was carried with acclamation. Mr. Easterling suitably replied, and this brought a very pleasant and interesting evening to a close. Next meeting May 18, when we are to be favoured with a lecture from Mr G. Gardner. We give fanciers a hearty invitation to pay us a visit. Fanciers would do well to book this date.—Meades and Woolgar, Hon. Joint Secs.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, FLEET STREET, LONDON.

I must thank you for the honour you did me in reproducing such a lifelike sketch of my winner on the front page of April 15th issue. It was a great surprise, and therefore the more appreciated by me. I have been a regular reader of "C.B." since 1902, and I have derived much assistance from it. With reference to the bird, I bred him myself, and amongst other honours he was 4th at the Crystal Palace. Although he was somewhat out of condition and loose in feather. I think I am right in stating he was the only unflighted bird in the money in his class.—S. R. Fuller (Harrow).

How Birds Migrate.

When migrating all birds take advantage of "near cuts." They will fly through gaps in the mountain ranges or any valleys likely to assist their progress. It is as if they were conscious of a long journey before them. They take advantage of every chance to avoid digressions or deviations from the straight line. Some birds have been known to fly through the streets of a town which laid in their course, and the inhabitants have caught hundreds by stretching nets across the street.

Kindly note my change of address, writes Mr. W. H. Knowles, hon. secretary of the Bath and District F.A., to 17, Victoria Road, East Tiverton, Bath.

Mr. Alex. McFarlane has consented to judge our First Feather Show, to be held on July 8th, writes Mr. Wm. Priest, secretary of the Partick and Dist. C.B.C

When "A Collier Reader" gives us his full name and address, and complies with our rules, we shall be pleased to give the matter to which he refers our attention.

We have engaged Mr. J. C. Barnes, of Sheffield, to judge our annual open show on Nov. 2nd, writes Mr. H. Evans, hon. sec. of the Tunstall and Dist. C.B.S.

Kindly note that I have removed from 2, Lady Menzies Place, Edinburgh, to 208, Easter Road, Leith, writes Mr. David D. Horne, sec. of the Edinburgh Eastern O.S.

Mr. H. Norman has, we are informed, been elected to judge at the Y.C.C. of Ireland (Dublin) open show on November 2nd, and at the Llanelly show on November 28th.

I have been appointed hon. secretary to the East Lothian C.B.S. in place of Mr. Turnbull, who has left the district, writes Mr. James McHolme, Cherry Tree Cottage, Haddington.

Will readers kindly note that the Oxford Show being advertised under Show Dates Fixed is being run by the Oxford and District Cage Bird Society, writes Mr. A. F. Fifield, the sec.

We have, writes Mr. D. Carroll, hon. sec. of the Y.C.B.S. of Ireland, elected Mr. H. Norman to judge the Canaries and Mr. G. Wilson (Cumberland) the British bird section at our open show on Nov. 2 and 3.

The North Wales C.B.S. have fixed on Boxing Day, Dec. 26, as the date of their first open show, writes Mr. J. W. Jones, the hon. sec. Will secretaries of local shows kindly note this in order to avoid clashing?

We have altered the date of our open show from Oct. 21 to Oct. 14 to avoid clashing with the date decided upon by the Nottingham Permanent O.S., writes Mr. W. Cottingham, sec. of the Hyson Green (Nottingham) C.B.S

The Wombwell B.F.A. will hold their second annual Nest Feather Show on the second Saturday of July, writes Mr. J. Hill, the assistant sec. pro tem. The judge will be Mr. G. Podmore, of Doncaster.

We are holding our First Feather Show on July 8th, when Mr. Albert Hirst, of Accrington, will place the cards, writes Mr. A. H. Meadowcroft, sec. of the Heywood and Dist. O.S. We have been obliged to put our show a fortnight later on account of the Coronation festivities taking place in our town on our usual date.

May I suggest to the Glasgow fanciers, writes "Scotch Fancy," that a Canary show at the Glasgow Exhibition would be a splendid side show, and, in addition to being an attraction, would afford an opportunity to catch fresh breeders, while birds would be purchased, which would be a good thing for breeders. If somebody would move, I have no doubt but that the issue would be first-rate.

The 1911 handbook of the Ilford and Dist. F. and F.S., whose headquarters are at the White Horse Hotel, Ilford Broadway, contains a list of the officers of the society, the rules a list of the members' names and addresses, an excellent list of fixtures, and four memoranda pages, ruled for particulars of shows. Information respecting membership may be had of the Hon. Sec., Mr. J. H. Priestman, 56, Sunnyside Road, Ilford.

This month's "Bird Notes"—the journal of the Foreign Bird Club—contains articles by Mr. H. Willford ("My Waders' Aviary"), Mr. Wesley T. Page ("The Great White-headed Weaver" and "Freely Imported Species and Their Treatment"), Mr. W. E. Teschemaker, B.A. ("Nesting of the Ruddy Finch"), Mr. A. Sutcliffe ("A Holiday in the West Indies"), and Captain Perreau, F.Z.S. ("Birds In and About the Station"). Book notices and reviews, editorial notes, and items of correspondence, etc., complete a capital issue.

Will Mr. B. Gunton, who ordered a copy of "Ailing Cage Birds," kindly let us have his address, when we shall be pleased to forward same to him?

On Monday, May 1, at the headquarters of the society (6, The Broadway, Wimbledon, S.W.), at eight o'clock, Mr. C. A. House is delivering a lecture before our members entitled "Odds and Ends," writes Mr. H. Smith, the hon. sec. of the Wimbledon and District C.B.S. All fanciers will be welcomed.

We intend holding an open show this year, and it will be held on our usual date—the date which we have held since the commencement of our society five years ago, viz., November 10 and 11; and we have secured the services of Mr. J. Stanger (Pelton Fell) as judge, writes Mr. J. H. Elwell, sec. of the Old Shildon Workmen's Club C.B.S.

Will you kindly ask through "Twitterings" for the full address of Mr. Wylie, of Ontario, writes Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool). Somebody called and bought some birds on the above gentleman's behalf when I was away, and unfortunately the wrong sex were given, so probably I may be put down as a "rotter," and I wish to rectify the mistake if possible.

The New Cross and Dist. C.B.S. are to be favoured with a lecture by Mr. Robson entitled "How to Become a Successful Breeder and Exhibitor," at 397, New Cross Road, on May 4, at 8 p.m. sharp, write Messrs. Barton and Hearn, hon. secs. Fanciers and friends welcome. Anyone wishing to accompany us to Hildenboro' on Sunday, May 21, should kindly write.

The Cage Birds Annuals sent me have been sold to our members, and they all say that it is a really grand sixpennyworth. Those fanciers who have not had a copy yet will some fine day wake up and find they are all sold out, which would be very disappointing to them indeed. There is a great deal to be learned from this year's Annual. I wish your valuable yearly and Cage Birds the greatest possible success.—Arthur H. C. Legg, hon. sec., Mid-Rhondda C.B.S. (Glam.).

A remarkable feature of the great business built up by Mr. W. Rudd, the renowned bird specialist, of Norwich, is the astonishingly large number of orders he executes for foreign clients, which evidences the measure of satisfaction felt by his customers. Mr. Rudd has within the last few weeks sent out consignments of birds to Italy (2), Switzerland (2), Egypt (Cairo and Port Said), Belgium (2), South Africa, Gibraltar, Calcutta and other parts of India, United States (including several very large shipments to Pittsburg, Brooklyn, and other centres), Canada (Victoria, Toronto, and Quebec), Trinidad, etc.; while consignments of cages and his other specialities have left for France, Belgium, Egypt, Italy, United States, Ceylon, South Africa, India, New Zealand, Canada, Java (Netherland Indies), Brazil, etc.

Mr. J. R. Meikle, secretary, Scottish Metropolitan (Open Derby) O.A., writes:—At the annual exhibition, Sept. 24, 1910, the winners of second prizes in Classes 2 and 4 have returned the prize money, both exhibits proving to be hens. The following alterations have in consequence been made:—Class 2: Mr. J. D. Maxwell (Laurieston), 3rd, takes 2nd place; Mr. W. Rodgers (Colinton), is now 3rd; and Mr. J. Dalgleish (Leith), becomes 4th. Class 4: Mr. J. H. Buchan (Portobello), 3rd, takes 2nd place; Mr. J. McLennan (Piershill), is now 3rd; Mr. J. D. Brown (East Kilbride), becomes 4th. The additional prize-money has been remitted to the above-named exhibitors. A very large number of our membership tickets have yet to be accounted for. Fanciers, let us have a record year. We will publish some time in June a full list of members for 1911.

A Canary's Green Egg.

At our last meeting, writes Mr. J. Scott, sec. of the Walkley and Dist. C.B.S., Mr. Woolhouse told us of a Norwich Canary that has laid a pure green egg; which interested the members immensely.

In the Brighton of Scotland.

It may not be generally known writes "A Wanderer," that there is an enthusiastic breeder of Canaries in Bute. I landed there on a wet day, but determined to make the most of it. I went up the Baron Road and larded in the Nursery. I was not long in finding Mr Lister, and got a right hearty reception. He has erected a new aviary, and is looking forward to a grand year's breeding. He deserves to succeed. No one is more devoted to his birds. Everything is nicely arranged; in fact, it is a model aviary. Visitors who have spare time might do worse than look in, as the writer did. The atmosphere in Bute is very bright and clear.

"Too Much Sentiment."

At a recent meeting of the Chester Farmers' Club, the chairman, Mr. Robert Shepherd, said there was too much sentiment about the preservation of birds. The boys of his young days used to take the nests and eggs of Sparrows, Thrushes, and Blackbirds, and there could be no doubt that that did a great deal to keep the numbers of these birds down. At present, if a boy was seen with a nest, he was taken up by a policeman and punished. The preservation of birds had been carried too far. The Blackbird and the Thrush were not only pests to fruit-growers, but they injured the public by making fruit scarce and dear. The public would have to pay for this sentiment in the end. Other members of the Club (according to the "Manchester Guardian") wished to have the Sparrow, the Woodpigeon, the Thrush, the Blackbird, and the Starling included among the farm pests to be attacked.

KING GEORGE AND HIS BIRDS.

His Majesty's Aviary at Buckingham Palace.

It is not generally known that our Sovereign King George V. is a great bird lover and possessed of a fund of knowledge in ornithology. He has an aviary of small birds—Canaries, Gouldian Finches, Diamond Sparrows, and Banded Finches principally. When he was Duke of York this aviary opened directly out of his dressing-room. When he removed to Marlborough House the aviary was in a room adjoining his bedroom, and it has now been moved to Buckingham Palace, where it stands in an apartment close to the King's.

His Majesty's favourite bird, "Joey," a Cockatiel, is (says the "Daily Mirror") very ill at present. It is Joey's privilege to be the King's constant companion. He sleeps in the King's bedroom, and by day is free to disport himself untrammelled by bars.

Found in the gardens of Marlborough House some years ago, he at once attached himself to his Majesty. Of a morning he perches himself on the King's finger or on his shoulder, and chatters in the soft, crooning calls of his breed.

Every now and again he interrupts himself to exclaim in a curiously human and unparrot-like voice, "Poor Joey," "Poor old Joey," or even to venture on the audacity of calling his Sovereign master peremptorily by his Christian name.

Recently Joey was found by the King to have suffered injury, probably as the result of flying against the window. His left shoulder was damaged. At first the King attended to his pet himself, but as the bird got no better expert advice was called in. It was then found to be too late to operate, and the poor little bird's condition is grave. He is being watchfully tended by the most skilled expert obtainable, but it will, in the most favourable circumstances, be a long while before he recovers.

It was with great regret that the King was obliged to leave his little pet behind when he went to Windsor, but Joey's condition precluded all thought of his travelling. And daily his Majesty telephones for information as to Joey's health.

A WELSH FANCIER HONOURED.

A meeting was held at Parry's Temperance Bar on April 20th, 1911, writes Mr. J. T. Lloyd (assistant secretary), at which we gathered together to show our appreciation of the services of our worthy secretary, Mr. A. H. C. Legg, to the Mid-Rhondda Cage Bird Society. We presented him with a nice oak framed photograph of himself, and I had the honour of presenting him with it. I briefly pointed out the good work our worthy secretary had done for us, and the gallant way in which he came forward to save the society when it was very nearly stranded through our late secretary leaving us at an excessive speed. I was proud to be able to say that Brother Legg and a few more real fanciers had put their shoulders to the wheel and brought the society to a safe harbour again. Mr. Legg replied briefly, and said that he felt proud to receive such a beautiful present, and that he could not help coming to the rescue when he saw his help was needed, although he held office elsewhere at the same time. He felt proud that we had such faith in him, and that we had presented him with this grand photo of himself—something, he said, he could look upon with pleasure in time to come. He hoped the society would continue to have the same confidence in him in the future as at the present. Our worthy chairman, Brother Jelley, also spoke, and said he was sure that if things had been a little better in the district (Mr. Legg would have had something even more valuable, but he knew our worthy secretary realised that a little given with a free heart was better than a lot given grudgingly. We had a most pleasant and enjoyable meeting, in the course of which Brother Morris gave us a grand lecture. (A photograph of Mr. Legg appears upon our front page this week.—Editor.)

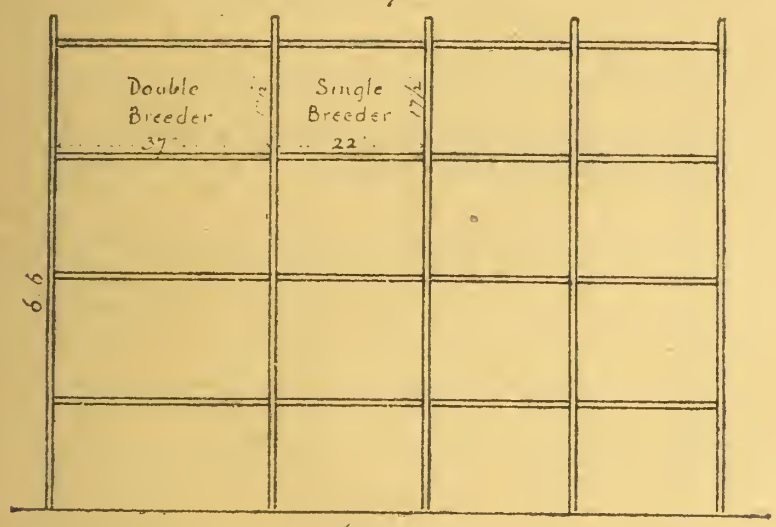
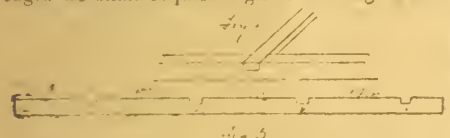
A CAGE RACK.



A Cheap and Easy Way to Make and Fix it. . .

By H. NORMAN
"Cage Birds" Artist-in-Chief.

In this series of articles, breeding cages (single and double), nest boxes and pans, nursery cages and travelling cases have been dealt with, their making, etc., illustrated and described.



The young novice who has followed the advice given in previous articles upon constructing breeding cages must continue his carpentering exploits and make for himself a rack on which to stage them in his bird room. I know well enough that a cage rack is not absolutely necessary, and that cages can be stood upon one another and some of them placed upon shelves or even hung upon nails driven into the wall. But to the careful and methodical breeder these makeshifts are far from satisfactory. In the breeding room all about us should be as neat and as tidy as possible, and seeing that a simple rack, such as I propose to show the way to construct, adds greatly to the smart and tidy appearance of the room and is, moreover, a very inexpensive affair, it seems to me most young fanciers would desire to make one and have the bird room and its appliances well up to date.

The average fancier is not a house-owner, but generally a tenant, and not always a tenant of one house for many years; consequently the staging I shall propose will be one that is as easily removed as his cages: the fancier will therefore be able to take his staging to his new home and refix it quickly, getting his new birdroom into order in a very short period.

We will presume that we require a rack for, say, a dozen cages, nine of them single breeders and three of them double ones. As we require our staging to be strong and movable we must make it of fairly stout wood, so I think we had better make it of ordinary slate battens, which can be procured of almost any length, and is generally two inches wide, by ¾ of an inch in thickness. To stack a dozen cages we shall require eight 9 ft. lengths and ten 6ft. 6in. lengths, and an extra length for odd purposes. It is possible we may have to buy our wood in greater lengths than will be required: in which case the extra length can be dispensed with.

First proceed to make a frame as in Fig. 1. Take one of the lengths measuring 6ft. 6in. and mark off 16 ins., this will be the distance from the floor to the first cross-bar. Having done that, cut off a piece the width of the bar and fit it in fairly tight as in Fig. 2. Now measure off 17½ inches, and make another cut for the next bar; and so on, fitting all four bars at equal distances of 17½ inches, as in Fig. 3. Cut and fit all five uprights in the same manner, laying them side by side so as to mark correctly, or our frame will not be square when completed, and then we shall have trouble to get the cages to run in their allotted places easily.

We have allowed 37 inches between the uprights for the double breeders, and 22 inches for the single ones; this gives about an inch to spare each side, so that there is no difficulty in getting hold of the side of the cage to take it out of the stand where required.

When we have completed our work we screw together, putting in two one-and-a-quarter inch screws in each joint on the two outside uprights and one in the centre ones. Of course, one can use nails if desired, but screws are better if the frame is to be taken to pieces later on.

Having made one frame, proceed to make another exactly like it. Now we fit the two together, being careful to have the joints at the back so that our frame shows a good face. Cut off ten pieces eleven inches long, and screw one at the top and one at the bottom of each frame so that they stand wide enough apart to receive the cages and other cross pieces as shown in Fig. 4. Stand the frame against the wall in its proper position and fix it by means of screws through the bottom pieces into the floor. Now, to keep it rigid the top will have to be made fast to the door post or window frame of the room. This can be done either by a bar of wood, by a stout wire, or by an angle iron.

If the rough slate batten is used, this will make quite an inexpensive affair. The fancier can, if he likes, plane it up a bit before making; and give it a couple of coats of paint when finished. But if he uses it in the rough, he can give it a coat of creosote, which will turn it a dark brown, and will help to keep down insects. The whole cost of wood, screws, etc., will not be more than five shillings.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners-up.

*The Friendly Sparrow.

Last week we put out our Canary, and were surprised to see a Sparrow bring it a worm. We hung it out the next day, and it brought it another one. Then we told our neighbours, and they began to hang theirs out, and the Sparrow fed them every morning, but it always came to ours first.—Sent by W. Mather (age 13), Market Street, Rainhill, Lancashire.

*A Pet Canary.

Our neighbour has a very tame Canary. Although they have a lot of children, it is never afraid. One day lately it flew right outside, and perched on top of our house. The gentleman came out and just held out his finger and whistled, when Dickie came down at once, and went in with him as if he were quite glad to get home again. It always gets flying about the house, but that was the first day it had gone outside.—Sent by Nettie Sharpe (age 11), Cora Linn, Union Street, Motherwell, N.B.

A Robin and a Rat.

One day a gentleman was walking near a farm in Cornwall, when he was attracted by the strange antics of a Robin, which was flying round and round. When it saw that the gentleman had noticed it, the Robin began fluttering off in the direction of the hedge. The gentleman followed, and found in the hedge the Robin's nest, with a huge rat devouring one of the little ones. At this disturbance the rat scurried away, but not before the man had given it a good whack with his stick. The Robin then began to rain pecks and blows on it as punishment, and when it had finished the rat had scarcely strength to crawl away. Then the Robin perched on a twig and poured out a thankful song to his deliverer.—Sent by Ella F. Wright (age 11), 109, Great Western Road, Glasgow.

First Steps in Foreign Bird Keeping. . .

Those who can give up a room for the keeping of a number of foreign birds are in much better case than those who are limited to a large cage as their only available accommodation. If the birds have the whole room for their flight, the window should be fitted with a removable wire frame, so that it may be opened in fair weather, and such a contrivance is advisable in any room in which birds are kept, for it may happen that even if the birds are in separate cages one may at any time get loose, and escape through the open window if it is not guarded by wire.

Domestic Murmurings.

The floor should be covered with well-fitting oilcloth or linoleum, and a fillet of wood about an inch in depth fixed on the floor in the door opening, will tend to keep in stray seed husks and sand, and preserve the amenities of the household. I have in mind an enthusiastic fancier, and I believe there are others, who would not adopt this simple device, and, as a result, there were frequent murmurings and complaints of the "messiness" of bird-keeping from the members of his family who had not such keen interest in the birds, as had the master of the house. There should be no need of such complaints, and a little consideration on the part of the one most interested would save a lot of friction. I, myself, have had as many as three large rooms entirely given up to my birds, and no trace of their occupation was ever visible in any other part of the house.

The walls of a birdroom should be covered either in enamel paint, or washable distemper, not with wall-paper, and no perches should be driven into the walls, or the birds will soon peck away the plaster at the perch ends, and make the room unsightly.

Quite the best form of perching convenience for small foreign birds is furnished by twiggy shrubs growing in pots or boxes, which may be changed, as necessary, and a few swinging perches made of curtain rods may hang from the ceiling in convenient places. Nest boxes of various patterns should be placed about the walls, as far apart as may be, and, if the room be not overcrowded with birds, many little surprises in the way of family additions will await the owner.

In such a room the ever necessary bath is best given in the shape of a shallow vessel of zinc, stood in the centre of a much larger one, leaving quite a foot all round. The large tray will save much mess from the birds' splashings, and those who have never seen the delight of a number of foreign Finches in their daily ablutions will have little conception of the shower which they set up when they are all bathing at once.

Seed is best given in hoppers with glass fronts and small feeding holes, the trouble being that most of these have no tray underneath to catch the husks thrown down by the birds. This may be easily remedied by tacking a shallow cigar-box to the back of the seed hopper in such a way, that its front and ends project beyond the front and sides of the hopper. If this simple device be adopted, scarcely any husks will find their way to the floor.

Mice are a frequent trouble in bird rooms, and care must be taken that the seed hoppers are placed where these pests cannot reach them, for they not only eat the seed, but contaminate what they leave, and many mysterious deaths are due to seed poisoned by the evacuations of mice. The seed, as bought from the corn-chandler, is not always without suspicion, for mice are as much a nuisance to the corn-chandler as to the bird-keeper. I remember once being supplied by the local dealer with some canary-seed, which smelt very strongly of mice, and the seller admitted that his shop was infested, but he said that he thought the seed was all right so long as he winnowed away the husks left by the mice!

As already mentioned in previous instalments, only canary-seed, white millet, and spray millet are necessary as stock seeds for any seed-eating foreign birds; the brown or red millet which forms so conspicuous a proportion of most packet seeds, is absolutely only so much waste. It has no dietetic value, and is not eaten by the birds.

An Appreciated Addition.

Although seed forms the daily bread of all Finches, yet a small tray of soft food should be provided, for most of the birds like a little of this, and if breeding is going on, it is absolutely necessary for the proper rearing of the young. This is best made up in some quantity by taking equal portions, by weight, of ants' cocoons, of the best quality (no others are of any use whatever), preserved yolk of egg, and either "dried flies" or finely powdered silk-worm pupae. To this mixture should be added an amount of powdered sweet biscuit equal in weight to the whole, and the material so prepared will keep indefinitely, only needing to be slightly moistened in some way before offering it to the birds. There are several ways of doing this, and either may be adopted as a change—a little water, or boiled potato, or grated carrot, or lard or dripping may be added to the stock mixture, taking care it is not made sloppy; in consistency it should be what is called "crumbly moist"; that is to say, it should be damp enough to just hold together if squeezed in the hand, but dry enough to fall to pieces in the food vessel.

Food moistened with lard or dripping has the recommendation of keeping useable for some days after being mixed, but with the other moistening mediums only sufficient for one day's supply should be mixed at once, and any remaining uneaten should be thrown away next morning. For other feeding extras the reader is referred to the instalments of this article in our issues of March 25th and April 1st.

If there be an objection to the turning of an entire room into an aviary, a portion of it may be wired off from floor to ceiling, with a wide skirting board at the bottom to keep in seed husks and sand, and with a door just large enough to admit the owner. The side of the room facing the window should, if possible, be chosen, and the wire partition may be either of 3-8 inch wire netting, strained on a wooden framework, or, preferably, properly made panels of stout cage wire. If the latter be used, a much better view of the birds will be afforded if the wires be placed horizontally, instead of vertically, as in a cage front. It is curious why this should be so, but the difference is very marked indeed.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red else.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

An Aviary.

Semper Fidelis.—It is quite a matter of individual taste whether you have the netting in front 3ft. 6in., and the boarding 2ft. high, or vice versa. Personally I should prefer the greater depth of netting as giving a more fitting appearance to the whole. There are one or two other points you do not mention. First, I see no provision for ventilation in the covered-in portion. This should be remedied by having a space about five by eight inches cut out of the end at the back near the roof, and covered on both sides with perforated zinc, fixed so that the perforations are not in juxtaposition. Second, the skylight over the wired flight is neither necessary nor advisable, unless the front is so closely blocked in by building that light cannot get in that way. If the front is only moderately open to the light, discard this skylight and make the roof solid. See that the position is quite free from damp. Norwich should do well in it or Borders, Common Rollers, or Yorkshires, but whatever you get, you must procure hardy stock that is quite inured to normal conditions of life. I take it your intention is to have the birds flying loose, in which case six hens and two cocks will be quite sufficient to stock it, and for these hang about not less than ten nesting sites. Common German travelling cages, with the short bars removed, are excellent for this purpose.

Tied on Perch.

Teardrop.—The condition of the bird's claws point to its having left its youth behind it—perhaps a good distance in the rear, and that being so, I fear its condition is quite irremediable. The overgrown claws are certainly the cause of his awkwardness, and, to a great extent, his inactivity, and you should cut them back to a normal length at once. First, well soak the feet in warm water, and wash quite clean; dry them, then hold the foot between the tips of the thumb and forefinger, with one claw at a time drawn out. Hold up the claw before a strong light and you will see a small pink streak penetrating a little distance down the centre from the toe. That is the blood-vessel. Nip off the claw a little short of the extreme end of that streak, and all will be well. Do one at a time, keeping the others securely protected in the tips of the thumb and finger. A pair of nail scissors is the best implement for the job. For the rest, read reply to "Constant Reader, Pendleton," and carry out all instructions given there as to general treatment and avoidance of causes. For one week give plain canary only, with a fair supply of green food daily, and the whisky, salts, and potash mixture named in the reply referred to every second day. For the next three weeks afterwards feed as advised in the reply, and give in the drinking water 20 drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills, and glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a fortnight.

Cold, Seed and Books.

L. L. M.—(1) The cock is suffering from a catarrhal cold, which is not unlikely to be due to a draughty position, and may also be largely accountable for the nests of clear eggs. The cock was clearly not in the proper condition for mating, in addition to which you put them together much too early, and have thus quite spoilt your season with them, as you should not, in any case, take more than one more nest from the hen this year. See that they are in a fairly comfortable place, quite free from draughts, vitiated air, and extremes of temperature. Give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts in the water for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills, and sweet spirits of nitre, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a week. (2) The staple you are now giving (three canary to one summer rape) is the only stock mixture you need make up. More elaborate mixtures are neither necessary nor advisable for general use. As an occasional change, a mixture of two parts each hemp, inga, and millet, one part each teazle, black rape, and broken groats, and a half part each of maw, gold of pleasure, and linseed is as good as anything you can get to give a pinch now and again. (3) Get the parts of "Our Canaries" already issued, and the remainder as they appear, and "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., for general information. For information on all breeds of Canaries, get House's "Canary Manual," 1s. 2d., and for Yorkshires, Battye's "The Yorkshire Canary," 1s. 2d. Colour Feeding and First Moult.

Financier.—(1) To colour-feed from the nest get the purest tasteless feed you can obtain, and avoid any which seems to contain an excess of added oil. The correct proportion of hot pepper to use for this purpose is absolutely nil. Use the pure cold pepper alone. Make your egg food with equal parts of bread crumbs, crushed sponge cake, and egg, and begin when the birds are five or six days old to add the colour food to the first feed you give each day, in just sufficient quantity to commence with to give the egg food a decided pink colour when the whole is well blended. Gradually add a little more each day, until by the end of a week you have it a brilliant pink or salmon colour, and then begin to add the same strength to the evening feed as well as the morning feed. Continue this until the plumage is full grown. It will not be necessary to add colour to any fresh feed you give during the daytime. The first moult begins, as a rule, from about the middle of August to September, and not at any definite age. The earliest broods will probably be quite 3 months old when the moult begins, whilst many of the later-hatched birds will barely reach two months old when they start moulting. Only the small body feathers are shed, the tail and larger wing feathers being retained until the second moult.

Nests and Crippled Young.

Invicta.—You omit to say in what manner the young are crippled in wings and legs when they leave the nests, so I cannot presume to speculate upon the cause. Very few hens which successfully rear the young would be likely to be so clumsy as to sit upon one or two so heavily as to maim them in any way, and if they did, it is most highly improbable that the same birds would be the sole victims of her clumsiness during their helpless period, so you may discard that theory. If you thought a hen sat heavily or two closely, a nest egg, or an unfertile egg left in the nest among them for the first week would be a sufficient protection. Certainly a large hen should not have the nest reduced in size with the object of protecting the young, but rather the reverse. The nest for any size hen should be a nice cup-shape, not too deep, and of such diameter that she can sit in the cup and turn quite round pivot-wise in a comfortable manner, without disarranging sides of nest. Watch a good hen building her nest and you will see how she manages to do this, and you may take the proportion of herself and her nest as a standard for others. Do you remove the eggs as laid? If not, it is quite possible that the crippled birds are the last to hatch out, which get crushed underneath their elder brothers and sisters, and never get a fair chance in life.

Swelling of Tongue.

E. G.—I confess to being a trifle nonplussed as to the actual condition of a bird with a swelling on its tongue, that coughs and sneezes a little, and always has its beak open; and the details you give do not help to elucidate the case. What is the swelling like, and what colour; and how big is it, and what part of the tongue does it appear to grow from? These are points I should like information upon. Also, are there any fowls about in close proximity suffering from diptheritic roup? You may try the following treatment for a fortnight, and if that does not have a good effect, write again and give full particulars on the above points. First of all examine the mouth well, and if there are nodules of cheesy-looking growths about the tongue or inside the beak, remove them with the end of a match stick trimmed to a chisel-shaped point. After removal cover the place with flowers of sulphur by means of a small camel-hair pencil. Keep cage and perches, and all food and water vessels, scrupulously clean, and the floor strewn with clean gritty sand. Feed on a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give a piece of bread and milk, the size of hazel nut, sprinkled with soft sugar, and in the first week also dust it slightly with flowers of sulphur each time before putting on the sugar. On the alternate days give a quarter teaspoonful of maw. Give a daily supply of dandelion, chickweed, or groundsel tips, but see that they are grown and gathered in a quite clean condition. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence for three days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, ten of glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil well shaken together, every second day for a week.

Ceased Singing (Ignoramus).—Glad to hear "Canary Breeding for Beginners" has determined you to start this interesting hobby. If you follow the advice given there you will not go wrong. It is quite a common occurrence for cocks to cease singing, as you say, when mated. There is nothing wrong, and he will certainly start singing again when once more caged by himself.

Swelling on Abdomen (Pickwick).—Sorry the dislocation over Easter prevented a reply in last issue. I still think you would do well to follow the treatment advised in my last for at least a week, and then dissolve twopennyworth of citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry, and give 20 drops of this in the water daily for a week to brace up the system. If the blab contained fluid it would probably have been absorbed before now. It is just possible it may be an air sac, so if it has not disappeared you may try pricking it superficially with a perfectly clean needle.

Opinion on Seeds (E. V. D.).—The Canary is extremely small, and of rather poor quality. Its only good point is that it appears to be bright and clean. The rape is black winter rape, only of use in a general way for large coarse seed-eaters. A pinch occasionally as a change will do Canaries no harm, but it is not suitable for regular use. The hemp is thoroughly bad, and unfit for food for any kind of bird.

More Samples (X.N.).—The Canary is a nice large, clean, and sweet seed of first-rate quality. The hemp is also a very good all-round sample, quite above the average I have examined of late. The rape has probably been badly stored, and has every appearance of being infested with mites. It is a sample that I should totally reject myself.

Seeds (W. E. C.).—No. 1 packet is a sample of good quality summer rape—quite good enough for the best class of birds. No. 2 is a mixture of about four or five parts rape-like seed—which I fancy is known in some parts as bird turnip—to one part canary. Both kinds are of very fair quality. I am not quite clear what you mean by wanting to know their relative value. If you mean which is the best as a staple food, I should say at once that neither packet is at all suitable for such a purpose. As a staple diet for Canaries, get some good sound canary seed and mix three parts in bulk, with one part of the summer rape, as in No. 1 packet you sent, and this will form a thoroughly good and serviceable staple diet.

Unfertile Eggs (Unfortunate). — By unfertile I assume you mean the eggs were "clear," and presented the same appearance as a newly laid egg. It is not possible to say with certainty what was the cause of this, beyond the fact that they were not impregnated by the male germ. It may have been the snaps of winterly weather which put the cock out of condition temporarily, or he may not have been in good breeding condition when mated. It is quite likely the next clutch will be better. To assist towards this end give the pair of birds a teaspoonful of egg food every second day, sprinkled with a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold pleasure seed, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and millet. Give two or three leaves of dandelion daily.

Out of Song (Constant Reader, Pendleton).—You are probably keeping it in an unfavourable position, and perhaps feeding it incorrectly. Keep it in a bright airy place, in a box-cage for choice, and see that it is quite free from draughts, and extremes of temperature, and not exposed to the heat or fumes of burning lights in the evenings. Also see that the cage is perfectly free from red mites—his constant picking of his body is very suggestive of these pests being troublesome. Having attended to all these points treat as follows for two or three weeks: Staple diet, a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a week, and twice a week afterwards, give a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry mixed in it and sprinkled with a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure, and on two other days each week give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and teazle. Give a spray of chickweed or leaf of dandelion daily. In a teaspoonful of pure honey well mix as much chlorate of potash as will cover a shilling, as much grain of Paradise as will cover a sixpence, and reduce all to a soft paste with a sufficient quantity of finely powdered biscuit, and give a piece of this the size of a pea-nut stuck on the wires twice a week. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whiskey, ten of glycerine, and a pinch of Epsom salts for three days.

Egg-food Substitutes (H. M.).—Sorry, but it is impossible to make invidious distinctions of proprietary foods here. It would raise a hornet's nest about our ears, and be very unfair too. Lots of people have done well with all the best known foods which you may see advertised in our columns. In addition to this you will find the best known substitutes given in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which you say you possess, and in "Our Canaries," details of practically every known serviceable method of feeding is given. The best staple food for Yorkshires is a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. Egg food should be an addition to this, and not vice versa, as you should not make egg food a staple diet by any means. Altogether you had better read up the information on feeding generally in the books referred to, then you should not go wrong on any point in feeding.

Altered Aviary (F. Thompson).—Very glad to hear the alterations in your aviary have had such good effect, as I expected would be the case. There does not seem to be really any great need for further structural alterations, as you may, of course, have the door open in calm or sultry weather. If, however, you do not mind the little extra outlay, there is just one more point which would probably make the place as perfect as it can well be. That is to super-impose a second roof of boards over the present one with a space of two inches or so between them. To do this, nail a lath two inches square down each side of the roof on to which nail the boards to form the second roof. Leave the bottom edge with the open space between the two roofs and leave the top roof an inch short of reaching the extreme top in order to allow a free passage for air to circulate between the two layers of boards. Whitewash, or paint, with white, the top surface. This should give you an ideal roof for the hot summer months.

Asthma and Gas (Fulwood).—Yes, it is quite possible for a bird to be affected with a type of so-called asthma more or less through the cold, damp days of winter, and then apparently get all right in the spring. It would be more properly called catarrh, and with the advent of a milder, dry atmosphere in the spring, the chief exciting cause disappears, and the bird naturally recovers its usual healthy condition. The remedy lies in keeping such a bird in a comfortable, dry place during the winter months, and quite free from draughts, extremes of heat and cold, or vitiated air. If it is now quite free from symptoms, active and vigorous, and not breathless when given a little flutter round the cage, there is no reason at all why you should not mate it if you wish. Being in a room where gas is burned will not necessarily make a bird suffer from asthma or wheeziness. It would do so if the bird was hung near the burner, where it was affected by the fumes, and also the heat when burning, or near the ceiling where all the foul and vitiated air collects, or in an ill ventilated or cold, draughty place; but not otherwise. And in the same circumstances any room, whether with or without gas, would produce the same effect.

A Mating Problem (Market Cross).—The Border cock and Roller hen should produce some nice, shapely birds, though they should not be more diminutive than either parent, which, however, cannot be described as giants. If the young are tutored under a good Roller cock, they should make very good singers, better than pure Borders, but not so good as pure Rollers. The opposite mating—Roller cock and Border hen—would have rather better than this. Although it cannot be called a very unusual cross, it is much less common that a Roller-Yorks, or Roller-Norwich to breed good-looking singers. The apparent squabbling between the Border and Norwich on their second mating is most likely due to the cock being in a little higher condition now owing to the season being more advanced and timely. The three clear eggs in first nest show he was not in very good condition then. This quarrelling and fighting, as you call it, is simply the usual manner in which most very vigorous birds woo their mates. It is not only possible, but very probable, that the eggs will prove fertile. Let them paddle their own canoe, and don't be too inquisitive, nor interfere with their arrangements.

Curious Hen (Confederate). — She would be a curiosity indeed to be healthy, as you say, and yet have the symptoms you describe. She is very far from being healthy and vigorous, and is, in fact, a hen I would not care to breed with. If she has not started nesting, separate her for a fortnight or so, and treat as follows: Keep in a comfortable place, quite free from draughts, impure air, or extremes of temperature. Give a staple diet of plain canary only. Every second day give a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, not more, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days half a teaspoonful of summer rape. Give a spray of chickweed or two dandelion leaves daily. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence daily for three days, and every second day for another week afterwards. On the alternate days in the latter period give 20 drops of whisky, ten of glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together. If the symptoms have quite disappeared and the hen is quite active you may try mating her again.

Maw Seed and then Moulting (J.A.).—The sample of maw seed is of just fair average quality—in no way exceptional, but quite good enough for use. I cannot tell whether the hen you recently purchased and which is now moulting will be in a fit condition to breed with this season. So much depends upon the cause of the moulting, the general condition of the hen, and her age. Keep her in a quite comfortable place, free from all draughts and foul air; give a little egg food or crushed sponge cake every second day, and mix in it four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion. On the alternate days give a quarter teaspoonful of maw and a few grains of hemp. Give a spray of green food daily. In the drinking water give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn for two days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel daily for a week. Staple seed diet: Three parts Canary to one part rape. Do not pair her until she is quite fine in feather and all traces of moult have disappeared, and she is quite sprightly and active and calling to the cock. At best you may not be able to get more than one nest from her this season.

Keeping Eggs (Non-Sitters).—If the eggs are kept in a small box or similar receptacle well covered with bran or meal, and kept in a cool, but not very cold, place, and given a half turn morning and evening, they will keep quite well for a week or so. After this time they begin to lose their virility, take longer to hatch, and produce more or less weakly chicks. The actual length of time that must elapse before they quite lose fertility depends largely upon the health and vigour of the parent birds, as well as upon the manner in which they are kept. Some will retain almost full virility for a fortnight, but I consider a full week the only quite safe limit to keep them. You did quite right to set the clutch of eggs under the second hen, and assuming they were fertile when laid, and you stored them properly, they have probably hatched out all right by now.

Loss of Voice (Birdie).—I cannot at the moment lay hands on my previous reply to your query, and do not remember all the details of it. You may, however, treat the bird for two or three weeks as advised to "Constant Reader, Pendleton," and then report result. In the meantime I may turn up the former reply, and will, if necessary, advise you further. I would not yet regard the loss of voice as permanent, although it is quite possible it may be so. You should take the utmost care in removing and avoiding all the ordinary causes which lead up to the vocal loss, as suggested in the reply to which I have referred you. The season of itself would not be responsible for the loss if the particular exciting causes were avoided.

Crest-bred Hen Ill (Mac.).—I suspect the hen was not really egg-bound, but suffering from an inflamed condition of the ovary due to the sudden snap of cold affecting her just as she was rapidly coming forward for laying. I have generaly found a hen after being affected in this way to be sterile for the rest of the season at least. Try the following treatment for a fortnight, and then if she seems in good condition and anxious to mate you may try her again. Staple diet, plain Canary only. Every second day half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts summer rape, black rape, inga, and millet, with a slight sprinkling of yellow mustard added. Give a spray of chickweed or young tips of groundsel daily. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whiskey, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and the same quantity of chlorate of potash every second day for a week, and in the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day.

A Stand-offish Hen (Interested). -You cannot justly describe a hen as out of condition when she sets to when mated and builds a nest and lays five eggs, and probably would have sat them had you allowed her to do so, even if, as you say, she would have nothing to do with the cock, the latter being, as you again say, in very fine breeding condition. If your ideas are correct then I imagine he must be a very "faint heart" indeed. As a matter of fact, I fancy the only fault lies with yourself, in being too meddlesome and presuming to know more than the birds themselves. You probably do not know how they have managed their affairs in the early mornings, and with a quiet, steady-going pair, it is quite possible for mating to take place unobserved any time, and had you allowed the hen to sit the eggs I think it is quite likely the result might have proved to your satisfaction that the hen had not really been so stand-offish as you supposed.

Effect of Vibration (Novice).—Most certainly. I do consider it worth trying again in such circumstances as yours. It is most unlikely that the vibration caused by passing trains will have the slightest effect in preventing the eggs hatching. Lots of fanciers breed successfully in even less favourable spots as far as proximity to a railway are concerned. A moment's thought of the number of wild birds that rear their broods on a railway embankment should suffice to convince you that too much importance may be attached to the effect of vibration. You omit to say whether you opened the eggs that failed to hatch. I should imagine had you done so you would have found them "clear," and, then, the obvious cause of their failure to hatch would be infertility, doubtless owing to the cock being out of condition. See reply to "Unfortunate" on this subject.

Flabbergasted (F.V.).—Though very brief and lacking in details, your query is truly a staggerer, as the immortal Dick Swiveller would have said. You say you paired up five pairs of last year's Canaries, all from the same nest, with the result of over 20 eggs which have proved an utter failure. To be literally correct this implies a most exceptional brood of ten young, with an equal division of sexes. I fancy there is a little slip of the pen somewhere. I suspect the eggs failing to hatch is owing to infertility, possibly due to the snaps of cold about the time they would be laid. You should treat the birds as advised to "Unfortunate" before they go to nest again. By the way, if your pairs are brothers and sisters, even if they come from separate broods, you would do well to exchange half of them, in order to make up each pair with two unrelated birds. This close in-breeding is not advisable, especially when you have no definite object in view.

Not Sitting (Trouble done).—There is no good in arguing with a hen when she makes up her mind not to sit. The only rational proceeding is to transfer the eggs to another hen if one is available, or distribute them amongst two or three which have eggs that are at the same stage of incubation or very nearly so. Do you leave the cock with this hen while sitting? If not, you must do so next time and see how that plan works. Some hens will not sit when the cock is removed, though they may be model sitters as long as they see him in the cage with them. Very frequently, however, such a hen refuses to feed the young when hatched, so that it is still advisable to endeavour to have a foster hen available in case of need. The staple for Rollers should be two parts Canary to one part rape. If the hen has quite forsaken the nest, give her a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a week, and a quarter teaspoonful of maw on the alternate days. Give a spray of chickweed daily. In the drinking water dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea every second day for a week, and in the following week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., etc.

Aviary Queries.

H. Harry.—The aviary is well arranged, and should prove a success; but it is no use planting trees and bushes in a Budgerigar aviary. Keep the open portion of flight part turfed and the other part sown with oats, wheat, Canary, etc.; this will introduce green growth and supply wholesome food for the birds. The aviary would accommodate about 20 pairs of Budgerigars and Lovebirds, 1 pair Cockatiels, 1 pair Rosella Parrakeets, 1 pair Red-crested Cardinals, 1 pair Californian Quails (suit your aviary better than the painted). Watch the advertisements, and if you see pairs of Laughing Thrushes, Ouzels, or Blackheaded Sibias offered, try and secure a pair of them. All are handsome birds, full of character, and interest, and are about the size of Blackbirds or a little smaller, and require much the same treatment. They are not common, and their value is 60s. to 100s. per pair. Wishing you a very successful season. If I grasp your diagram aright, I take it the back of roofed-in portion of flight us close boarded; in such case, with the combination of the shed, no further protection will be necessary.

A Weak Grey Parrot.

Reeves.—No bird can stand draught for long, but your dietary has also been at fault. Do not give tea, coffee or milk sops, table scrap or any kind of animal food whatever. For the present confine its dietary to boiled maize; a seed mixture of Canary, white millet and a little hemp; also ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit—a little potato and vegetables may be given (without gravy). Add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed. After the boiled maize is prepared add 10 to 15 drops of chemical food, and continue this for a month at least. You can give a little weak whiskey or brandy and water, but I should not give the milk. Give several doses of Dinneford's magnesia—one teaspoonful to the ounce of water—with three days between the doses, the bowels should move freely, but not watery-loose; on the intermediate days tell colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Bathing the nostrils with tepid water might give relief, but a dilute solution of glycothymoline would be better. Bathing the legs with tepid water, dry with cloth and then paint with neat whiskey might give some relief, but the bird must be kept out of draught. In lieu of the tea sop, give a little bread or biscuit moistened in chemical food and water. The hot bran met the sudden need, but it should not be continued indefinitely.

An Ailing Parrot.

Mrs. Caird.—Do not give tea sop, instead give a little bread moistened in chemical food and water. In addition to the seed mixture, give ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit. Supply the following seed mixture: Two parts each Canary and white millet seed, and one part each hemp, oats, paddy rice, sunflower seed, and grit, well mix, and keep a supply in the cage. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone continually in the cage. Every other day for a week put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water (about two tablespoonfuls), and on the alternate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. The bird must be kept warm and free from draught. You need not stint the fruit, it can have a piece twice daily, but it will be better without the milk pudding; after the first week only give the magnesia every fourth day with the chemical food in between. If the bird becomes very weak a few sips of very weak brandy and water (chilled) will act as a stimulant. Please report progress a fortnight hence—at once if the symptoms should become aggravated.

A Recovered Parrot (A. Reaney).—Pleased to hear so good an account of your bird, and if you continue to diet it on wholesome lines there should be no further relapse. Keep a close watch that its bowels move freely for the next few weeks, and for another two or three weeks it would be well to give the Chemical Food in the drinking-water three or four times a week.

What Bird (E. D. C. D.).—I have at last heard from my friend near Bathurst, and he confirms my reply of March 7th last, that your birds are Serins, in fact Green Singing Finches—there is however considerable colour variation with this species, according to locality they come from, and again the depth and extent of the bright colour varies according to the age of the bird.

What Birds (F. W. Barrett).—No. 1 evidently Silverbills, a pretty African species, which should breed with you. No. 2 evidently Striated Finches, an Indian species, which breeds fairly freely in captivity. Both species should do well on Canary, white millet, millet sprays, and green food, with a little of some good soft-food mixture when they are feeding young.

Ricebirds Dying (Unfortunate).—These birds are so hardy and as a rule enduring even with rough treatment, that unless your cage stood where a draught passed through it, I am at a loss to account for their death. Will you kindly give me further particulars, when did you buy? How long journey had they to make when coming to you? What was the state of the weather at the time? How long did they live with you? If you will kindly give me what details you can re the above I will try and give you a useful reply; at the present I could only wildly guess.

Birds to Keep with Budgerigars (W. H. K.).—Rosella Parrakeets are largish birds, with brightly coloured plumage, hardy and enduring, and would breed when adult and had settled down. Blue-winged Lovebirds (Passerine Parrakeets) and Madagascar Lovebirds, could all be included, the latter need a branch of a tree with leaves on put in, they strip off the leaves and bark and line their nest with same. I have also found the Moustache Parrakeet quite harmless in the same mixed company. A pair or couple of cocks of Red-crested Cardinals could be kept for variety, though I do not think these would breed, but the total change in colouration and form makes them a welcome variety.

An Excited Grey Parrot (J. G. Glasgow).—Dissolve 5 grains of bromide of potassium in the drinking water (one ounce), and repeat this during periods of great excitement, but not oftener than once a week, and three or four doses should suffice. Much of the excitement you name is natural. I should certainly spray the bird twice weekly with quassia solution for a month at least. Give several doses of Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful in one ounce of water—with three days between each dose. Diet: seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, with grit, cuttlebone, and water. If anything is lacking, please repeat query. Our Nutshell Booklet, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free, from our Manager, would help you.

Will It Cross? (Hopeful).—I take it the Lovebirds advertised are Madagascar Lovebirds; if so, the cross is possible, though patience may be much tried before the event comes off. In my aviary, in 1908, I had an odd cock Madagascar among a crowd of Budgerigars, and nothing occurred that year, but in 1909 I saw it was mated with a hen Budgerigar, and a clutch of eggs was duly laid, incubated, and one youngster batched out, which unfortunately died when eight weeks old—at that stage it most resembled the Budgerigar—but the beak in form was a combination of the two species; therefore, what has already occurred may be fairly reasonably expected to occur again. Wish you luck.

Which Parrot? (E. Berry).—Either a Ringneck or Moustache would suit you best, both are handsome; the former is, I think, the most noisy, and also, as a rule, makes the better talker, but many individuals also do a lot of screaming; the latter is quieter, but inclined to be dull, but a tame, well-trained bird becomes very charming. A seed mixture is Canary and white millet, two parts each, and one part each of grit, oats, paddy rice, hemp, and sunflower seeds, well mixed together; and keep a continuous supply in the cage; also supply ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuits, also water for driuking and bathing. Keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage, and do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Green Bulbuls (Tavistock).—It is only safe to keep one pair together at any time. The female is a trifle smaller than the male and her beak is more slender; her forehead is paler, as also are her upper and under tail coverts; the area of black on her throat does not extend so far back as that of the male, and she is generally a little less lustrous than the male—the above distinctions would only apply to adult birds. I should not think of subjecting this species to outdoor treatment in the winter, they are loose feathered birds, and though neither tender nor fragile, should be brought indoors about mid-October. At the same time they can bear quite a low temperature indoors without discomfort, as during severe weather my birdroom often falls to 35 deg. F., and my Bulbul is becoming quite a veteran. In fact they need very little more than the protection of four walls, and they certainly would be quite comfortable with a night temperature of 45 deg. F., with a slight rise during the day.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Managing a Hawfinch.

Tinker.—Many show Hawfinches are colour-fed, without a doubt, but it is no use giving colour-food except during the moult. Berries (haw, black, privet, etc.), should be given as well. The principal food is sound, plump, white sunflower seed, or mixed sunflower and safflower. Give this, and a mealworm or two every day or so; the bird asks for little more (though the sunflower should not be given alone). The mealworms should be given direct from the fingers; they are a great help in keeping (and getting) a bird steady. The bird also appreciates hemp, linseed, Canary, oats, and sometimes a little buckwheat, summer rape, small Indian corn, etc., beechmast, suitable nuts (walnuts, etc.), plum and cherry stones, hawthorn, privet, etc., berries, and the like. They appreciate a little young lettuce, watercress, chickweed, shepherd's-purse, also ripe apple, pear, etc., occasionally. They love tender green garden peas, of which they are passionately fond, and these are especially good given in the pod. They are fond of a bath, so let him have one whenever the weather is suitable; daily, if possible. The free use of water is the finest possible thing to keep him in good condition.

Goldfinch & Breeding Condition.

Novice (Swansea).—Your bird ought to be singing well now. Still, the Goldie is naturally a late breeder, May generally being the month he selects to "keep house" in. House-moulted birds come into breeding condition earlier than those in field plumage. Feed your bird on the following lines: This is the seed mixture I am using at present for my own Goldies: Teazle four parts, Canary and hemp three parts each, linseed one part, summer rape half part. Sunflower and safflower I crack lightly by passing them through a seed-crushing machine, and give a little now and again. In addition I have two other mixtures, of which I give a small teaspoonful daily—one, one day, the other the next day, and so on. They are (1) niger three parts, and maw one part; (2) thistle three ounces, dandelion and sesame two ounces each, lettuce, gold of pleasure, and cornflower one ounce each. All the others are mixed by measure. These seeds I have found by long experience help to bring them into song and condition quicker than anything else I know. Plenty of dandelion, young tender leaves, and flowering and seeding heads are essential also, to bring them along into breeding condition. When they are in full, vigorous song, and drooping and spreading their tails and wings as they "sway" to and fro on the perch in the manner so peculiar to this species, then Goldfinches can be looked upon as "fit" for pairing up, especially so if they have a clear beak (free from any dark mark at the tip of the upper mandible).

Cheap Food for Large Softbills.

A. T.—Glad to hear you have joined the British bird ranks. I hope your Blackbird will turn out well. The cage mentioned is a fine one. My "cheap" method of feeding Thrushes, Blackbirds, and the like, is as follows:—Get a bag of some good brand of puppy meal, or dog meal, such as Spratt's, or Clark's "Melox," from a corn dealers, thoroughly soften this with hot water, then mix into it some good maker's packet Thrush food (dry). The latter, used dry, will absorb any superfluous moisture; it should leave the finished food just crumbly moist. You will soon find the right quantity of each to use for the daily supply (it must be made fresh daily), and find it very cheap. Variety is good, of course, and you should give some vegetable or green food with it frequently, such as grated raw carrot, or finely-chopped lettuce, chickweed, watercress, or other green food in season, or cold boiled potato. Vary them frequently, and add hard-boiled egg, finely minced up, occasionally. Give some live insects, also ripe fruit and berries frequently, and according to season. If necessary, crush the "Melox," or whatever brand you use.

Pairing Up.

T. Whitehead.—If muling couples have not been running together through the winter or early spring, it is certainly wise to exercise a little care in their mating up. The simplest and most straightforward way, when double-breeding cages (I strongly recommend them) are in use, is as follows:—The Goldfinch and the hen Canary should be introduced into the double breeding cage, having the wired slide down the centre—that is, one bird in each compartment. When the hen begins to carry nesting material about in her beak, and appears to be looking for a receptacle in which to deposit it, hang up a nest-box, withdraw the slide, and let the Goldfinch run in with her. Before this takes place, I fancy you will find him (it, as he ought to be, in condition) both sing to her and feeding her through the wires. A great deal more depends on the proper mating of Muling (and other) couples than the majority of breeders seem to credit. Some do not even seem to worry about whether the birds are in breeding condition; when they think the time has come for them to breed, pop they go together. Then there is trouble should one of the twain happen to be rank and its partner contrariwise. Of course, some Canary hens seem as though they absolutely will not accept the attentions of cock British birds; such are rare, it is true—but I have had them myself, and so has many another fancier. Still, it often happens when two birds are rushed together, and one of them is not ripe for breeding, that serious fighting ensues, which embitters the couple for the rest of the season.

Trouble with the Hens.

Young Fancier.—You must not get down-hearted yet awhile. Your hen Canaries may come into breeding form with a rush, and pop up a nest in a very few hours. Did they moult well; and have they wintered well? Important points, these. It is, however, much too early to let "cries and lamentations" be heard; you have plenty of time yet. Put a piece of cuttlefish between the bars of the cages. Give a teaspoonful of egg food every day to each bird, also let the hens have a few small tender dandelion leaves, also seeding heads, every day. Also mix maw, hemp, and niger seeds in equal parts; put a teaspoonful in the cage every other day. This treatment should soon put a different complexion on matters, especially if the south wind and the sun should stay amongst us. The best "tonic" is saccharated carbonate of iron. It is readily eaten, mixed amongst the egg-food. Get a small supply from a chemist, and mix three grains (he will show you how much this represents) in each teaspoonful of egg-food. Keep it up for a week or ten days, at least. It is in no sense harmful; it is a very fine thing, in fact, for weakly young birds, as well.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

Mother and Young.

Novice, Newcastle.—The hen does not want too liberal a diet when engaged in incubating the eggs. Still, I think it wrong to throw hens back on to an unvarying diet of canary seed; that is unnecessary, and, I think, even harmful. When incubating the eggs, put only plain canary seed in the hopper, but give on alternate days in the egg drawer, a tiny half-teaspoonful of egg bread, sprinkled with maw seed (one day) and a half-teaspoonful of mixed hemp and summer rape (the next day). When the young are due to hatch, I give the hen, to feed with, plenty of canary and summer rape seeds and lightly cracked hemp seed, with a little shelled sunflower seed. I offer ripe seeding green foods, such as chickweed, and shepherd's purse, freely—but strip off all coarse leaves. If you cannot get this, give young lettuce and watercress leaves—but not freely until the youngsters are three or four days old. She may also relish a little soaked (just sprouting) rape, I don't use scalded rape only that soaked in cold water, frequently changed. Don't give these things all at the same time, but offer them at various periods through the day—nothing like variety to induce hens to "pack" their babies. Egg bread, made by well mixing an equal quantity of crushed Osborne biscuits (or equal quantity of stale "standard" bread crumbs), with a minced hard-boiled (twelve minutes) egg, must, of course, also be freely offered. Any hen worth her salt will rear fine, lusty young on this menu. When the young get about a week old, add a little fine oatmeal to the egg-food, and when they commence to pick up for themselves, let them have medium or coarse oatmeal amongst the soft food you give them. They pick this up freely, and thrive splendidly on it.

Foster-mothers.

Puzzled.—The provision of "foster-mothers" is a bit of a trouble in some cases, I admit. But two or three healthy, cheap hen Canaries (either Norwich, Borders, or Rollers), need not take up a deal of space. And, you can certainly utilise any hen Mules, if you choose to keep them. You will find that hen Mules will accept the attention of male birds (whether other Mules, or of some distinct species) in the same matter as do other hen birds. However, the eggs they lay prove unfertile—in 99 cases out of 100, anyway— I did not always trouble to provide with a mate the hen Mules I intended using for foster-mothers. Give them a nest and some building material, and they will, when they feel they must (so to speak), put up a nest and commence to sit. It hurries them up, however, when one permits them the attentions of some high-conditioned, pushful male bird. I always found hen Mules—most of mine were small to average-sized Goldie-Canaries -- devoted mothers and excellent feeders. A lot of latitude is permissible in the changing of the eggs, etc. For instance, I have put eggs under a hen Mule, which have hatched out and she has fed and brought up the young quite as if that were the usual thing. They are not particular as regards sitting a day or two over time, either.

Answered by The Editor.

Foreign Bird Plates (T.F.).—Yes, back numbers of "C.B." can be obtained containing plates of foreign birds, price 4d. each, post free.

Remarks (W. Lilley).—We are pleased to receive the notes sent; and we thank you for the invitation, which we may one of these days be able to accept.

A Photograph (E. H. Jeacock).—We are much obliged to you for sending this excellent photograph, which we will reproduce in the near future.

A Query (Smithfield St.).—We cannot decipher your name. We understand the answer concerning the Parrot crossed in the post your card to us.

BE ON THIS "GOOD THING."

If you were starting out on some business undertaking, how glad you would be if only you could command the advice and guidance of those who had made that particular business their life-long study, and had achieved fame and made great names for themselves in it. Would not the opportunity of getting such advice make you simply jump for joy? Of course it would. Well, to collect the advice and set out the methods of the leading breeders and exhibitors of every known variety of Canary has been our aim when compiling "Our Canaries," absolutely the finest and most complete work of its kind ever projected. Although issued at the very low price of sixpence (post free 7d.) per monthly part, "Our Canaries" contains the accumulated knowledge of all the most famous Canary breeders of to-day, and the most sumptuous and skilful coloured plates and art illustrations ever put before fanciers. If you want to succeed as a Canary breeder, then take the shortest cut to success and at once order "Our Canaries" from your newsagent, or write us direct to Cage Birds Offices, 154, Fleet Street, London. "Our Canaries" has already astonished, pleased, and aided many hundreds of bird-breeders. Let it assist you, too, during the season now at hand. Part 11 is now ready. Order it to-day.

Wild Bird-Life.

The Coming of the Willow Wren.

The few days of warmth and sunshine have made a considerable change in the aspect of the countryside. The woods have lost their coppery tint, and refreshing patches of green show where the young leaves are pushing their way to the light and heat. The foliage is badly wanted to give shelter to the thousands of birds that will soon be nesting in the hedgerows and thickets. Nests of Blackbirds and Thrushes are plentiful, but not one pair in a hundred will succeed in hatching and rearing their young. The rifling of birds' nests appears to be quite as popular a pastime for the rising generation as it was in years gone by, in spite of fresh teaching and Acts for protection. Many of our migrant birds should be with us by now, but although the writer has been daily in the open watching and waiting for the first arrivals, very few up to the time of writing have been recorded, and these have been species one would hardly expect to be seen first. On the 19th, the wind blew strongly and somewhat cold across the downs; and seeking the sheltered side of a wood in the hollow where the birds were singing gaily, with just a thought that a visitor might possibly be among the singers, we listened for a time to the Blackbirds, Thrushes, and high-piping notes of the Hedge Sparrow, also the cheery song of the Robin, who added his voice to the chorus. Mingled with all this bird music, one could occasionally detect a strange note, not unlike the Dunnocks, but far sweeter. For some time it was impossible to catch the complete strain. Presently there came a lull in the chorus, and then the bright, cheerful little song of the Willow Wren filled the air. Although his song has but little variety, it is one of the brightest and sweetest we have, and is somehow always associated with spring sunshine, budding leaves and flowers. He is a fearless, happy little fellow, and with a very little care one can stand under a tree or sapling, and watch him searching each branch and twig, peering under the bursting leaves for early insects, stopping occasionally to bubble out his merry little song. Evidently a batch of these charming warblers had come to cheer us, for the very next day more were heard in the gardens down in the valley.

A Linnet Problem.

Sir,—Would any reader of Cage Birds kindly tell me the best way to steady Brown Linnets, as I have one or two that are singing, but always jumping about. Is there any particular food they should have? Novice.

Fife Shows and their Judges.

Sir,—Referring to "Fifer's" Letter, which appeared in Cage Birds of April 15, I agree with him, and think it would be better for some of the Fife societies to engage Fife judges instead of always running across the water for them. We have as old fanciers, and I am sure they would be willing to act as judges at any of our Fife shows, and would draw just as good an entry as any other judges. I would mention one or two names of, I am sure, capable men:—Messrs. J. Arnott, Kirkcaldy; Geo. Arnott, Kirkcaldy; D. Baird, East Wemyss; W. Reid, Falkland; J. Lawrie, of Lawrie; V. Welsh, Buckhaven; T. Spence, Methil; J. Mackie, Markinch. These are only a few we have in Fife, and I am sure if our societies were only to give them a trial they would not regret it. A Fife Exhibitor.

Early Linnet Mules.

Sir,—Having noticed the reports in Cage Birds on early Linnet Mules, I just pen you a line re the experience I have had with a cock Linnet. I have had it six months. It has a blood red breast. I put it in a cage with a Roller hen, and she laid her first egg on January 22, laying three altogether, hatching them all out on February 7th. One died when a week old, but the other two are on the sticks and doing well. I have paired the same Linnet up to four more hens. One hen died on the nest; two more are sitting on five eggs each, and the fourth has just built her nest. I think this beats the record. I will write again and let you know the results of the other three hens. I think I can claim to lead with the first Linnet Mule for this season. Can any other fancier go one more than this? If so, I shall be pleased to hear, through your valuable paper, Cage Birds. So I don't know where the pining comes in, as some fanciers say they do when the hens are sitting.

Bird Lovers' Ramble Around Rochdale.

Sir,—For many years I, along with two birdy friends, have seldom failed to take our Sunday morning rambles in the country during all kinds of weather and throughout all seasons of the year. Even during the cold winter months we can always see something to interest us; large flocks of Fieldfares visit us each winter, and besides the Robin and Hedge Sparrow, we often see the Blue Tit and Jenny Wren, whilst Larks, Starlings, Thrushes, and Blackbirds are plentiful with us all through the winter. Large flocks of Plovers visit us in the autumn, and remain throughout the winter. Formerly these birds bred in this district in large numbers, but of late years only three or four pairs have remained with us throughout the spring and summer. During the early months of the year we are on the lookout for our spring visitors. During the month of February we noticed the Pied Wagtail running along the bed of the shallow stream. The Brown Linnets, which left this district on the approach of severe weather, return in the month of March. During this month we notice the Titlark and Greenfinch, also the Yellow Wagtail, hunting in the newly ploughed fields. In April we observe the Stone Chat, the Wheatear, the Yellow Hammer, the Chaffinch, the Swift, Swallow, and Martin. The Chiff-Chaff and the Willow Wren arrive about the middle of this month. We often hear the sweet song of the Warbler before we see the tiny bird itself, but we seldom hear the Cuckoo before the first Sunday in May, generally in the woods on or near Tandle Hills, about which time we see the Whitethroat. By the second week in May all our spring visitors appear to have arrived, with, perhaps, the exception of the Landrail. This is a bird we often hear but seldom see, and it never arrives in this district until the grass is well grown. The Skylark is undoubtedly England's most popular song-bird, as well as being the most plentiful. We have often seen half a dozen or more soaring around at one time, and we have often watched these birds rise from the ground and soar upwards until they appeared a mere speck in the sky; then they descend and alight within a few feet of where they arose. Being lovers of Nature generally, we notice the growth of the vegetation, the budding of the trees, and the arrival of the early spring flowers, the first wild flowers to greet us being the yellow coltsfoot and field daisy, followed a litlo later by the celandine, marsh marigold, wood anemone, and many others. But what interests us most are those wild plants likely to be of service in the bird-room. Week by week we notice the growth of the young leaves of the dandelion, chickweed, shepherd's purse, groundsel, plantain, knapweed, thistle, etc., so that as each plant comes in season we know where to find it; and during the spring, summer and autumn months we seldom return from our ramble without bringing some tit-bit for the birds. There are not now so many different species of birds in this district as formerly; for which there are many causes. During the last thirty or forty years a great number of large cotton mills, with their tall chimney stacks, have been erected all over and around the town. Also, when I was a youngster, many of the farmsteads had large orchards attached to them; but now there is scarcely a large fruit tree to be seen for miles around. Again, there used to be large hedges surrounding the fields, crowned with hawthorn and holly growing eight or nine feet high; but now the hedges have gone, and wooden hurdles have taken their places. Living on the south side of the town, we generally take a south, east, or westerly direction, though a few times during the season we take a ramble to the north side of the town, and visit Healey Dell, Carr Wood, and Ashworth Valley, justly termed "the beauty spots of Lancashire." During the summer months these places are much frequented by picnic parties from the various schools for miles around; they are also haunts of the field naturalist, bird life being fairly plentiful, and are also rich in botany. Occasionally we extend our rambles a couple of miles, and go by Hollingworth Lake to Lydgate, and Blackstone Edge. Along the valley leading from Hollingworth Lake to Lydgate birds are very plentiful, but, with the exception of the Grouse, an occasional Ring Ouzel, or Stonechat, the moorland from Lydgate to the top of Blackstone Edge is almost destitute of bird life, though we sometimes see a few Terns on the sheet of water behind the White House. A country ramble is all the more enjoyable when you have an object in view. During our rambles we often meet parties of young men who do not appear to notice anything around them, but walk aimlessly along. When I see such parties they remind me of the lines which formerly headed the meeting bills of the Rochdale Botanists' Society, which, quoting from memory, were these:—

"There are thousands who walk o'er this beautiful earth
From the cradle to the grave not knowing its worth;
They see things around them, yet they coldly pass by Without ever asking the wherefore or the why.
But the silent observer is never alone;
A companion to him is a leaf or a stone.
He wonders, examines, and he studies to find
Their value, their use, their nature, and their kind.

I will conclude by giving the names of a few birds which used to be plentiful in this district, along with the local names by which they were generally known:—Magpie, Picnot; Missel Thrush, Shredcock; Song Thrush, Throstle; Fieldfare, Felfare; Blackbird, Ouzel; Starling, Shepstart; Landrail, Grass Drake; Swift, Long Wing; Yellow Hammer, Yerkin; Pied Wagtail, Water Wagtail; Stone Chat, Stone Smatch; Whin Chat, Youtick; Bullfinch, Nope; Greenfinch, Greenjoey; Goldfinch, Red Linnet; Chaffinch, Spink; Skylark, Layrock; Titlark, Cheeper; Plover, Tew White; Brown Linnet, Gorse Cock; Lesser Redpoll, Chitty; Twite, Moor Linnet; Hedge Sparrow, Blue Dunnock; Whitethroat, White Robin; Willow Wren, Chitty White Wren; Jenny Wren, Stumper; and Blue Tit, Blue Cap.

A Handy and Cheap Feeding Trough.

Sir,—I have made a very handy and cheap feeding trough, suitable for an outside aviary where several kinds of seeds are required. The cost is one penny. Buy a halfpenny box (a Fry's chocolate box will do) and small pins ½d. Size of box about 10in. by 8in. by 4in. First cut the lid and bottom off, except a thin strip about ½in. Now cut ends as at "A." You will thus have a tray with two ends, "A." Now cut one long strip of wood ½in. wide to run down centre of tray "B" and six small pieces to form eight feeding places. Now, with the piece of lid and bottom you have already cut off form a portable top, "C." Lay this on, and you have completed the trough.

The Hand-rearing of Blackbirds.

Sir,—Seeing in Cage Birds a letter by "Nimrod" about Blackbirds, I would be very much obliged to him if he would tell me where I went wrong with the nest I got last year. I brought them home when they were ten days old. I fed the birds on puppy biscuit, yolk of hard-boiled eggs, made with milk. They fed well, until they got big, then they started chirping, all the time running about the cage bottom. They would not eat, and refused all sorts of food, and I lost them. As they are my favourite, I would like to be able to rear them from the nest. Blackie.

A Beginner's Canary Breeding Experiences.

Sir,—Being a new beginner, I thought I would write and let you know how I am getting along in the Fancy. I bought one pair of Yorkshires (a buff hen and a self yellow cock). I put them together, and the hen laid six eggs. She sat them and hatched four young ones; one egg proved clear, and the other disappeared after the hen had sat four days. Then when the young ones were three days old the hen fluttered off the nest and dropped dead. Her body was black as coal and her head wet. She had egg food and bread crumbs mixed together, and the best Spanish Canary seed and summer rape seed. I thought it was all up with the young ones, but the cock bird still fed them, and they are all out the nest to-day (Saturday), and the cock bird is still feeding them on the perches. They are going on nicely. They will be three weeks old on April 24th. The cock bird is a last year's bird. One of my pit mates came and looked at them this morning, and he said he had never seen better and bigger birds in his life; and he is an old fancier. I never had a bird in my life before this year. I am having good and bad luck. I bought another pair of Yorkshires, which I have had for six weeks. I paired them, and the hen paired all right, and made a nest with the help of the cock bird. She also sat in the nest for three days, but there were no signs of any eggs. I told my mate of it, and he told me to give her some castor oil and put some olive oil on her vent. He said she was egg-bound. A Miner.

[Our correspondent, "Miner," should keep a copy of Cage Birds Annual by him. In it he will find given the full treatment of egg-binding and other ailments which affect birds. —Editor.]

Lancashires and Lizards of To-day and Yesterday.

Sir,—I notice that "John Henry" is still asking for Mr. Fuller to give a lecture and bring a few specimens. He could learn more from Mr. Adams, Mr. Turner, Mr. A. Harden, or Mr. Fitton, of Oldham, in ten minutes than from a week of lectures from Mr. Fuller. As for some of his specimens, you will usually see similar in the bird-shop windows in a small wicker cage, 2s. 6d. a couple (Coppys 1d. extra). It looks hard lines for the Lancashire and Lizard Fancy to ask a 33-year novice to come and teach some of the young champions. I was sorry my last letter did not please Mr. Fuller. He seemed to think it all twaddle. His letters have been very good—so full of honesty. He seems to think Mr. Barber Clegg cannot teach him anything. He has heard Mr. House and Mr. Compston lecture; they did him no good. He laughs and smiles at others. So I think your readers will see that we have one good old fat-headed fancier to deal with in Lancashires. Mr. Fuller suggests getting Mr. T. Fitton, of Rochdale, to give a lecture. Perhaps he means Mr. T. Fitton, of Oldham. Mr. T. Fitton, of Rochdale, has not been born yet, and Mr. T. Fitton, of Oldham, has not sold out. He still has some good ones. You ask if I know that Mr. T. Fitton was the first to introduce the Crest into Rochdale. It would not be news to me if Mr. T. Fitton's great grandfather introduced the Crest into Rochdale, for I believe there were Crests in Rochdale even before that time. It will be news if you can tell me who introduced the Crest into the Germans; also into the Mules. I know where there are a few of these kind birds in Glossop. You say Mr. Fitton could tell the young breeders how those mongrels were bred that Lady Ripon showed, with black heads, wings and tails. That, however, was in the good old painting and faking and mongrel breeding days. You say the members of L. and L.F.A. must have thought you knew something, as they wanted you to judge the Club Show, but you did not want to judge, you wanted to show. I believe you did show in the novice classes. Did you win? No. You ask the Editor to give you space so that you may let his readers know that you know something. I ask him also—even if he has to make a double number of it. I am sure it would cause a sensation if you wrote about when a 33-year novice bred his first winner! I do not wonder at you saying Mr. Dewsnap's day has gone by, when you tell us you have thirteen out of sixteen birds of Dewnap's strain. What have you done with your own strain of 33 years' pure breeding? As to any of your friends writing to me to "show you up," you do not want anyone to show you up, you do that for yourself. As Mr. Fuller keeps drawing the names of other fanciers into his letters who are my greatest friends (I would be the last one to cause any ill-feeling amongst his or my own friends), I will gracefully retire, unless it suits my purpose to answer him again. I will be pleased to attend any lectures or anything else to hear Mr. Fuller's views. He will find my name and address in Cage Birds Annual. Alex. Donnelly.

Is it a Record in Canary Breeding?

Sir,—I notice in Cage Birds a correspondent wishes to know if he has made a record in breeding young birds in 20 days after pairing. I should like to say that on March 24th I paired a couple of last year's birds, and on March 26th the hen laid two eggs. On the 29th, she laid her fifth and last egg. On April 11th she hatched three young ones out of the five eggs. This therefore beats Mr. Speakman's time by two clear days. I might add that the young up to now are doing well. This is my first attempt at breeding. I wish Cage Birds and all its readers every success.

Defeating Egg-eating Hens.

Sir,—This is a thing I have found useful, as no doubt will some of your readers. I cannot draw a square nest pan or nest box, but they will grasp the idea when I have explained it. I let the hen build (or make a nest myself and place it in the nest box), and then I get a piece of flannel and cut five holes in it large enough for the eggs to drop through. This I tack to the nest box, and the eggs drop through the holes in the flannel into the nest. But mind and do not make the holes too big; also don't leave the flannel too slack, so that the hen can reach the eggs. I am sure this method will be a help to someone.

The Pegging of Chaffinches.

Sir,—In answer to your correspondent "Pink," who asked me in your April 1 issue of Cage Birds to explain the whalehone twig I recommended to Mr. Grantham for pegging Chaffinches, I might say that this kind of twig is no good for any other purpose but the pegging of Chaffinches, as it forms a nice stout and bendable twig, which is required. But it is too stout to lime such birds as Goldfinches and Linnets with. I think if "Pink" uses the bristles out of a stiff broom or even thin wire cut into short lengths he will find it much better than the grass he uses. I have used both bristles and wire with equal success. Also, in answer to Mr. Grantham, who asked me to tell him how to train Chaffinches to sing covered up, I might say that if his Chaffinches were singing stout when he started to cover them up, he will have some difficulty to get them to sing. I always get my Finches when they are "branchers," that is, in their nest feather; and I keep them until I hear them recalling their song. Then I start to cover them up, and hang them out in the air on fine days. They will get used to the handkerchief and come into song just the same. It is best to have an old bird to teach these young ones to sing, as they come into song much quicker. When you have once started to cover them up, never put them out of doors uncovered, or that will spoil them. You can uncover them indoors, but cover them up whenever you put them out. Also, hang their cages on the clothes line, or somewhere where they can swing about, and then they will not take any notice of being carried about when you want to use them. A seed mixture of two parts Canary, one part flax, and one part German rape, with a little hemp seed each day, is all the feeding they should require.

Notes on Woodpeckers in Canada and the States.

Sir,—I am herewith enclosing you a few notes on the largest of all Woodpeckers in the world, thinking they might be of interest to many of your readers. I have copied them from a paragraph that appeared in "Grit," a paper published in Williamsport, P.A., U.S.A. I may also add that we have a similar Woodpecker here in Vancouver Island, B.C., Canada I have taken several examples while out hunting (for mounting purposes). Its name is the Great Black Woodpecker, and it is identical in every detail to the one mentioned by Burnham, with the exception it's a lot less, being only about the size of a Wood Pigeon. Its colours are black, mixed with white spots, and it has a rich crimson crest, which it can raise at will. It has the same notes, shrieks, or squeaks as ascribed to its larger brother. This bird is not very common. Another variety of Woodpecker which is much more common here is a bird about the size of the European Missel Thrush, and greatly resembles the Missel Thrush in colour, only its colours are richer brown. It is spotted with round black spots on breast, same as the Missel Thrush, only the quills of all its feathers are deep red—a very beautiful bird. Another example of Woodpecker here is a bird about the size of a European Starling. This bird resembles the two largest varieties, being black in body colour, spotted all over with round white spots, and it has also a red head. In conclusion, I may say there is a large variety of Woodpeckers and Tree Creepers here in the large forests, but it is a difficult task to describe them properly unless you shoot them for a proper examination, as the bush is so thick and the trees so high. The extract from "Grit" is as follows:—It is a pleasant life that Graham Burnham has led for many years in Oklahoma. Burnham is an Indian with a white skin. A long time ago he built a hunting lodge of big logs down on the little river, and denned up to enjoy the delights of the wilderness. It is doubtful if anybody knows more about the fauna of Oklahoma than Burnham. He is acquainted with the haunts of all the furred and the feathered dwellers of the forest, and keeps his eyes open for such strangers as wander to this latitude. Perhaps his most pleasing discovery last fall was a pair of ivory-billed Woodpeckers, a male and female, which he mounted and sent to the Bureau of Biology in Washington. The ivory-billed Woodpecker (Campephilus principalis), says Burnham, is the largest type of the Woodpecker species in the world. It is twenty inches long and of beautiful black and white and red plumage. Formerly quite common over the Gulf States, it is now found only in Eastern Oklahoma and remote portions of Florida. A brilliant crimson crest adorns its head. Its note is a two-syllabled shriek or squawk, sometimes resembling the screech of the domestic hen; hence the frequent name of Squawk Hen. The ivory-billed Woodpecker is much more destructive to trees than the common Woodpecker, as he is greater in size. He not only strips dead trunks of bark, but frequently bores a hole in a solid live tree for his nest, in which from three to six glossy white eggs, about an inch and a half long, are hatched.

A Police Court Case.

Sir,—Would you allow me to ask any of your readers who have had dealings with a London man going under the name of Warwick Williams, or Warwick Raynor, to please write me? I may say that he is now at Macclesfield Police Station on a charge of obtaining birds under alleged false pretences. He has been remanded for seven days. Three or four persons have lodged charges against him.

The Keeping of Blackbirds.

Sir,—In answer to Mr. Hopkinson on the way to preserve the Blackbird's tail, I have not had any of the broken-tail variety; all my Blackbirds are hand-reared, and they have a large cage (a Quaker Oats box) to get round in. I daresay by giving them a large cage to sport themselves in, they do not damage their tails; at least, mine never have. Now, a little tip as to how I bathe my Blackbirds. I have a tub three feet long by 18 inches wide; I fill it up with water (rain water, if possible), and put two pieces of wood across it, one level with the surface and one three inches lower than the surface. I take the false bottom of the cage out, and then put the cage across the two sticks. The bottom of the cage will, of course, be on the slant; one end will be in about three inches of water and the other will be dry, so that the bird can walk into the water to what depth he likes. If there is a warm sun shining, dry him in the sunshine; if not, "square" the missus to let you dry him in front of the kitchen fire. Don't forget to scrub the perches, also the false bottom of the cage, before you put them back; and put a good thick layer of sawdust in the bottom of the cage. I may also state that I put one pennyworth of quassia chips in the bath overnight to soak; it not only keeps the red mite down, as regards the bird, but it improves the polish of the plumage of the bird. In fact, I have nothing but praise for this. I hope these few hints will be acceptable to Mr. Hopkinson; also to other readers.

Some Experiences of a London Crest Breeder.

Sir,—On turning over the pages of last week's Cage Birds it was a great, unexpected, and an agreeable surprise to see that you had considered my hen worth noting in your celebrated and up-to-date paper, for which I beg to thank you. She will be two years old in July next. Her first appearance was when she was shown in the South-West London C.B. Society's pair show in 1910. In the breeding season she had a clutch of five eggs, all full, and hatched under a feeder. The feeder's eggs were transferred to her. The feeder let hers all die, but this best hen brought up the three "feeders" and a yellow Crest-bred without a fault. The yellow Crest-bred is as good as anything I have seen as a young bird, but owing to an accident when about three months old he caught two toes in the wire and pulled out the nails and part of one toe, so much so that this prevented his appearance in the shows this last autumn. Referring back to the hen, she made her first appearance at Clapham in the open hen class, and was only commended, but in my opinion she was an easy third. Her next appearance was at Battersea open show, second. Please note this, that at this show she beat the third and other birds in the cock and hen class at Clapham, except Mr. Slade's beauty. So it quite confirmed my views that she was misjudged at Clapham. Her next appearance was at the London and Provincial O.S., being first and special there, as stated in your paper. Her next visit was to Wimbledon, where she was first and special in a mixed class. After coming from Wimbledon she did not appear to be the same. Whether the heat was too great I do not know, but she went partly into a soft moult, and this told against her at the Horticultural Hall, where she did not look as she had done, and I would not handle her too much to put her in show form, fearing that I might upset her for the coming breeding season. I am pleased to say she has now completed her nest, and I expect by the end of the week she will have laid her first lot of eggs for this season; and rest assured I shall let her hatch and rear the young, providing, of course, the eggs are fertile. Since cutting her crest and shortening her tail, she goes from one end of the cage (which is about 30 inches long) to the other. All my Crest hens feed well, and have not been at all sluggish or sleepy all through the winter. I have about twenty pairs of Crests, Yorkshires, and Norwich (about ten pairs too many). My cock Goldfinch is showing his wife (a yellow Cinnamon marked hen) how to go about preparing for her future maternal duties. My Siberian cock Bullfinch is carrying building material about. If I had the time and space, I should like to try my luck at breeding Goldfinches and Bullfinches in confinement. I am surprised that more country fanciers do not try to produce these specimens; I believe they could in time be produced as easily as Canaries, providing they were fed as near to nature as possible.

A Crested Canary's Remarkable Survival.

Sir,—These few lines may be of some interest to your readers. Last year I bought a pair of Crests—green crested cock and yellow Crest-bred hen. They had a nest, and reared four young ones. When these were about a fortnight old I was entering the bird-room about nine o'clock to see that everything was right for the night, and was much disappointed to find that the cock bird had by some means caught his leg in between the cuttlefish and the wire front, and was hanging head downwards, and there was blood on the cage front. I at once took it out—as I thought, dead. But as he was one of my favourites, I did not like to lose him without taking a little trouble, so first of all I cut off the foot and part of the leg which was broken, as it was no good trying to put it in splints. I then did the leg up with cotton wool as best I could to stop the bleeding. I then gave him a few drops of good brandy. Still there were no signs of life. He laid on the table, and everybody who saw him said he was dead, and called me cruel and suchlike. In the meantime I left the room for a short time. On coming back I found another friend of mine there; and, unknown to me (I did not learn if off him until a few days ago) he gave it two knocks on the head to kill it, as he thought it cruel for me to try to bring it round, which must have made matters worse. Notwithstanding all this, I would not be done. So before I departed for the night I gave the bird some more brandy, and wrapped him in a flannel; then I placed him in a small cage and put him near the fire. Much to my surprise, when I came down next morning, I found him out of the flannel and trying to get about on his one leg. I took great care of him for several weeks, and he began to improve. I have him yet, and can honestly say that of all the birds I have kept I have never had a Canary that could sing its equal. I have, I may say, had a lot of birds through my hands, having been a breeder for about twelve years. But the most amusing thing was that the Crested cock had never sung before his accident, and he is now as happy as he ever was. So good luck to the one-legged, one-eyed Crested cock, which must have been a very strong bird to have stood what he did, especially after losing such a quantity of blood. I am also pleased to say that my birds have just started nesting. I have, at the time of writing, three hens down on four eggs each. Four more are building, and one or two have one and two eggs each. I am also trying some hybrid breeding this year. These are the pairs I have together: Bullfinch and Greenfinch; Greenfinch and Goldfinch; and a very large Redpoll with Siskin. I have had these for some time, and they are quite settled down; so I hope to breed one or two good hybrids this season. I will let you know how things go on later. I must also state that I am a great follower of your valuable paper Cage Birds, and I always long for Saturday to come round, as I spend many an enjoyable hour reading it.

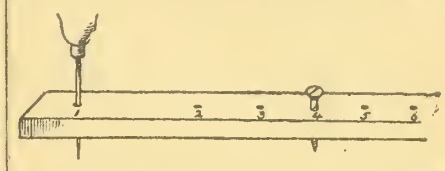
SOMETHING FOR NOTHING.

"Something for nothing" is a proposition that appeals to everybody, but any such offer is rightly looked on with suspicion by sensible folk as merely likely to leave them with the "nothing" end of the stick. But the enthusiastic breeder of Hybrids is on as nearly a "something for nothing" proposition as is likely to materialise in this "vale of tears." It is possible for birds costing but a few pence to produce birds worth as many pounds. It is an easy possibility, too. And a cheap one. Elaborate arrangements in the way of cages and rooms are unnecessary. Bullfinches, Linnets, Goldfinches, and Greenfinches cost but a few pence. Success with them only depends upon good advice and good methods, and success must come if you follow the directions so simply yet thoroughly given in "Cage Bird Hybrids," the monumental work of that great expert and judge, Mr. Chas. Houlton. It is published by Cage Birds (154, Fleet Street, London), beautifully bound in blue and gold, at 7s. 6d. post free. Or, for the convenience of readers, the purchase price can be discharged by 2s. 6d. paid down now, and three monthly payment of 2s. each. Thus "Cage Bird Hybrids" is brought within the reach of all, and should be in the possession of every breeder. It deals with every question of mating, feeding, breeding, moulting, exhibiting, and management generally. It is magnificently illustrated with sixteen coloured plates and a wealth of art drawings. Send us your order for a copy of this great work at once. Remember, it puts you on the right road to practically get "something for nothing."

I shall not need to advertise any longer in "CAGE BIRDS" this season, as I have sold out after the second advert. appeared. J. C. Banks (Great Harwood)

I am very well pleased with the results of my advert. in "CAGE BIRDS," and enclose you a P.O. for a continuance of my advt.—S. Parker (Morecambe).



I beg to tender you my very best thanks for the prompt attention given to my advertisements which I have inserted in your paper, "CAGE BIRDS," from time to time. They have proved very valuable, for I have had more enquiries than I could supply birds. I could have sold my stock twice over.—Oliver Priestley (Bradford).

A Round Hole Cutter.

Sent by Mr. F. C. Seal, 21, Mount Terrace Tydfil's Well, Merthyr Tydfil.

Here is an idea for cutting round holes in cages, etc. It will cut any decent timber up to half-inch thick. First procure a piece of hard wood for preference 12in. long, 1in. wide, and ½-inch thick. Then you want a bradawl about ⅛in. thick, and a screw 1in. by No. 10. The bradawl must be filed on the taper and filed for about half-inch up to make it middling thin. You place the bradawl in hole No. 1 and insert a screw in any hole from 2 up to 8; then screw down tight to the timber you want to cut the hole in. Then push the bradawl down about 1-16th of an inch. Then revolve the piece of hard wood on the screw, when you will find it will cut a treat. Push the bradawl down a shade as you find it cutting. When it has cut half-way through, reverse it, and you will find you have an expansive bit as good as if you paid 7s. 6d. for it—it will cost about 4d. to make. The holes 2 to 8 represent the centres of circles two inches in diameter to eight inches.—F. C. Seal.

No. 503.
A Mite-proof Nest-box and Stand.

Sent by Mr. A. Barnes, "Doric," Hughenden Road, High Wycombe.

I enclose sketch of a mite-proof nest box and stand, as made and used by me with every success. The construction of this stand is very simple, and the cost very small. The base of stand is 5in. by 5in. by 1¼in. thick. First make a mortise in centre, 2in. by 2in. by ½in. deep. In the centre of this prepare another mortise to receive the stem, which is 1in. square tenon stem; allow same to go through so that stem can be wedged on the underside of base piece. It will be noticed when stem is fixed in position there is formed at the bottom of the stem on all four sides a cavity or moat ½in. wide and ½in. deep; this I about half-fill with insect powder, which effectually bars the red mite from gaining access to the nest above. I make my nest boxes 4½in. square by 2in. deep, outside measurement; these I perforate with ⅜in. holes, as per sketch. I make a shallow tray about ⅜in. deep, into which fits the nest box. I fix tray to stem at a suitable height, and then bore about 8 holes through nest box and tray for ventilation, and with the exception of two coats of enamel, it is complete. I enamel same colour as the interior of the cage. Place stand in cage, so that the nest box is quite 2in. clear from any part of the cage; by so doing, it prevents the red mite from getting at the nest, and also prevents the old birds from soiling the back or sides of the cage. The earthenware nest pan and wire hanger can be utilised instead of the nest box, but personally I prefer the nest box as I do not think the pans are sufficiently ventilated. I may add that I successfully reared all the birds hatched out, although I had to contend with what some would call a "sweating" hen.—A. Barnes.

Allow me to thank you for your life-like drawing of my wing-marked dark Crest, appearing on the front page of your valuable paper, Cage Birds, of April 22nd.—J. Marshall (Portsmouth).

I find Cage Birds Annual a most useful book. It ought to be found in every bird fancier's room. Also our beautiful book, "Our Canaries," which comes out monthly, is the finest and handiest book I have ever come across. I wish Cage Birds every success.—A. E. Jeffries, of Messrs. CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

My Experiences in Mule and Hybrid Breeding.

By J. WORSLEY (Northampton).

Everything has a beginning, and this is how my Mule and Hybrid breeding experiences came about:—

I had one or two pairs of Canaries in a room in the house. One hen, a marked Cinnamon, wanting to go to nest early, I paired her, and she started laying before the week was out. She hatched four youngsters, fed them well for the first day, and then sat on them till they died—"sweated them," as it is termed. As soon as I took them away she started building again, and went through the same performance.

To say that I was excited with the hen is "putting it mild," as, being a novice, I thought it was entirely her fault; so in my excitement I took the hen and cage out of doors, hanging it so that it faced due north, with only the house that came back to ours to protect it from the wind. Having a Goldfinch, I put him with her, saying when I hung them up: "There, do what you like; I've had enough of you." Well, she soon went to nest and laid four eggs. I did not trouble to take the Finch away, as he did not seem to take any notice of the hen or eggs; but after eight days I thought I would look at them, when, to my surprise, I found three of the eggs fertile. I took the Finch away, and she hatched and reared the three, I having no trouble with her. She afterwards hatched and reared four more, and to show the difference in the hen, indoors to outdoors, I have watched her running after the youngsters, to feed them, when they seemed as if they did not want feeding; and persisted until they took it.

The Offspring of this Pair.

Amongst these seven Mules there was one which had a few light feathers. This fired my ambition for light Muling. Having a certain Canary book, I looked it up, and found I had to get some Sib blood. I bought a yellow Sib cock, and a yellow hen with a bit of Lancashire in her (I may say that my ambition was a clear yellow mule).

The offspring of this pair was two buff cocks, one buff hen, and one yellow cock. I paired the yellow cock to the buff hen. The offspring bred me several variegated birds. The best I put in a 12s. 6d. selling class at a show; it took third prize, and was claimed. The daughter of this hen bred me a nearly evenly marked mule, not good enough for strong competition; so I put him in a 30s. selling class at the Crystal Palace Show; that was also claimed, but I am still looking for my clear yellow mule.

A £5 Lure.

During this time I heard of the Greenfinch-Bullfinch cross, and it was whispered that you could get £5 for one of any description you managed to breed. I think I must have had an idea that it was easy to get them (I mean the £5). Anyway, as the parents were cheap enough to buy, I tried it, putting a pair in an ordinary breeding cage out of doors, simply with the wooden nest box in. The Greenfinch quickly made up his mind, went and sat in the box, and called to his mate. It was not very long before I saw them pair.

My excitement was at fever heat; I could hear the jingle of those gold coins in my pocket. This went on for some time, and I rose very early in the morning so as to save the eggs from getting broken (as the hen made no attempt at building). Alas! no eggs were laid; so one day, seeing Mr. J. Nason, I asked him if it were possible for birds to pair and then have no eggs. "Certainly it is," he said, and my hopes sank to zero.

To show how I felt, I did a thing that was very foolish—I took the hen with me into the country and let her go, saying, "If you won't breed any Hybrids yourself, go and breed some hens that will." I should not have done so, but should have put them in a larger cage, and possibly I might have been successful.

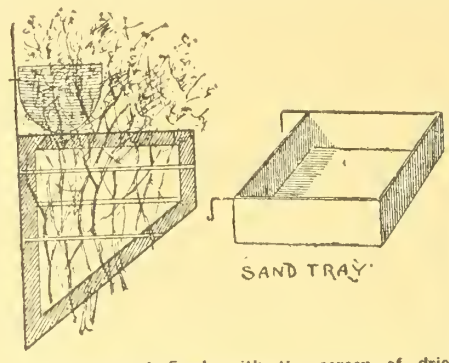
Another Strong Start.

Next year I went into it strong, buying another pair or two. One of the Greenfinches I bought out of curiosity; I had not seen one the same colour before, or even since. It was a thorough grass green. I did not know what effect it would have on the progeny—in fact, I did not consider it at all, simply buying what came first. But fortune favoured me this time: it was an ideal bird.

I put them into a cage 4ft. long by 2ft. high, and 13 inches from front to back. I placed the cage in a place built in the garden. For the bottom of the cage I used sawdust; I have tried other things, but find nothing is so clean as sawdust, which I have two or three inches thick. Underneath the perches (which are low down) I heaped the sawdust in ridges, so that the eggs might roll gently down. I fixed different nest boxes in the cage, but the birds did not take any notice of them.

The food I gave was Canary and hemp seeds, as I found that the only thing the Greenfinch would feed the hen on was hemp. As soon as I put any hemp in the cage the hen would immediately go to it, only to be driven away by the Greenfinch, who would eat as fast as he could; then, when finished, he would jump on to a perch, call to his mate, and feed her till it was all gone, then he would go and have some more for himself. He was a thorough gentleman.

With the hemp I gave plenty of green food. First, as I cannot get the buds of fruit trees, I give plenty of hawthorn buds, just before the leaves come out. Both birds will eat an enormous amount of these. After the hawthorn buds I give the heads of dandelions, just before the seeds are ripe. The more you can give them of these the better for the birds. The next best is shepherd's purse. You cannot give them too much of any of these three.



The Sand Difficulty.

Sand was a difficult problem; to put it on the bottom of the cage in any receptacle was only to get it covered with sawdust. So I made a box similar to a nest box, five inches square by one inch deep, and hung it on the inside of the cage on a level with the perches, by the same means that you hang on a seed box. I put a good layer of sand in the box to start with; then I added a good pinch daily. At the end of the week I emptied the box and gave them a fresh supply, as, although there was plenty left, the birds had had all they wanted out of it. I also gave them some rather large grit, as it is surprising what size grit the Greenfinch will eat.

This time the hen started laying, the first egg being dropped straight into the drinking water from a high perch, which I had unfortunately overlooked. Of course, it broke, and, what was most annoying, it appeared to be a fertile one. Out of the whole lot laid that season, only one was good.

The hen Canary I put them under sat for fifteen days, and, not knowing what to do with the fertile egg, I cracked it, and found to my sorrow I had been too hasty. It looked as if it wanted two more days to hatch it out, making seventeen days in all. Whether the hen had sat close enough I do not know, but I made up my mind I would never crack another egg, even if the hen sat for three weeks.

The same season I was offered a hen Greenfinch that had been reared by a Canary, and as I had not a cock Canary to spare, I put her with a very fine cock Linnet in an ordinary breeding cage. She was always carrying building stuff about, but never built a nest. Notwithstanding this, she laid several eggs in the nest box. Out of these I reared one young one—a cock bird—which showed the parentage well, but I did not think much of it, and exchanged it for a very ordinary cock Canary. That was another mistake of mine, for the next season this same bird turned out a very fine one, being colour fed and taking a high place in the prize list at our local show.

A More Fortunate Season.

The next season I was more fortunate. The first round the hen Bullfinch laid six eggs, but only one was fertile. I put them under a little hen Canary, about the size of a Hartz Roller, but a good feeder. She hatched the good egg, and in about sixteen days the young Hybrid came out of the nest.

I was surprised and disappointed, for it was nothing to look at; in fact, I christened it "The Little Nigger" (There was a photo of one in Cage Birds birthday number of 1909, by Mr. R. J. Cook, but mine had a bit more of the Bullfinch look with it.) I made a big fuss of "The Little Nigger," and nearly spoilt it for exhibiting, for, instead of showing itself off, it would come to the front to see what tit-bit you had got for it. It used to amuse me when feeding, for the hen Canary, being so small, used to get her beak right in the wide beak of the "Nigger," and it would close it and pull her off the perch till she was almost afraid to feed it.

Fortunately, it was soon able to feed itself, but in the future I shall always have larger hens for feeding.

This one was reared upon the following food:—I took the yolks of four eggs and a piece of butter the size of a walnut and beat them up together, adding enough flour to make a cake; then I baked it lightly. When it is two days old you can start using it. It will keep a long time. It gets very hard, but you can grind it up and slightly moisten it. I grind mine in an old coffee mill (I might say I also put all my dried egg shells through the same mill).

An Exceptionally Good Bird.

The green stuff I used was the seeded heads of chickweed—no leaves. These I gave in small quantities three times a day from the beginning of the young one being hatched.

This bird turned out exceptionally good. I exhibited him at our show in a mixed class, "any other variety Canary or Mule," and he took third, a ticked Mule being first, a Cinnamon Canary second, and then mine, another of the same cross being in the class.

I was disappointed, and, being asked some time after whether I would sell it, I did so, asking, as I found afterwards, a third of its value. If I had only sent to Cage Birds for advice as to its worth, I should have had an unbiassed opinion, and three times the money. The next week he took first and special at Lincoln, and the same at Coventry the following week, and a lot more that season. The next season he proved to be the second best of his kind on the show bench, so I do not intend to get rid of a bird in the first season again.

A year or so ago for the first time I managed to get a hen Bullfinch to build and lay in a nest. The nest was made as follows:—One piece of wood five inches across by nine inches long, and a quarter of an inch thick. I nailed a piece an inch thick to this (see diagram); then took half a cocoanut shell. You can saw these in half with a fine-tooth saw. I nailed or screwed this on to the inch wood, and nailed it to the back of the other piece, clinching the nail at the back. I then lined the shell with a piece of felting, and gave the hen a bit of an old mat, a kind of cocoanut fibre matting, cut into four-inch lengths, and well loosened it. She used nothing else, but none of the eggs were fertile.

Under the White Rose.

BREEDING operations are now in full swing. The troubles and cares are, as usual, coming forward in strong force, and almost every fancier one meets has some knotty point to solve. The other evening I dropped upon a little party of fanciers, and had hardly got planted before I was questioned upon the treatment of egg-bound hens. The questioner had a hen that looked like laying, but after stopping in the nest a long time, without result, it had gone lumpy and mopy, and instead of sticking to the nest it had gone into the cage bottom. No doubt prompt attention would save it. Advice was given to grease the vent well—as far inside as possible. This can be done with the aid of a wing or tail feather and warm olive oil. Then hold bird over a basin of boiling water, a thin cloth being put over the top to catch the egg as it falls—an old pocket handkerchief is just the thing. A tale was told of somebody who had lost a hen—? egg-bound—that had already laid two nests of eggs, and was on with the third. I think it must have died of a broken heart. Since then I have heard the question raised as to how long the birds must be paired to ensure the eggs being fertile. Here it is best to be on the safe side, if at all possible, but I have known them all hatch after being paired only three full days before the first egg was laid. Looking in to see a breeder the other day, I was informed that a certain pair had been together, off and on, for a month, and that they could not be got to pair up properly. However, on examination, the supposed hen was of the other sex—he wouldn't breed many off these two! This is a thing that even the most experienced breeder can do, as many cocks are very shy, and will not sing or knock about, so that, naturally enough, they are put down as hens, and it is usually breeding time before they show up in their true colours.

CINNAMON-MARKED Y.C.C. held their annual general meeting on Saturday last at headquarters, the Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, Mr. J. Hartley, president, in the chair. A fairly large gathering of fanciers was present. Owing to illness one of the joint secretaries, Mr. Grayshon, could not attend, but it is expected he will soon be about again, as he is improving rapidly. Mr. Allen, however, had all things in order, and the business proceeded merrily. The balance-sheet shows a deficit, but this is caused by the non-payment of the members' subscriptions; when these are attended to there will be a balance, and a good balance, towards next season's work. The working members hope those at fault will attend at once to the matter. The completion of the audit and the passing of the balance-sheet were left over for a month, so that this matter could be looked into. Are fanciers aware that there is an agreement between the specialist clubs, etc., to deal with this point? I think a meeting of that special committee would not be amiss just now.

THE chief business was the election of officers, and here a well-merited selection was the choosing of Mr. R. Garnett to fill the presidential chair, a unanimous vote being given to the proposal. The competitions were fixed, and it was decided to run them the same as last year—champion, novice, and junior novice. It was decided to offer the patronage to societies on the same terms in regard to classification, four classes to be provided, to read same as before. Next came the question, always one to cause discussion, viz., "to star or not to star?" The decision arrived at was to star again, though the number to be starred was increased to four instead of three, this allowing one for each class to compete for the specials. A proposition was brought forward that the competitions do not start before the last Saturday in October, as it was thought the birds were not really ready before that date, but after a great deal of amusing and interesting discussion the vote was cast, and proved in favour of giving the patronage to the best advantage, to any show that applied, irrespective of date.

OPEN NORWICH Plainhead Club have sent out their ballot papers for the election of committee and vice-president, these to be returned before May 1st. Special note is made that the committee is wanted to cover as wide an area as possible, and as the town for each member is given this will be a simple matter. The other officials were elected at the annual general meeting held in March.

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.
Post Free 7d.

A practical, up-to-date guide to Canary Breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby.

Contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing, and moulting the young, colour feeding, training for show, etc.

All the details of bird-breeding explained, while it shows the way out of all difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

Both Interesting and Profitable.

Canary Breeding and how to go about it.

By THOMAS BEERS (Pickering.)

In giving my experiences as a Canary breeder, I am well aware there are many more fitted than myself for the task, but these notes are not intended for the experienced, but as a help to the beginner. To begin with, I will suppose there are some of my readers who have made up their minds to go in for a bit of Canary breeding. The first to be considered is a suitable room. If there is a spare bedroom or sitting-room in the house I prefer this; though a good outbuilding will answer the purpose, but it must be sound, free from draughts, and well ventilated. If one is obliged to use the kitchen or living-room, let the cages be as far from the fire or gas as possible, and not too near the roof.

A Word About Cages.

I prefer full-sized double-compartment breeding cages. They have many advantages, and by removing the partition they make nice large cages, in which to keep the stock birds during winter. Good sound cages can be bought cheap; you will find plenty of advertisements in CAGE BIRDS. Or they can be made at home if one is a bit of a joiner; but I should certainly purchase ready-made fronts, as they are so neat and cheap. Don't forget to fit your cages up nicely with seed boxes, water pots, and egg drawers; also a piece of cuttlefish should be firmly fixed in each cage for the birds to peck at.

Don't forget the bath for hanging on the fronts of cages; this will help very much to keep your birds in a nice, clean, healthy condition.

Buying and Preparing the Birds.

Now for the variety. I should advise the beginner to go in for a good hardy breed, such as the Norwich Plainhead or Yorkshire. Purchase your stock birds from some reliable breeder or dealer. Pay a fair price for them and ask him to treat you well. We will suppose the birds have arrived; may be they are a couple of cocks, and three or four hens; or perhaps only one pair. For the present keep the sexes apart; let the cocks have one cage and the hens another. Don't cramp them in small cages.

The diet must be plain Canary seed with a little summer rape, and once a week a teaspoonful of hemp to every two birds. Give them fresh clean water every day. Even in winter I give my birds a bath twice a week on mild days; but I always have the water about the same temperature as the room.

Springtime Luxuries.

At the coming of springtime the hemp may be given twice a week, and a very little egg food two or three times a week; also a little maw may be given. A bit of apple for them to pick at is very useful. I consider February is too early to give the birds greenstuff from outside. Your birds should be in nice forward condition by the end of March for mating up.

About this time you must choose the partners. Do this as well as you can; try to remedy the faults of one of the pair by making up for them in the other. If one bird, for instance, is small, let the other be large. I don't advise putting two buffs or two yellows together. Put the cock in one side of the cage, and the hen in the other; and as soon as they seem anxious to get together, or the cock is seen to be feeding then hen throug the wires, draw the slide for a day or two. After this hang the nest-pan in position. Give the pair a little building material to amuse themselves with, and as soon as they begin to carry it to the nest give them what you think they will require. The best way to do this is to hang outside the cage a small net or rack containing a little dry moss and cowhair, so that the birds may draw it through the wire.

As soon as an egg is laid, carefully remove it, giving them a dummy in its place; do this until the third is laid. Then place them in the nest again. From this time the hen will commence sitting. If it is desired to run two hens with one cock (I generally do this myself), you may remove the cock bird now, and after a rest of a day or two put him with the other hen.

During the time the hen is sitting, let the diet be quite plain—just canary seed. I consider this very important, as if the hen is stimulated at all by other feeding, she often becomes over-prolific, and begins to nest again too soon—before the first nests are properly reared.

At all times, remember, the cages must be kept nicely cleaned out and sanded. Do this with as little disturbance as possible. On the fourteenth day from the time the hen commences to sit, the young are due to hatch. I always give a little egg food on the twelfth day—one part stale bread crumbs and one part finely chopped hard-boiled egg. This I give fresh three times a day.

What to Give Mother and Young.

When the young are three days old more bread may be added. From this time I always give them green food every day, also plenty of crushed hemp. Don't be afraid, if the weather is warm, to give plenty of green stuff, so long, of course, as it is dry. Fresh groundsel, chickweed, shepherd's purse, watercress, and lettuce are all good; find out which the hen likes best, and let her have plenty of it. I have had hens that appeared to use little else for feeding their young; they always do well on it.

Leave the young alone in the nest. If the hen seems a poor feeder you can do little good and much harm by disturbing them. The chances are she knows her duties better than we do, and you will be rewarded with a nest of fine healthy young.

If the hen has been alone, and she has carried out her duties satisfactorily; say, she has three or four young from ten to twelve days old—they begin to take a lot of feeding. If the cock is at liberty—he should be so by this time—I always try his behaviour by putting him back again; then, if he treats the young kindly, helping to feed them (in nine cases out of ten I find he does), I leave him to finish them off, and I put the hen to nest again. If you are only running one hen, he may as well stay with her for the whole of the breeding season. Of course, there are times when a spiteful or mischievous bird is best taken away.

As the young advance they should be carefully watched. Don't disturb them by taking them out of the nest. Don't be overanxious about them. Keep an eye on them, and if you see the hen starting to pull their feathers, put them in the other side of the cage, or in a small cage. Hang them on the front so that the parents can feed them through the wires.

Separating the Young.

As soon as the young are able to feed themselves, which is generally when they are four weeks old, they should be separated from the parent birds. I always put each brood in a fairly large cage by themselves for a week or so, afterwards transferring them to large flight cages. I run about ten birds in each.

At this stage I continue the egg food for a week or two longer, and twice a week by way of a change I give them a little bread and milk. I always give a very little crushed hemp, but I always see that the seed boxes are well supplied with good sound canary seed. By the time the birds are six or seven weeks old I have weaned them off the soft food, giving them canary seed with a little summer rape, and just a little hemp. Always keep the cages clean and sanded, not forgetting a piece of cuttlefish in each cage. With this treatment my birds keep very healthy.

In conclusion, I may say that I have bred Canaries for a number of years. I have always found it a most interesting and profitable hobby. Just a final word of advice: Don't forget to read CAGE BIRDS every week; let it be your guiding star, and you won't go far wrong.

A Quick Courtship.

I remember, writes "H.N.," a single Greater Whitethroat frequenting my garden for several days entirely by himself. After resting the first day or two and looking anything but bright, he gradually improved, and presently was full of spirits and activity, and although he did not enliven us much with his music, his pure white throat was constantly swelling, and working as though he was only waiting for the opportunity to burst into melody. Suddenly, from "nowhere," appeared another Whitethroat, a somewhat shy and demure-looking specimen. Our bird was instantly alive, strutting, singing, and pirouetting in the most approved love-sick style. And lo! on the fourth day they had commenced the foundation of a flimsy home in a snug corner of the adjoining meadow, where they successfully reared a small family. As far as one could see by almost daily observations they had no family "jars," although their courtship was as brief as it could well be.

Tremendous value for Everyone.

Are You a Canary Breeder?

In "C.B. Annual" you will find the following articles of the greatest use and interest to you:—

"HOW TO BECOME A SUCCESSFUL BIRD BREEDER."
By Claude St. John.—One of the finest articles ever written on this subject.
Every step that the breeder must know to reach the top notch of success is explained in the fullest manner.

"A CHEAP METHOD OF CANARY BREEDING."
By T. F. Morgan.—A specially interesting contribution, showing the way cheap Canaries can be made to pay.

British Bird Fanciers!

Here is something that will interest you—

"BRITISH BIRD-KEEPING FOR THE WORKING MAN."
By W. J. Pilcher.—Being the experiences of a Yorkshire working man in keeping the various species of British birds. The author tells you the best birds to keep, and how they should be fed and cared for.

"A YEAR WITH THE WILD BIRDS."
By H. Norman.—Being a review during the past year. On the wild bird life of the country.

Mule and Hybrid Breeders!

Are you trying to get that elusive prize winning specimen? If so, you will find the following article of great use to you.

HOW I PRODUCED MY WINNING HYBRIDS.
By J. Ovenstone.—A very interesting and valuable article. Gives the author's own experiences extending over a period of about ten years, together with an account of his system of feeding, management, etc.

Foreign Finches that are Easy to Keep.

An attractive addition to any aviary or bird-room is a number of these little foreign birds, and full instructions on their keeping will be found in the following:—

FAMILIAR FOREIGN SEED EATERS AND THEIR MANAGEMENT.
By J. H. Booth.—Dealing with some of the foreign hardbills commonly imported into this country, and their management.

In addition to the above special features, there are a number of practical articles which interest every fancier, large or small. They are:—

SOME DISEASES OF BIRDS, AND HOW TO RECOGNISE AND TREAT THEM.
By G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S.—An article from the able pen of Mr. Yates, which is of permanent value for reference purposes. It describes in concise, and so far as possible, unconventional terms, the causes, symptoms, and diagnosis of the commoner departures from health affecting the inmates of our cages and aviaries, together with appropriate medical treatment. It is a real book in itself and well worthy of the price paid for the whole "Annual."

BUILDING AND FITTING AN OUTDOOR BIRD-ROOM.
By Henry Meeds.—Advising the cheapest and best methods to adopt in building and fitting up an outdoor bird-room or aviary. Giving full dimensions for same, and how the internal fittings should be put into place to the best advantage. The article is accompanied by a photograph of an ideal type of out-door bird-room, which enables the reader to more easily grasp the subject matter of the article.

THE TREATMENT OF, AND MEDICINES FOR, AILING CAGE BIRDS.
A feature which conveys information that is of vital importance to the would-be successful keeper of birds—information of a kind but seldom available through the usual channels—telling the properties, etc., of most bird medicines, and how the ailments common to birds may be cured by them.

HOW TO SUCCESSFULLY MANAGE A CAGE BIRD SOCIETY.
By W. A. Dickins.—This article should be read by the secretaries, officials, and members of all cage bird societies, dealing out to them, as it does, many helpful hints on the successful management of a society.

The Most Reliable Authority on Bird Culture.

In addition there are numerous art and other illustrations of the peerage of 1910 in the Bird World. A lovely Coloured Plate of the sensation of the season, the Dartford Warbler, claimed at the Palace for 12 Guineas. FOREIGN BIRDS—continued.

"BUDGERIGARS and Cockatiels: How to Keep, Feed, Breed, and Teach to Talk." By C. P. Arthur. This handbook is written by a specialist in the keeping of these 2 popular varieties of foreign birds; the information given in it is of a most practical and concise nature, and no keeper of these birds can afford to be without a copy; price, 6d. post free: From the Publisher, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

JUST ARRIVED.

A big consignment of Grey and Green Parrots, price 25/-, 35/-, and 50/- each, every bird guaranteed to talk; trade supplied: W. Smith, German House, Tib-st, Manchester.

BREEDING HUSKS

for Budgerigars, etc., my "Improved Secure" husks, as advertised and sold by me for 20 years, to the largest breeders, dealers, public and private parks, and Zoos, still lead the way. They remain unequalled, producing better results than any other nest. "Feathered World" says: "Undoubtedly the new husks are very superior to the old for Budgerigars." "Exchange and Mart" says: "The best husks we know of are those sold by Mr. Harper." Surely these are convincing testimonials, as regards their superiority: 4/6 per dozen; smaller quantities, 5d. each; try them once: Harper, Husk Importer, Wolverhampton.

MISS. ALICE ROSEY.

Budgerigars, finest possible, outdoor bred, selected matched breeding pairs, 6/-; over 1,000 foreign birds, from clean, well-kept aviaries, from 1/6 pair, price list free: Miss Rosey, Rosemary House, Eastbourne.

COKERNUT HUSK NESTS

For Budgerigars and all foreigners, Pearson's nests have a world-wide reputation for utility, durability, and cheapness, 2/-, 4/-, 6/- dozen; giant husks, only procurable from me, 12/ dozen; sample set of three for 1/-; try these; wholesale orders at rock bottom prices: Pearson Wholesale Cokernut Merchant, Greenwich Market.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

A STANDARD WORK.

This is a standard work. It deals with the most fascinating section of the cage bird cult. Its author has the highest reputation. It covers the ground completely. There are 128 pages, sixteen coloured plates, and many art illustrations. The combined brains of Mr. Charles Houlton and Mr. H. Norman have produced a work that will live for ever. A permanent record of human achievement in cage bird culture. What is a Hybrid? The most interesting form of cage bird in existence. Why is Cage Bird Hybrids the most delightful and fascinating book on the subject ever published? Mr. Houlton has given the result of a lifetime's experience. He has a practical pen, and his splendid exposition of the art and practice of hybrid breeding is a national work worthy of a casket of gold.

MARVELLOUSLY COMPREHENSIVE.

First of all are considered at great length the question of cages and aviaries for hybrids. All the various methods of housing are thoroughly and carefully described. So painstaking is the writer that even the perches are minutely detailed; nests and nesting material have a chapter to themselves. Mr. Houlton's special cage for hybrid breeding is clearly described and illustrated. All the foods, natural and artificial are enumerated. Egg and other soft foods and their feeding values dealt with. The selection of the stock is debated at length. The hens which breed light and dark exhibition mules described. The proper breeding procedure for Dark Goldfinch Mules gone into. Egg-binding and its treatment. The food supply. Care of the young hybrids. All these topics are treated with that experience and skill only an expert of Mr. Houlton's standing could bring to such a task.

Chapter VI. is a particularly interesting one. It deals with the production of the Light Goldfinch Canary Hybrid. Have you ever engaged in that alluring game—trying to produce such a rara avis? Mr. Houlton's remarks will entrance you and give you points that never before struck you. How to breed Sib. hens. The importance of Cinnamon blood. Results of in-breeding. All the various hybrids are dealt with in detail comprehensively and absorbingly. Chapter XXVII. is also a delightful one, and traverses the question of the hybrids that are awaiting production. The standard points of exhibition hybrids are set out at length. Right throughout this magnificent book on almost every page appear tricky little sketches happily illustrating the text. Mr. Norman is in his element. Every problem of feeding, moulting, management covered comprehensively. How to Wash Hybrids—Illustrated.

Carriage Paid on all Orders of 5s. and upwards. Obtainable from all Newsagents and Railway Bookstalls, or direct from

We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distiuctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction bas been completed. If a sale bas been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must he borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

SUPERIOR ALUMINIUM RINGS

METHODICAL BREEDERS aiming at success, must proceed on scientific lines by marking their birds with these first-grade rings, to enable them to identify the pedigree of all birds bred. Adopted and highly recommended by leading fanciers for years. CAGE BIRDS says:—"One of the best samples we have seen. Very light and beautifully made, with no rough edges." 100 for 2/9, 75 for 2/3, 50 for 1/6, 25 for 10d., post free. Consecutively numbered with or without year. Supplied with or without flanges.

Remember, these rings enjoy a reputation of many years' standing. They are the lightest, compatible with strength, and obsolutely the neatest on the market. Plain numbers, which do not fill with dirt.

ON VIEW—10 TONS ROYAL RED.
THE ONLY REAL COLOUR FOOD ON EARTH.

Read below for Proof.

Send your orders, or for new samples, at once. Sure to run short, and can't get any more this season. There's a great scarcity in new crop. Mr. J. E. Davies, Stockport, May, 1911.—"Sir, I bave much pleasure in saying that your colour food has during the past year given me every satisfaction, having secured over 50 firsts, also seconds, etc., besides N.P.C. Challenge Cup. This is second year in succession. Two firsts, fourth, and champion diploma Crystal Palace, 1911, and my birds were as bright a colour at Crystal Palace after being washed eleven times as they were at commencement of season. At Crystal Palace six out of the eight champion first prize Norwich." Never saw any colour food, only my Royal Red. Every winner in champion Cinnamon section bar one third. Never saw any but my colour food. Another big winner in Yorkshires, who won two firsts, seconds, etc. Mr. Ambler, Morecambe, writes: "April, 1911.—Sir, I can say I got a hotter colour from your feed than any I have ever tried." Scotland's greatest winner this last season. Mr. G. Mitchell, Brechin, writes: April, 1911.—"I bave used your colour feed for years, and have found it to be all that you claim." Wales' greatest winner, Mr. D. H. Tedstone, Brecon: "Sir, I am pleased to inform you that I not only won the Welsh Cage Bird Cup. I won tbe solid silver Norwich Cup, the Leach Challenge Cup scores of firsts and specials, etc." I could fill tbis paper with testimonials like above; which should prove you need not try any otber. TO ALL
Hybrid Breeders

And tbose about to start. Having bred Hybrids for years, and lost them all year hy year, like many other Hybrid breeders, I at last discovered, a few years ago, a diet, and was able to rear every bird I batched with this diet. I reared five birds with one pair—Goldie-Bullie. I advertised in CAGE BIRDS and sold them in very short time for the sum of £10. Now, I will inform everyone what this simple diet is for a fee of one shilling each. Tbis diet may be obtained without any trouble by everyone, or one person only, for a reasonable offer.—G. BUDD, 40, Norman Road, Newhaven, Sussex.

CHEAP BIRDS THAT HAVE THEIR CHARM.

There are some British Hardbills whose songs and sprightliness give a cheery tone to any home. It is possible to so treat these that captivity has little effect on their natural inclinations. You can still have your Goldfinch keep his perkiness, your Bullfinch his rich plumage, your Chaffinch his charm, your Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite all their amusing little ways, and your Linnet his grand song, if you know how. To obtain any of these birds costs you little, and if you properly feed them and manage them during hand-rearing, moulting, and breeding, you can easily get back your outlay many times over. What is the best way to set about preparing birds for exhibition, or for contest singing? You will find full particulars in any of the booklets which form a veritable library for even the humblest bird lover. "Nutshell" Booklets: No. 1, "The Goldfinch"; No. 2, "The Linnet"; No. 11, "The Bullfinch"; No. 13, "The Chaffinch"; No. 22, "The Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite." Post free 2½d. each, from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

A GREAT STRAIN,

and undoubtedly the severest to which the life of a bird is subjected is termed the moult. Moulting cannot be prevented, but it can be made easy and brought to a successful issue. If you do not know how to treat your birds at this time, you may lose them. Be guided by the experience of experts. There are good and bad methods of doing everything. Adopt the best in feeding and treating British Hardbills and Softbills during the moulting season. Get "Nutshell" No 12, "How to Moult British Birds," post free 2½d., from F. Carl, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL.

Linnets from the same place as the Champion Linnet of the World, 1/-, real gems, 1/6; they are singing grandly. Linnets taught by the Champion Linnet of the World, beating all England five times in succession, and winner of over 100 first prizes. He has also defeated over 3,000 birds, and always crowded rooms to hear him sing. Linnets, with polished cage and book of secrets, 3/6; a few with best quality notes, 4/6. I am the originator of the above, and I have had imitators from all parts of the country, who boast of winning prizes, and never win any. I have the largest muling Linnets in Englands, 2/- each; for Mulers I hold the world's record; cock Larks, 1910 birds, singing with full voice indoor or outdoor, a treat to hear, 2/6, 3/6; and a few with best quality notes, cannot be beaten, 5/-. A Little Knowledge is a Dangerous Thing, and will certainly not bring you success if you are beginning the hobby of Canary breeding. It is ever so much more pleasing to turn your hobby to practical benefit to yourself than to aimlessly dabble with and make a hash of it. Do the latter and you might just as well have flung away the money you laid out. Get a sound knowledge of the branch of the bird Fancy you are about to adopt, and you will profit by it. You can do so for 6d. A book specially written for the beginner is Claude St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners." It has many helpful illustrations. EVERY BIRD A MODEL.

Good illustrations are an asset to every book. The illustrations in "House's Canary Manual," are by the famous bird artist, H. Norman. The matter in the book is as good as the illustrations. The Chapter on Roller Canaries is of exceptional interest to breeders. The illustrations show what to aim for, and the contents how to get it. "House's Canary Manual," post free 1/2, cloth bound 2/2, from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

clear a lot of stock quickly, but not much quicker than my regular customers clear my stock of high-class birds. Do not be deceived with small, weakly rubbish, for your money will procure you genuine reliable birds of unsurpassable quality. I receive thousands of unsolicited testimonials from delighted customers, and am sure to give you every satisfaction if favoured with your order. F. B. Frost, Esq., Newton, writes, 20/4/11: I acknowledge receipt of Canary in good condition; giving every satisfaction. I shall certainly give you my patronage. J. Jones, Esq., Aberystwyth, writes, 20/4/11: Bird arrived in perfect health; it is a gem; I shall have pleasure in sending more orders. A. Morris, Esq., Kilwinning, writes, 19/4/11: Many thanks for bird received; I have seen many birds but very few as good as this; everyone admires it. I will forward you more orders soon. H. Sweetman, Esq., Dublin, writes, 19/4/11: Bird arrived safe in splendid condition; singing lovely; am more than satisfied. Mrs. E. Cooper, Ashford, writes, 20/4/11: I must let you know how very pleased I am with the Roller you sent me; he sings beautifully, and is such a nice healthy bird. I could fill this page with such letters. If you want satisfaction, genuine, reliable birds, absolutely the best possible quality money can buy, you must send to the fountain head. It will save you such a lot of inconvenience and dissatisfaction, besides, look at the money you save. My customers do not know the meaning of the word dissatisfaction, for every bird I send out is well worth 25 per cent. more than the price paid for it. WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

An interesting lecture, facetiously entitled "Odds and Ends," was given by Mr. C. A. House, at the monthly meeting held at 6, The Broadway, on May 1st. Mr. W. H. Stoakley presided, and there was the usual good attendance, including many ladies. Mr. House, speaking on green food, said it had always been a great and searching question with cage hird fanciers, and his idea was that green food grown hard was the most nourishing, because green food grown luxuriantly was soft and sappy and detrimental to the birds. A useful green food was the sprouts from an ordinary hawthorn hedge. The moulting season was, he said, to some fanciers a bigger bughear than the breeding season. Many a good hird went over to the majority at that time. He thought hirds ought to he selected for colour feeding. A hird hard in feather was not likely to improve with colour feeding; the birds which took the colour best were those with nice soft silky feathers. Some fanciers did not believe in giving green food during the moulting season, hut he did. Then again some thought nothing was better than ramming colour food into a hird, hut it was not the quantity a bird ate, but the quantity it assimilated in its blood that told. If too much colour food was given it went through the body without being assimilated. Then the liver got out of sorts, and the best way to regulate the liver and ensure its functions being properly performed was to use green food, as neither birds nor animals could do for long without the fruits of the earth. A large number of questions were asked and satisfactorily answered, after which a very hearty vote of thanks was accorded the chairman by acclamation. During the evening five new members were elected; Mr. F. W. Owen reported the proceedings of the London Federation; Mr. H. Smith, the Secretary, announced that Mr. Norman had accepted the invitation of the Society to be one of the judges at the annual show; and the delegates to the London Federation were instructed to hring before that body the necessity of the Federation having jurisdiction over open as well as members' shows.—H. Smith, Hon. Sec.

PARKGATE & RAWMARSH C.B.S.

General meeting held, Sportsman Inn, Parkgate, April 29, when we had a good muster of members, with some visitors from Attercliffe, Mr. W. Turner in chair. We added one more to our ranks, and Mr. A. Hutchinson was unanimously elected Vice President. Decided, that we hold nest feather show June 24.. After the general husiness, we had a paper on the Norwich Plainhead hy our worthy chairman, Mr. W. Turner.

In opening he gave his reason for the paper; it was to cause a discussion, for the henefit of young members. He strongly impressed them to go for the "Bulldog" type, which he showed by a diagram. Bird should be hold, with plenty of front; legs short; to stand well over perch; head round, with the eye placed just over the upper mandihle; chest full and broad; wings close and short, meeting at the tips; feather silky, with plenty of bloom. These points would make an ideal Norwich. When showing, the birds must he in the hest of condition, hopping from perch to perch in a perky manner and showing themselves off as much as possihle. During the winter months, he said, he fed them on Canary seed, with a little rape and hemp, and he gradually brought his birds into condition. He made a point of not giving any green food until dandelion appeared, when he gave a little. Having briefly touched on signs of breeding condition, he said he did not advise early nesting, as a cold night caused clear eggs. As the hens came into condition he gave niger, with a little magnesia in the water, until the hens laid. During sitting he fed only on plain Canary seed. He advocated taking the eggs away as laid, giving the birds a dummy one in the nest, sitting the hen when the third egg was laid, so as to allow the young birds to hatch out together. He fed his young for the first three days on hard-boiled egg; gradually adding biscuit until it was half-and-half, with plenty of rape and hemp. When the young were three days old he always left them as long as possible with the mother, even up to five weeks if required, as he considered it best not to wean them away any sooner than he could help. Time now begining to get very short, he only touched briefly on moulting, colour-feeding, and getting up for show, after which he ahly replied to the many questions asked.

The Secretary then stated that Mr. Walker, of Attercliffe, would give a paper on the Yorkshire Canary at our next meeting, to be held May 14, at 8.15 o'clock. After this a hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Turner for his interesting paper, to which he suitahly responded, this winding up a pleasant and profitable evening. All fanciers in the district are invited to hear Mr. Walker at the club room, Sportsman Inn, Parkgate.—G. A. Watson, Secretary.

TONG AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held April 25th, Hand and Shuttle Inn. After the ordinary business a very interesting discussion on the Yorkshire was opened hy our president, who gave us some very good information, for about half an hour, after which a number of questions were asked, which were very ahly answered. The hest thanks of the meeting were given our president, and this brought the meeting to a close.—W. Walker, Sec.

NORTHERN LIZARD CLUB.

Meeting, held April 29th, Fawcett Street Cafe, Mr. Riseborough in chair. The proposal to hold meetings at various places was deferred as unsuitable. The secretary read a short review of the past seaeon, and was cordially thanked. Mr. A. Thomson (South Shields) was elected a member. Club's patronage granted to Blaydon. Mr. H. Seely (Choppington) has generously given two specials, one for most points in the champion classes and ditto novice; he was accorded a hearty vote of thanks. New members welcomed; sub. 2/6.—G. Davidson.

HIRST)Universal) C.B.S.

Meeting held April 29th. We had a good muster of members, and enrolled four new members, bringing our total membership up to 82, which is very gratifying considering we have had only four months' existence. Mr. Middleton gave a bird-washing exhibition, which was keenly watched hy novices and experts alike. Some of the novices tried their hand at washing, and their attempts were very creditable. We selected Mr. A. Dippie (Morpeth) to judge our first feather show on July 2nd.—R. Middleton, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting held Fawcett Street Cafe, April 29, Mr. Farrer presiding. Decided, to hold a series of nest feather shows on June 10th, July 8th, and August 5th. Entrance fee 3d., to be paid as prize money to first three in each class, less one-sixth, for purchasing a special prize for winner of most points in the three shows. Classes will be provided for all varieties, including British and Mules. A different judge will officiate at each show. Next meeting we will decide where we will hold our proposed picnic on Whit-Monday. Members are invited to suggest suitable places.—J. Jeffrey, Hon. Sec.

PENDLETON AND SALFORD O.S.

Meeting, held April 24th, Irwell Castle Hotel, Mr. Lythgoe presiding over a good attendance. Usual business gone through. Also decided that we have an outing on May 21st, to Glossop, by train, and then a ramble round the district. This brought business to a close. Mr. Lythgoe called on Mr. Woodhead for his lecture on the Yorkshire Canary, which he gave in a most able manner. He had a good number of questions to answer, which he did to the satisfaction of all. Mr. Turner moved a hearty vote of thanks, seconded by Mr. Clayton. Mr. Woodhead suitably replied, which brought a very pleasant evening to a close.—J. Critchley, Sec.

BANKFOOT & DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held April 25th, Mr. J. Taylor (President) in chair. Messrs. Burnett, Greenwood, Hainsworth, and Broadbent, were enrolled as members. Arrangements are heing made for a cricket match with Wibsey C.B.S., in Wibsey Park, May 13th; it is hoped all members will do their best to turn up. Also decided, that we have a ramble, to Hardcastle Craggs, on Sunday, May 21st, time and place to be arranged at special general meeting, on May 9th, which, by the way, is being called to consider the advisability of removing our headquarters to less expensive premises. Suggestions for the societies' annual outing are also invited for this meeting. Specials for our members' shows are constantly being added to at each meeting. A feature of our specials list is the provision for members who do not happen to be successful in the cash prizes at the various shows. A 10s. 6d. special, a 5s. special, and a 2s. 6d. special will he given to the members securing 1st, 2nd, and 3rd, most points respectively, with commended hirds, throughout year. Mr. T. Fortnam has also given a 2s. 6d. special for hest exhihit at July show. Specials for best cock and best hen at each old bird show will also he given. Mr. D. Lowe has promised a 2s. 6d. special for the member making most new members from April 25th to end of year. First show in connection with this year's competition will he held June 10th for which a good list of specials is being offered in addition to those above mentioned. The subscription is only 3s. per year, and all fanciers desirous of joining will be eligible to compete for all specials simply by conforming to rule re subscription.—F. Gelder, Sec.

YORKSHIRE COUNTIES B.B. & M.C

Fourth Annual Meeting.

Fourth annual meeting held Market Tavern, Bradford, April 29th, Mr. W. Cowgill in chair in the absence of Mr. D. Duncan, jun., of Harrogate. The balance-sheet was read and the working of the past year gone through. We started the season in debt to the extent of 85/-, hut by dint of hard-working economy and generosity of a few members we are pleased to state that the new season will be started with a halance in hand. As to the last show season, we have done very well, as the ten shows where our patronage was given yielded a grand total of 265 entries for British, Mule, and Hybrid classes. Another feature was that the shows that gave the best classification received the most entries and support; this was considered most promising. Officers were then elected. We deeply regret losing our past-President, Mr. D. Duncan, jun. (Harrogate), whose work in connection with the same has been most exemplary, and the only thing we can say is, "Well done! thou good and faithful servant." We understand that business prevents him from taking further office, and we only hope we have found a worthy substitute in our new President, Mr. Fred Archer (Huddersfield). Officers for 1911-12: Proposed by Mr. S. Dean, seconded by Mr. H. J. Chittenden, that Mr. F. Archer be president; Mr. Archer accepted the position, hoping that all who are interested in British birds would support the club hy joining. The following gentlemen were elected Vice-Presidents: Messrs. W. A. Cowgill, T. Inman, J. Sherwood, F. Hammond, H. H. Towers, and H. J. Chittenden. Auditors, Messrs. S. Dean and R. Halliday re-elected; Committee for Bradford District: Messrs. S. Dean, C. Ross, remainder being left till next meeting. Outside Bradford District: Messrs. B. H. Wilson (Bramley), J. Nicholson (Skipton), F. Myers (Yeadon), J. Wilson (Malton), J. Bousfield (Knaresborough), H. Stake (Brighouse), J. S. Clarkson (Halifax), J. Netherwood (Wakefield), F. F. Potter (Hull), Beattie (Scholes), Wilkinson (Yarm-on-Tees), Wood (Pickering). Messrs. J Lane and P. Jowett were reelected secretaries on the proposition of Mr. H. H. Towers, seconded hy Mr. F. Hammond, although Mr. Lane would rather have been spared the duty owing to pressure of business; hut he did not wish to he a stumhling block to the success of the club. It was suggested that societies wishing for patronage send their applications as early as possible, to avoid dates clashing, as we want all matter with regard to it in working order before the next meeting, I hope secretaries will oblige as early as possible. Proposed hy Mr. W. A. Cowgill, seconded by Mr. J. Lane, that ten shows he given patronage. Following gentlemen proposed as new members: Messrs. Martin (of Martin and Archer, Huddersfield), T. Clegg (Dewsbury), Sutcliffe (Holmfield), F. Allen (Hull). Will all intending members kindly send names and addresses to secretaries, so that their names can appear in rule hooks? Mr. Dean proposed and Mr. Towers seconded that the best thanks he given to Messrs. Lane and Jowett for their past services as hon. secs. Mr. Lane suitably responded. Also proposed that the secretaries get quotations for printing new rule books, etc., before next meeting. This brought a most successful meeting to a close.—Lane and Jowett, Hon. Secs.

NORTHERN B.B., M., AND F.B.C.

Meeting, held Lockhart's Cafe, 65, Grainger Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne, April 26th. A table show was held, and owing to the scarcity of entries there was only one class, viz., any variety. 1, 2, C. J. Petterson; 3, Geo. Taylor. Mr. J. Bertram judged, and gave every satisfaction.—Geo. Taylor, Sec.

MID WALES F. AND F.A.

At our last meeting, held April 24, Mr. F. Beard presiding, it was decided to hold our next annual show on August 9th at Llandrindod Wells. An excellent schedule was drawn up and four cups are to be put up for competition. I shall he pleased to hear from any fancier wishing to guarantee classes or give specials. Will anyone wishing to join the Society please send their names to me?—P. Muscott, 1, Boundary Terrace, Llandrindod Wells.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

Meeting held May 1st, when a good number of members were present. A lot of business in connection with the young hird show was transacted Then the question of holding an open show was thoroughly discussed. Eventually it was decided to hold one, the date selected heing November 16. Mr. J. Davis (Longton) was elected a member, which is now the strongest in the district.—J. Pitchford, Sec.

ROTHERHAM C.B.S.

Meeting held April 29, College Inn, Mr. R. Thompson, chair. Following officers elected: Chairman, Mr. W. Ducker; Vice-chairman, Mr. R. Thompson; Treasurer and Secretary, Mr. B. Bailey; Assistant Secretary, Mr. R. J. Smith; Committee, all members. We were to have had a lecture on British Birds by Mr. W. Dransfield, but through unforeseen circumstances he was not ahle to be with us. But we are hoping to have the lecture at some future time. We are having a lecture hy Mr. G. Browning at next meeting. Will members please note that the half-yearly contributions are due on May 27th, and must he paid according to rules?.—B. Bailey, Sec.

POPLAR AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Meeting held April 27. Mr. T. G. Hunt in chair. Chairman introduced Mr. A. J. A. Marley, who had kindly promised to give a lecture on the management of British Birds. The lecture proved highly instructive, and was most excellent in every way, and very much appreciated. At the close the members availed themselves very freely of the lecturer's offer to answer questions, and he was kept well occupied for over an hour in answering. At the conclusion a hearty vote of thanks was given most enthusiastically, and was supported by the chairman and two or three others. We feel very grateful to Mr. Marley, and have his promise of another paper at some future time. 33 members signed the attendance book.—H. W. Cook, Hon. Sec.

CINNAMON-MARKED Y.C.C.

Annual general meeting, held April 22nd, Market Tavern, Bradford, Mr. J. Hartley presiding over a very good attendance. The secretaries' report on Competition showed a very good average of hirds per class, all through show season; also the outside Yorkshire shows competition had been keen with several members residing outside Yorkshire winning some of the prizes. A good and healthy sign of the growing popularity of the cinnamon marked variety lies in the fact that a few members have joined the club during the past season from other counties. Regrets were expressed that the balance sheet showed a deficit on the year's work owing to the non-payment of subscriptions hy the members. After considerable discussion upon this matter secretaries were instructed to write all defaulting members calling their attention to this matter. It was also thought advisable for balance sheet to be held over for one month to allow all outstanding subscriptions to be obtained. The next part of the business was the election of officers, when Mr. R. Garnett was unanimously elected President—a most popular and well deserved honour to one of the founders of the club. He will he ahly assisted by Mr. H. H. Towers and Mr. B. Brown as vice-presidents. The following gentlemen were elected to serve on committee: Messrs. A. Hirst (Accrington), E. Clegg (Dewsbury), W. Richmond (Rodley), W. Crabtree, A. Cooper, W. H. Shackleton, J. Bailey, J. Greaves, T. Ogden, P. Drake. J. Hartley, W. Blakey. Decided, to run competitions as last year, viz., open, novice, junior novice, and that we offer patronage to 9 societies holding open shows outside Yorkshire. Considerable discussion was raised hy the proposal that the competitions he run as a sealed handicap, points for prizes to count only at 10 shows. This was finally agreed upon, with respect to the starring of birds. This "Hardy Annual" was present, showing as much vitality as ever. Eventually it was decided to star four birds, thus allowing one hird in each class to count points for prizes. Opinions were expressed that in past seasons our competitions were commenced too early to allow hirds to be clean through moult, and fit for exhibition, which brought forth a proposition that we do not grant patronage to shows held before the last Saturday in October; this was defeated and it was decided that competitions commence as last year. As the hour was late, and the husiness not completed, a hearty vote of thanks to retiring officers was accorded, and suitably responded to by our late president, Mr. James Hartley. Meeting adjourned until May 20th, 6.30 p.m., Market Tavern, when a record attendance is auticipated.—Grayshon and Allen, Secs.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should he regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

EDMONTON F.A.

At headquarters, April 13th. Members held their annual social, when a very enjoyable evening was spent. The programme of solos, vocal and instrumental, also recitations, was arranged by Mr. Parker. The pressure of Easter business greatly affected the attendance. The Association invites fellow-fanciers to their meeting on May 10th, Charity Schools, Church Road, Edmonton.—J. S. Jackson, Hon. Sec.

WEST BROMWICH C.B.S.

Meeting held April 25th, with a moderate attendance. Decided, to have two nest feather shows only this season, the dates being June 20th and July 18th respectively. Also that we have our annual ramble on May 28th, when we hope to see the majority of our members participating, as all who have taken part in those rambles admit it is one of the most enjoyable outings anyone could wish for, providing weather is fine. The destination will be settled next meeting night.—W. G. Andrews, Hon. Sec.

HULL C.B.S.

Meeting held May 1, about 40 members being present. Owing to the absence of the Chairman through family bereavement, Mr. Stamford presided. Previous to the commencement of business, the following resolution was moved: "That this meetnng wisb to convey their deepest expressions of sympathy to their chairman in his deep trouble through the loss of his son, and also extend the same to the widow and family." Samples of colour foods and marking rings were on view; and a very interesting discussion, introduced by Mr. F. F. Potter, on the rearing and feeding of young birds, then took place, Mr. Potter being fairly hombarded with questions, all of which he answered satisfactorily. The country ramble arranged for May 27th was discussed, the place elected being Barton and South Ferriby; full particulars will be announced in the Fancy Press on May 20th.—Ernest R. Ridley, Hon. Sec.

EAST HAM C.B.S.

General meeting held April 27th, headquarters. There was a fair attendance of members and much business was gone through. The chairman, Mr. J. H. Paxman, said the officials had to apologise for not having any lecture that evening. Four gentlemen had heen approached, and had disappointed at the last hour. It pleased him, however, to add that some of them had promised to appear at a future date, and he hoped it would give consolation One member spoke on the matter of Cage Birds League, saying he was a member. He further asked what the society intended to do re the League. The chairman replied that up to the present the secretary had received nothing in connection with the matter. But he felt sure the officials of all societies would in due course be acquainted with the League by the promoters. The last business of the evening was the arrangements for the society's ramble. This takes place on Sunday, May 14th, and it has been decided to go to Epping. A committee meeting will be called to arrange matters, and also to obtain a cheap railway ticket. Full particulars of the ramble will appear in next week's issue, and any fancier wishing to accompany this society should write the secretary, Mr. Fred Fox, 12, Sherrard Road, Forest Gate, E. The chairman said that althongh rather prematnre to speak of the first feather show, he hoped the members were having success with their birds. Judging from the smiles around the room, such is the case.—B. C. Smith (Club Reporter).

GRIMSBY AND DISTRICT O.S.

Meeting, held April 27th, Slatters Rooms. The lecture ("My Jamaica Tour") by A. Sutcliffe, Esq., was greatly enjoyed, and much interest was taken in the specimens of foreign birds shown. But owing to the time being limited, he could not describe them as he would have liked. A vote of thanks was accorded him for his kindness in describing the birds and their habits.—Towl Bros., Hon. Secs.

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

First meeting of the new Council held April 29, Market Tavern, Bradford, there being a good attendance of delegates. Mr. H. H. Towers, president, occupied the chair. The president in a brief speech welcomed all the new delegates on the Council, and thanked the members for the honour conferred upon him by electing him to that responsible position. Mr. Towers said he hoped hy diligent attention to business and hy showing an impartiality to all questions, he would be enabled to fill the office as satisfactorily as his predecessors, assuring the Council that at all times the welfare of the Union would have his loyal and unlimited support. The following business was transacted. Messrs W. Wharton, T. Fortnam, A. Morley, F. Hammond, J. Crowther, L. Dykes, and A. Huddleston were elected as a sub-committee for the ensuing year. Mr. F. Hammond was elected to the office of treasurer by a unanimous vote. Member's subscription fee for each member returned to the Union by the respective societies for the year was fixed at 8d. The resignation of Spen Valley C.B.S. was brought up, and after much discussion the delegates decided to appoint Messrs. F. Hammond and H. Hill to attend next meeting of that society to hear the objections raised, to report to next Council meeting, and to try and induce them to reconsider their decision; their resignation was therefore held over until next meeting. Also unanimously passed, to again give 16 gold novice medals 12 for the Yorkshire section and 4 for the Norwich section in the novice competitions at Union shows throughout the season 1911 and 1912. For the printing of the Union Hankbook, it was decided to again apply for tenders. The sealed tenders for same are to be placed before the Council at next meeting. All societies intending to have their show schedules in the Union Handbook will facilitate the business if they will arrange their classification as soon as the speclalist clubs have allotted their patronage. All intending advertisers in the Handbook should Immediately communicate with the secretary, the rate of charges being as follows: Full page 7s. 6d., half-page 3s. 9d., third-page 2s. 6d., quarter-page 2s., and breeder's cards 1s. The date for closing orders for same is left over to next meeting. Several items of intcrest to the Union were afterwards discussed by the delegates, these embracing such important questions as the supply of entry forms for Union shows, along with the Handbooks. A suggestion that a rule should he passed giving the Council power to deal with all new rules, and intended alterations before these were placed on the ballot papers; this, of course, would have to be passed in the ordinary course of events at the annual hallot another year before it could be brought into operation, but it is an idea which should not be lost sight of. A suggestion re calling Council meetings early enough for the agenda of business to be placed hefore the respective societies, and a suggestion for distrihuting Union Handbooks to the delegates at the Council meeting instead of sending them out as before, were also considered. This brought a very interesting meeting to a close.—H. Hill, Sec., 15, Settle-terrace, Thornton Lane, Bradford.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

At monthly meeting held April 20, it was decided to hold our young bird show on July 5. Judge for same will be appointed at next meeting, May 18. I should also like to bring to the notice of members that Messrs. R. Hyde and Co. are giving a special prize at this show for most points with four birds. Members can have particulars at next meeting or on application to myself. As time would not permit, my paper on the Norwich Plainhead was held over until next meeting. Will members kindly note I have been appointed secretary and show manager? With their help I hope to make our open show the best Cardiff fanciers have ever seen. I shall be pleased to see some of our members at next meeting (those we seldom see). New members enrolled at the last meeting: Messrs. C. Farrow and Lewis, both gentlemen of Merthyr.—J. W. Dummett, Sec.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Meeting held April 29th, Swan Hotel, Fountain Street, Manebester, Mr. A. Foulds in chair. There was a splendid attendance. Messrs. Roberts (Wrexham), Williamson (Southport), Betteney (Rochdale) and Barker (Bury) were elected members. Decided, to hold annual contest in Manchester, January 12th and 13th. Members are doing very well in the breeding line, almost all have young ones out. Mr. Mawhood has 17, Mr. Latham 9, Mr. Percival 20, Mr. Foulds 5, Mr. Turner 5, Mr. Leech 14, Mr. Wright 12, Mr. Gledhill 16, Mr. Howard 7, etc. At next meeting a lecture will be given on Bird Organs, by Tom Routledge. All members and friends are invited. These lectures will be made as interesting as possible. A series of lectures will be given, one each meeting night. Messrs. Foulds, Kremner, and Massey all promising to give a lecture. We want all members who possibly can to attend. We are pleased to see the headway the Roller Canary is making, all our members having cleared out their stock long since; and I hear many saying they could have sold three times as many. The Roller will in time become one of the most fashionable birds in the Fancy.—Tom Routledge.

The Shows.

LINCOLN.

At this show, held in the Drill Hall on April 29th, the Canary classes were cancelled, and only the British bird class filled. This contained an interesting lot of exhibits. Mr. Dickinson and his son made a good pair of secretaries. Mr. T. J. Ambrose judged.

BRIT. (14): 1, Work, lovely, rich coloured, grandly marked Bullie, in splendid form; 2, Lacey, fine bold Goldie, grand blaze, cheeks and collar,, nice bars; 3, Pickering, another Goldie, better colour and markings, not in such nice feather, which lost him first place; 4, Lacey, smart, nice headed Goldie; vhc, Foley, Johnson, Broxholme; hc, Miss Pickering.

GLASGOW & W. COUNTIES CLUB.

Monthly meeting and show, held Good Templars Hall, 122, Ingram Street, April 29th, when Mr. W. Connelly presided. The secretary was unable to attend, Mr. J. H. Adam filling the breach. New members admitted, Messrs. D. McNeill and P. Campbell (Row), J. Cuthbert and J. H. Adam (Glasgow). Classes for show to be held May 27th: Bramblefinch, Chaffinch, Bunting, Any Variety. Judging competition will take place same date, also possibly a lecture, of which due notice will be given. Messrs. A. Cant, J. Liddell, and P. Pettigrew acted as judge of table show, their awards all over being well received.

Halpine 3. May 7th, contest open to all England entry 6d., time singing, when we hope all Linnet fanciers will rally round and help us.—Jas. Halpine, Sec.

SPENNYMOOR.

Grand Linnet singing held Butcher's Arms, Merrington Lane, when 22 birds competed, and some fine singing was heard. Result: 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th, Mr. G. Ridley; 5th, Mr. G. Bell (Chilton). Judge, Mr. J. Gardner (Spennymoor). Book-keeper, Mr. Fairless; timekeeper, Mr. M. Brown.—W. Fairless, Sec.

IVESTON.

Linnet singing, held Mason Arms, when some good singing was heard—36 entries. Barras, 1st and 3rd, Puller 2nd. Judges, Messrs. Thirlaway and Walker. Next sing May 13th, when 10s. will be added.—W. Atkinson, Sec.

HARROGATE.

Harrogate L.F.A. annual Easter contest held Nelson Inn before a large company of friends. Some very good singing was beard from the 25 birds entered. After some very close singing the prize winners were: 1, J. Scott; 2, E. Baul; 3, E. Jones; 4, W. Slinger; 5, A. Deitz. Our President, Mr. Scott, presented the prizes to the winners, and we afterwards spent an enjoyable evening. Judges, Messrs. Scott and E. Baul; timekeeper, Mr. T. Wilkins.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Linnet singing contest held Prince Albert Hotel, April 30, when 22 birds competed for 3 good prizes. Result: 1, Chippendale; 2, Soloman; 3, shared by Sellars and Chippendale. Judges, Messrs. A. Jennings and our old esteemed friend Mr. H. Allen, who introduced to us Mr. Ben Midgley, of Little Houghton, near Barnsley.—J. Smith, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD.

Weekly Linnet singing contest held headquarters, Fitzwilliam Hotel, Milford Street, Attercliffe Common, April 29, when 21 birds entered for 3 special prizes (3 minutes singing). 1, Thompson, 78sec.; 2, Watson, 63sec.; 3, Bisby, 57sec.; Thompson, 52sec.; Spotter, 51sec.; Watson, 47sec. Sissons, Hon. Sec.

SALFORD.

First open Linnet singing contest, Salford (for time and quality), will be held Boat House Hotel, Oldfield Road, Salford, on May 13. Mr. H. Cootes, will give £1 to an entrance fee of a shilling per bird. Mr. R. Kremner (Manchester) is also giving a brass Canary cage for a special prize, and he hopes the Linnet Clubs will pay us a visit to make it a success. This is the first venture to form a club in Manchester or Salford. Singing to commence at 2.30 p.m. Any information will be given by applying to the Secs., Messrs. B. Wharton, 18, Mitton Street, Stanley Grove, Longsight, Manchester, and A. Stinson, 15, Lester Street, Adelphi, Salford.

LEIGH.

Globe Inn Linnet contest, open to all England, held at Elephant and Castle Inn, Bag Lane, Atherton, when we had a grand entry of some 50 birds; very good considering the sort of a day we had. The landlord was so well pleased that he gave us another date, the 1st of June. There is no doubt we should have had a record if the weather had been fine. We gave the usual four prizes for each class. Winners were: Quality, W. H. Topping (Blackburn), 1; J. W. Jones (Leigh), 2; J. M'Allister, 3; and J. Hilton (Leigh), 4. For time, P. Owens (Tyldsley), 126, 1; J. Aldred (Atherton), 117, 2; J. Hampson (Lowton), 107, 3; and J. Randels (Warrington), 70, 4. Judges for quality, Messrs. J. W. Jones, J. Gibbins, and W. H. Topping; for time, Messrs. R. Statham and J. Ellison; birdmen, Messrs. P. O'Neil and J. Murphy. I should like all fanciers to note we hold another open contest, Victoria Inn, West Leigh, May 13th, when I hope to see some of those good birds we so often read about in "C.B." I think our prizes are good enough for any fancier.—J. McAllister (Sec.).

Crossbills Stop to Nest.

In a spot which shall be nameless, in Eastern England, a colony of Crossbills is once more settled for the summer, writes Mr. W. B. Thomas in the "Daily Mail." Some pairs have young, some eggs, some are still building. In the past the Crossbills have migrated into England at wide intervals. Last year was the biggest migration known, and a very large number remained to nest. It has been announced that they had all left; but this is not so. In this one spot six pairs have been marked down, and it is likely that the search was not exhaustive. Why should not the young brought up in this congenial spot afterwards remember their homes, as the Swallows do, and in their turn bring up young in the same trees? Naturalists prophesy that they will disappear as in the past. But bird preservation has already won some rare triumphs, and we may at least be allowed to hope that the Crossbills will feel the influence of a kinder environment and come to decide that the random groves of England are quite as comfortable a spot to nest in as the carefully afforested areas of North Germany.

Secretary, arranged to hold their annual open show on 18th November in the White Hart Hall, and it is expected that judges will be fixed up by an early date. Mr. Sandison (Aberdeen) is to judge the Norwich classes.

Will members of the Windhill, Shipley and Dis. C.B.S. kindly correct their syllabus cards as follows, writes Mr. J. Cook, the Secretary: June 3, Mr. Jim Greaves (Baildon); July 29, Mr. W. A. Cowgill (Bradford); September 30, Mr. John Greaves (Bradford); and December 26, Mr. J. Wilman (Charleston)?

We have arranged with the following gentlemen to judge at our open show on November 11th, writes Mr. G. E. Wilkinson, Secretary of the Nottingham and Notts O.S.: For the Crested section, Mr. T. Heath; for the Norwich section, Mr. J. Trengove; and for British and foreign bird sections, Mr. J. F. Dewar.

Will secretaries of specialist clubs desiring to allot their patronage to Newcastle C.B.S. show on October 20th and 21st, kindly communicate with me, writes Mr. J. E. Atkinson, Secretary, 8, Trewhitt Road, Heaton, Newcastle. The judges are Messrs. Rohson, W. Mundell, W. Vardy, J. S. Clarke, and C. Houlton.

We have engaged Mr. H. W. Battye (Huddersfield) and Mr. A. Cochrane (Edinburgh) to judge our open show on November 15, writes Mr. R. Forster, Secretary of the Alnwick and Dis. C.B.S., and we have this year taken the Corn Exchange, which is probably the finest hall out of London in which to hold a bird show.

I received a letter from the Secretary of the Oldham C.B.S., writes Mr. E. Fuller (Glossop) to lecture on the Lancashire Canary. I know most of the breeders of that bird (cross breeders and pure breeders), and I am sure no one can teach them anything. My advice to all that want to know, is to buy stock from men that breed Lancashires, not breeders that use Crested birds. I may say that I have taken CAGE BIRDS ever since first brought out, and I have read all the fancier papers since the days of "Small Pets," but I think CAGE BIRDS is the champion of them all.

The Bradford East O.S. are holding two first feather shows (on June 10 and July 22), and four old bird shows (on September 30, October 17, November 14, and December 23) during the present season. A list giving particulars of these, together with the classification, may be had of the Secretary, Mr. H. Hill, 15, Settle Terrace, Thornton Lane, Little Horton, Bradford.

Allow me to thank all those who contributed towards the late Felix Graham's benefit prize-drawing, writes Mr. J. Forrester. It is with deep regret I have to record his death, as he passed away previous to the drawing on his behalf being held. The proceeds will be handed over to the widow. The winning numbers will be found published in CAGE BIRDS this week.

Mr. Mays, having resigned as secretary for Guisbrough and Dis. C.B.S., that office has been taken over by us, write Messrs. Winter and Hood, 93, Bolchow Street, Guisbrough. All society correspondence should therefore be addressed to us in future. We are having our first Feather Show on June 24th, when Mr. A. Wake (Middlesbrough) will judge. Our annual Show will be held on January 6th, 1912; judge, Mr. H. W. Battye.

This year we propose opening our show to Cambridgeshire, Norfolk, Suffolk, and Essex, and all fanciers resident in the district mentioned are eligible for membership of the society, writes Mr. E. L. A. Crow, the Hon. Secretary of the Lowestoft Fanciers' Society. The show dates are November 8th and 9th, with Mr. W. E. Greeves to judge the cage bird section. I shall be glad to hear from fanciers wishing to join.

OBITUARY.

Mr. GEO. CLARKE (Coventry).

I much regret to have to inform you of the death of Mr. Geo. Clarke on April 20th in his 71st year, writes Mr. A. J. Barratt, Secretary of the Coventry O.S. The Society has lost in him one of its most esteemed and oldest members, he having been connected with the Society since its formation, some 35 years ago; indeed, he was one of its founders, and remained an active member even up to the time of his death, which came unexpectedly after a few days' illness. Mr. Clarke was most kindly disposed, and was ever ready, when asked, to give help and advice. His long connection and honourable experience with the Fancy commanded attention and respect. Although he was never without a few birds, of late years he did not exhibit, but some years back he bred and successfully exhibited Lizards, Cinnamons, and Norwich. The funeral took place on April 24th, when Messrs. Lawrance and T. Gilbert attended as bearers, several other members being present at the graveside. A wreath was sent by the Society as a small token of respect.

It is with regret, writes Mr. Ernest R. Ridley, Hon. Secretary of the Hull Cage Bird Society, I write and tell you of the sad loss sustained by Mr. Geo. W. Oliver, our chairman. His eldest son passed away very suddenly on April 30th at the early age of 37, leaving a widow and two young children. I am sure all fanciers will join us in sympathy with Mr. Oliver, the widow and family.

Mr. Nicholson, of Shipton, will, writes Mr. W. A. Wilson, Secretary of the Leeds C.B.S., lecture before the Leeds C.B.S. members on May 6th, at headquarters, Lockhart's Cafe, on the Linnet and how he is stained and got up for the show bench. Mr. Nicholson will also include the Goldfinch, Bullfinch, and Greenfinch. This should prove interesting. We invite all bird fanciers in Leeds and district to attend.

At our next meeting, to be held at The Feathers, Great Chapel Street, Westminster, on May 10th. Mr. H. Gray, M.R.C.V.S., is, writes Mr. William H. Mugford, Hon. Sec. of the London C.B.A., to deliver a lecture on "The Generative Functions of Birds," with limelight views. The meeting will be open to all fanciers should they care to pay us a visit; an enjoyable evening is assured. The lecturer respectfully suggests that the meeting should be reserved for gentlemen.

Northern Lizard Club Patronage.

Will clubs desiring the patronage of the Northern Lizard Club please apply to me, writes Mr. G. Davidson, the Secretary, 6, Eden Vale, Sunderland.

London and Counties A.C.B.

I have been desired, through your columns, to summon a meeting of the founders of the London and Counties Association of Canary Breeders, on Saturday, May 13th, at 6, Old Burlington Street, W., at 8 p.m., writes Mr. R. J. Pretty, of the above address.

A Scottish Presentation.

At the close of the Scottish Plainhead Club's committee meeting on 29th April, it was incidentally mentioned that Mr. Allan Chalmers (Kirkintilloch), a prominent member and committeeman of the club, had taken unto himself a partner on 21st April, and as this was a fitting occasion on which to show our esteem and appreciation to such a worthy fancier, a list was opened there and then, and the sum of 15s. subscribed amongst those present. It is proposed to keep the list open until 13th May, so that any fancier friends willing to subscribe can forward their donations to me, when I shall gladly acknowledge the same.—J. BROWN, 599, Duke Street, Glasgow.

A Warning.

We are asked to warn our readers against sending birds without first getting the cash (or a deposit note) to a man at Ilford who is writing to our advertisers (especially those in the North of England) in the name of "Frederick Harris."

The Record in Migration.

The Arctic Tern is found in the summer right round the Polar Basin, having spread east and west from the shores of the Atlantic. In autumn the birds that have bred near the Pole come back again over thousands of miles of sea and land across the Continents of Asia and N. America, to spend the winter in the southern portions of the Atlantic.

Crow as a Rabbit Catcher.

Recently as the mid-day motor was, says the "Cardigan and Tivyside Journal,' on its way to Newcastle-Emlyn, a short distance out of town the chauffeur observed a Crow rise from a field by the side of the road, with something heavy in its mouth. The motor was stopped, and the Crow dropping its prey, it was picked up and found to be a young rabbit. Bunny was stunned by its fall, but afterwards recovered, and was carried into Newcastle-Emlyn, where it was requisitioned by a commercial traveller, and taken away by him, let us hope to be treated as a pet, after its hard experience.

Yorkshire Canary Club.

The voting papers for the election of officers for 1911-12 are now in the hands of all members, and are returnable to the scrutineers not later than Monday, May 22nd. By a printer's error, the name of Mr. Fred. Hammond has been omitted from the nominations (for committee inside Yorkshire); those desirous of supporting that gentleman for the position will please add his name to those appearing on the voting paper, and vote in the usual manner. The annual general meeting will be held at the Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, on Saturday, May 27th, at 6 o'clock. Will all members kindly attend?—John Greaves, Sec. and Treas.

The King's Pet Bird.

The King's favourite Cockatiel, Joey, whose illness was reported in our last issue, is said to be progressing as satisfactorily as can be expected. The injury to the shoulder has led to the formation of a sore underneath the wing, and the poor little bird is still weak. It is hoped, however, that, as the result of treatment, the wound will heal, and then there is no reason why he should not recover his former strength and high spirits, although the wing will probably be permanently affected to some extent. He is a model patient, and submits with resignation to the somewhat lengthy process of washing and dressing the wound. For some days he had quite given up conversation, but yesterday, says the "Daily Mirror," he inquired for his royal master by uttering his name several times in quick succession.

"Tom" and the Kittens.

A remarkable Parrot named "Tom" is, according to the "Daily Mail," owned by a Miss Eissner, of Brook Street, London, W. Miss Eissner has had Tom for over twenty years. He is her constant companion. She takes him with her everywhere—to the theatre, to cinematograph shows, to restaurants, and on journeys to the Continent. Some time ago Miss Eissner possessed a black cat, with which Tom became on very friendly terms. This cat was the mother of kittens, and the Parrot used to play with them all day, and learned to mew and purr like a cat. A few weeks ago a strange black cat wandered into Miss Eissner's house. The other black cat had long since died, but Tom thought it was his old friend again. The newcomer imposed upon the generosity of its home by giving birth to kittens. When Tom saw the new kittens he jumped into the basket beside them. Tom gained the kittens' affections, and the mother cat, in sheet pique, has now deserted her offspring and left them to the care of the Parrot. And so it happens that a family of kittens have as a foster-parent a Parrot. The bird guards them zealously. It strokes them with its hard beak so softly that it is a gentle caress, and it purrs to hem and takes them under the shade of its warm feathers. If lifts them gently and carries them about with ease. It scratches their litle heads and showers so many kindnesses on them that they do not miss their mother.

I would like to thank the numerous readers of "CAGE BIRDS" who replied to my small advert. of Roller hens in the columns of "CAGE BIRDS" last week. I could have sold dozens more, and I regret not being able to reply to all.—Mrs. A. Amon (Leyton, Essex).

By advertising in CAGE BIRDS, I have been enabled to dispose of the whole of my stock of Canaries. Your paper must have a wide and large circulation, seeing I have had buyers from all parts of the United Kingdom. I can recommend CAGE BIRDS to all fanciers who have occasion to advertise their surplus stock, etc.—James Lea (Chilvers Coton Station).

A Finch Stock Cage.

How to make a cheap yet practical cage suitable for Finches.

By H. NORMAN
"Cage Birds" Artist-in-Chief.

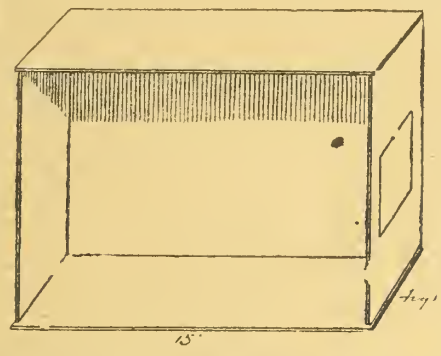
In this series of articles, breeding cages (single and double), nest boxes and pans, nursery cages, travelling cases, and a cage rack have been dealt with, their making, etc., illustrated and described.

Nearly all fanciers have among their stock one or two Finches, and these as a rule are either run into one of the empty breeding cages or are kept for an indefinite period in the ordinary back cages in which they were bought, a cage which we need hardly remind readers is quite unsuitable for any bird to be confined in for more than a day or two. In the following short article I propose to show how the novice can construct a neat, inexpensive cage in which to keep a Finch for any length of time; or what we might term an ordinary stock Finch cage.

There is such a thing as having a cage too large, which in a way is quite as serious a fault as having it too small, besides taking up valuable space. The former is frequently the cause of birds remaining wild, even after months of confinement. My own stock cages are 15 inches long, 11¾ inches high, and 8 inches from back to front. They have a front rail three inches in height with two perches the same height, and a door at the end for running the bird from one cage to another—a proceeding that has much to do with the taming of the inmate.

The wood required will be the same as used for breeding cages, that is, light pine. Do not use the three-ply boards, as, although these are very strong, they are hardly so easily worked, and soon warp and come apart if allowed at any time to get damp.

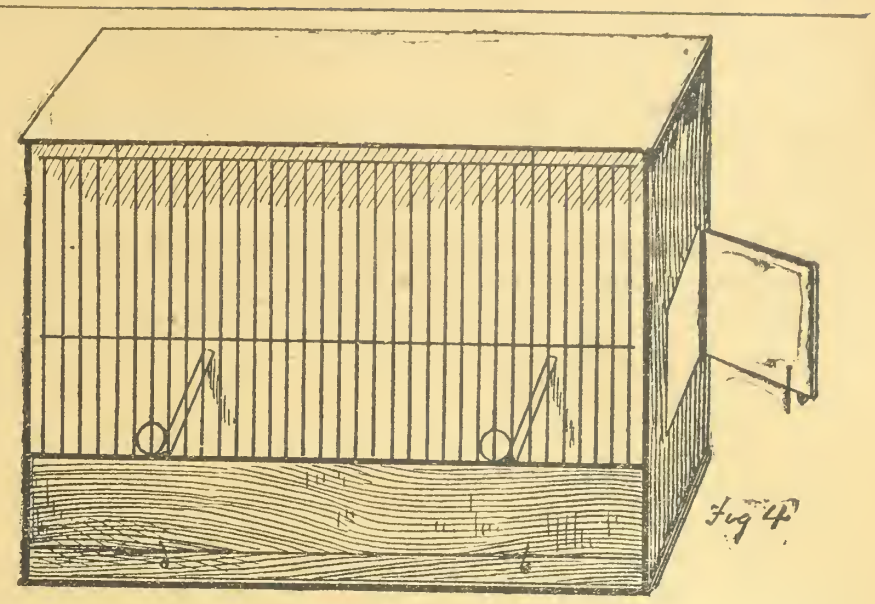
First construct a box; cut off two lengths (15½ inches) for top and bottom boards; this will allow just a slight overhang at each end, which may be rounded off with sandpaper. The two pieces for the ends will be 11inches in length, and 7¾ inches wide, that is, a quarter of an inch narrower than the top and bottom. The back will fit inside, and should measure 14¼ inches in length and 11 inches in height. This we can cut out of an 11 inch board, and can be all in one piece. Fig. 1 will assist the fancier to understand the above directions.



Now before we fit these boards together, a door must be cut in one of the ends intended for the right hand side of the cage. With the square and rule mark of the opening, Fig. 2, and with a bradawl bore a hole in each corner, and mark the opposite side. Cut this out with a sharp penknife, commencing one side, and, when half-way through, cutting at the other side. Be careful in doing this, as the same piece of wood can be used for the door.

Now take a 9 inch length of stout wire and bend, as shown in Fig. 3, and attach to the door to form the hinge. Make two holes at "A," push the ends of the wire through, and bend the wire in opposite ways at right angles on both sides so that it holds firmly. Put the door in its place, and insert two staples at "B B."

The door, it will be found, rides on the top staple, and the bottom one acts as a guide. Please note that the lower staple must not be placed quite at the bottom, or the door will not act easily.



A piece of bent wire makes a good fastener, which, if placed as shown in the drawing, falls naturally into position and is not so liable to get displaced by the bird as if fastened in the centre.

Nail the box together, being careful to fit the end with the door in, so that it opens the right way. Cut off the front rail, which is three inches deep, and saw down a three-quarter inch strip for use as a turn rail or front of a sand tray if the fancier thinks he would like one.

As the stock sizes of wire fronts do not fit these cages, they will have to be ordered, care being taken in measuring to allow for the fitting. The perches should be placed on a level with the top of the front rail and run from back to front; and one end of each should be placed near the holes for food and drink. A good colour for these Finch cages is green for the interior and black for the outside. When finished, the cage should bear some resemblance to Fig. 4.

Jim Overend.

Reminiscences and Experiences of an Exhibitor of 40 Years Ago.

Deals in Even-Marks.

Two very good even-marked birds were shown by Mr. T. M. Read, of Halifax, at one time, and scored well. One of these was a six-pointed yellow and the other a four-pointed buff; the latter was thrown out by Mr. Blakston at Huddersfield Show for being plucked about the eyes, and this so disheartened Mr. Read that he forthwith gave up the Faney. Mr. Overend bought these two birds at 30s. each, moulted them and showed them one year, both winning firsts under Mr. Blakston and receiving good reports from him; and the first time out, too, after being disqualified! They were afterwards sold to Mr. Thackrey in a team of eight, all even-marked birds, for the then stupendous sum of £36, this at that time being considered an out-and-out good price (Mr. O. says it was the first time he had seen so much "brass" at one time); and with these, when added to the good team of birds then in the possession of Mr. Thackrey, he simply swept the deck, being for some time the top man at all shows.

The sale of this team was a bad move on Mr. Overend's part. Up to this time he had been able to hold Mr. Thackrey a good one, but now he could do nothing against him, and it meant many years of hard work to get into the running again. But, as our friend says, you cannot have both brass and birds. A strain of even-marks is not made in a season. Messrs. Overend and Spedding have still very vivid recollections of two grand cinnamon-marked yellows, both four pointed, exhibited by Luke Belk in the 1872-3, and think they were the best they ever saw, present-day winners included. Indeed, the birds were the talk of the Fancy at that time, being real toppers.

The Formation of the Yorkshire Union.

Proceeding, we come to the time of the formation of the Yorkshire Union. The exact year, unfortunately, we cannot get at, but the first meeting was held at the Crystal Palace and the second at the Temperance Hall, Bower Street, Bradford. In the formation of the Union we have much to be thankful for. We have only to note the advancement of the Fancy, and particularly of the Yorkshire Bird, to know what theYorkshire Union and its members and officials connected with it have done. The great work that was begun by a few has been worked up to a high pinnacle of fame; the rules to protect the birds, the shows, the exhibitor, the breeder, etc., are all really the outcome of the zeal and forethought of those few fanciers who were instrumental in forming the Yorkshire Union, and one of whom is the subject of this article, Jim Overend, who for one or two years sat as President of that body, and this is an honour of which he is justly proud.

Mr. Overend was President of the Yorkshire Union in the year of the formation of the Yorkshire Canary Club, and he did not take kindly to the latter idea. As a matter of fact, he thought the Club would work against the Union, though he has seen since that the work was vastly different and instead of being antagonistic was really helping on the work of the advancement of the Fancy, which has been proved many times over by the success gained by the two societies. The Y.C.C. was formed at the headquarters of the Gt. Horton O.S., Mr. Levi Holmes being one of the chief workers and supporters, and the present secretary of the Y.C.C. was amongst those who took up the work and cares of the society in its formation; others were, I believe, such well-known fanciers as Messrs. Battye, Mundell, Holmes, Hodgson, Wilman, Bennett, Tindall, etc.

Prices on the Up Grade.

Prices all this time were on the upward grade, until at last £5 came to be a regular price. One bird our friend saw at Huddersfield was catalogued at £5, and as he had a few good ones at home, but thought this one could beat them, he decided to claim it, and the judgment proved to be right. The following week he got first, second, third, and fourth in one class, and the bird claimed was the leader of the team. Then two even-marks were shown at Halifax, and one of these he had often tried to buy, but the price asked had been £10, and this was too much. He would have given £5. Judge his surprise, therefore, on getting to Halifax to find that the bird he had wanted to buy was catalogued at a "fiver" and the other at a "tenner"—a palpable mistake that was soon taken advantage of, and the bird claimed.

Mr. Overend has officiated at a few Union shows as Judge and considers that it is the greatest strain of his life to give himself entire satisfaction—to find what he considers the best—and in a large show he thinks it a very hard day's work to do so.

About going in search of birds he has many tales to tell. Once, when out for a walk, he saw a fine Mule hung outside a house; he cautiously went to enquire the price. It was a lady who had it, and she said she had a better one inside, and would not sell one without the other. When he saw them he did not want one without the other, and the good lady said she would not take less than 7s. 6d. for the two; she reckoned one at 4s. and the other at 3s. 6d. He bought them, and one won at the Crystal Palace and was claimed at £5. Not a bad "spec," eh?

Wild-Bird Life.

Spring Migration.

The woods and hedgerows of our Southern counties are now inhabited by many of the migrant birds that have once more returned to our shores to nest, and to spend the summer and part autumn with us. When Nature is waking up from her long wintry sleep, and copse and woodland are daily becoming more pleasing with their ever increasing mantle of greenery, we welcome back the strangers from across the seas. The Cuckoo comes as a long-lost friend, and we greet the skimming Swallows and graceful Warblers with feelings of unwonted pleasure. With their advent we look forward to brighter skies and warmer, longer days, bright flowers and foliage, and all that makes our summer the pleasant time it is. This coming of the birds in March and April differs considerably from their departure in the autumn. At that time young and old birds gather in vast flocks and make their way to the sea-shore where they wait until a favourable wind assists them to their winter homes. In the spring the incoming birds are far less numerous. Thousands that left us in the autumn have perished on the journey or during the winter months, and only the breeding birds have returned to their summer homes. These wander over in small parties, and after resting, spread over the surrounding country. The majority, having the "homing" instinct, return to the place of their birth. On moor and on mountain, in field and in wood, by the stream and by the shore, the summer birds are suddenly but quietly returning to the haunts of their choice. To most of them this journey across land and sea must undoubtedly be one of hardship and danger. Contrary winds will occasionally arise while they are crossing, so that the poor little wanderers struggle to the shore in an exhausted condition. To some, such as the strong-winged Kestrel, the Swallow and the Turtle Dove, the journey cannot be one of overwhelming magnitude, and they probably romp over here with ease, but to short-winged species, such as the Golden-Crested Wren, the Grasshopper Warbler, the Corncrake, and others, the journey must be attended with considerable danger, and is doubtless performed in easy stages; and when they are crossing the longer stretches of sea, the journey must be done at a considerable height, where progression is far easier than nearer the sea level. In old times it was thought that some of these weaker species came over by an assisted passage, that stronger birds gave them a "lift" on the journey, but we now know that birds are not so kind to each other, and that each must fend for itself in the passage to their summer haunts.

A Much "Wanted" Bird.

One species or another of Partridge is found in every part of the inhabited globe, and everywhere they are eagerly sought after.

A Persistent Layer.

The Guillemot lays only a single egg, and if this is taken, she will lay another and another, but in no case does she rear more than one young bird in a season.

No. 4.—My Grey Parrots.

"Baby Grey Parrots" and "Liverpool" are always associated together. My earliest recollections go back to seductive advertisements of "black-eyed baby Greys and sure livers." Alas! I was not so wide awake then as I am now, and I fell an easy victim. I sent my 15s. quite confidingly, as, if such a very unlikely thing should happen as a death, the loss was to be made good by the seller. I thought this sounded so perfectly fair that it disarmed all suspicion. Why was I so simple?

The day after my order went, I got a small wooden box with what the porter described as "something alive" in it. "It seems making a queer sort of noise, sir," was his laconic remark. I had never had a Grey Parrot before, so I thought, maybe, it is the natural cry of baby Greys. It was a horrid grating sort of sound, like two rusty nails being rubbed together, and it went on and on and on uninterruptedly. I took off the box lid, and then I saw one of the most pitiable objects human eyes ever lighted on. On the floor of the box there crouched a young Grey Parrot that appeared to have perpetual cold shudders, and each time it shuddered the horrid grating sounds were produced.

As it did not seem at all anxious to quit the shelter of the box, I gave it what the emigration agents call "an assisted passage." In other words, I got hold of it by the back and lifted it bodily out. It was very lucky for me that the poor thing was too weak to resist, otherwise I should have had good cause to repent of my temerity. I thought my new purchase looked wretched enough in the box, but it looked far more pitiable in the cage in which I had placed it. There it sat, or, rather, clung to the perch, weakly swaying backwards and forwards, the cold shudders still continuing with painful regularity, its poor head hanging down, with eyes half closed, and a look as if all the cares of all the ages rested on its shoulders.

I had sense enough to see that something was very wrong; but what, I could not tell. Remember, I was only a beginner in these days. In the box was a lot of wet flat Indian corn, evidently boiled and smelling very evil. I thought I had better continue the diet, so I boiled some Indian corn and rice and put the mixture in the tin; but my poor friend seemed only to take a languid interest in my proceedings, and after putting the beak to the rice, withdrew it, as though eating was beyond it. I believe it was.

Even Whisky Failed.

Then I thought of a drink. Cold water, I knew, would be dangerous after the hot and fetid box, so I gave some warm, with just a dash of old Scotch in it. The poor brute drank as though it would never have enough, and soon began to smell horribly of weak whisky and water. It drank so much that at last I got frightened and put away the tin; and then it began to shudder once more, having apparently nothing better to do. I covered it up at night with a thick baize cloth, but when I came down in the morning my trouble was over, and so were those of my poor friend. The corpse was not a lovely one: it was as thin as paper and as light as a cork.

I sent it back with a polite request for another. No. 2 arrived in due course, and was an exact repetition of No. 1, but perhaps a shade stronger, as he lived two days, and then, like the patriarchs, died.

This tired me of "baby Greys" for many a year. A long while after I was reading Dr. Green's book, "The Grey Parrot," and it caused me to try Greys once again. I was older, and I hoped wiser, and certainly more experienced in bird-keeping. My ambition was to breed Grey Parrots. I was vain enough to think that if it could be done I was the man to do it. One day, while I was visiting a neighbour's aviaries in Leeds, he happened to say that on his milk walk was an old woman who had a Grey Parrot, and that the said Grey Parrot had laid an egg in its cage.

That was enough for me. I begged him to ask the old lady what she would accept for the bird. Alas! it was one of those birds that cannot be bought; it was an old maid's darling—no money would tempt her!

It annoyed me very much, for here it seemed was half the element of success. A lady Grey Parrot assured, healthy, and on the face of it likely to reproduce her kind, if given a decent chance. I thought I would go and visit the old lady myself, and see what my persuasive eloquence could do. I went, but it was no good. I talked "with a sweet mouth," as the African natives say, but it was no good—the Parrot was not for sale. I asked leave to stroke her ladyship. I was given gracious permission. I wish it had been withheld. Some Parrots, like bulls, ought to be labelled "dangerous." As I approached my fingers to the cage, she eyed me with the deepest interest, and followed my every movement with her neck; whichever way my hand turned her beak was always facing me. I wanted to get to the back of her neck, but she would not have it. At last I made a bold dash, and so did she—and she got first hold. I shall never forget that moment; it was so intense, as Oscar Wilde would have said. Have you ever got your fingers fixed in a sausage machine with an ever-increasing steady pressure? If so, you will know what it felt like. I squeezed the brute's neck till I thought it would crack, but it seemed made of cast-iron, and the more I pinched, the greater grew the pressure of that awful beak. I believe I should be fast still if the old lady had not come to my rescue. She offered the brute a bit of fruit, and, appetite being stronger than revenge, she let go of my hand and took the dainty.

My finger was a pitiable sight, with a nice three-cornered wedge hanging loose and blood flowing freely on to the carpet. I wondered, supposing it ever should heal, whether I might not die of blood-poisoning, but luckily nothing happened, and gradually the place healed up. But I have never liked that Grey Parrot since; in fact, I feel quite glad that she was unbuyable!

A Regular Shock.

Some years later I was reading the advertisements in Cage Birds, when all of a sudden I nearly jumped out of my chair with excitement, for I read—a pair of Grey Parrots for sale, anxious to breed and thoroughly acclimatised, price £5. The address was at Burnley. I jumped up, put on my hat, and started for the first train. "Where are you going?" I was asked. I muttered something about a sudden call to Burnley. It is a longish, cross-eyed journey from Leeds, but I got there safely at last and made my way to the address advertised. It was a saddler's shop. As I entered I saw a look of surpriso on the face of the "hands" as to what a priest could be likely to want in a saddler's shop. I set their minds at rest by saying I had come to see the Grey Parrots. The master evidently caught my words and came forward smiling. He was a delightful man, and a thorough bird lover, and we were friends directly. All true bird lovers are.

He asked me to come downstairs, and there in a big room under the shop I found the Grey Parrots. They were in a very big packing case—a most suitable abode, by the way—and there was a nesting box rigged up near the top, which, by the shavings lying about, had evidently received attention from the birds. They were in the most beautiful condition, not a single feather out of place, and evidently quite acclimatised, and I could see at a glance that they were a pure pair. This was intuitive, as I had not examined them.

After a little desultory talk I timidly enquired the lowest price, and at last we agreed to bargain for £4 10s. As there was not a long time before my train, they were quickly transferred in a stout box. I was on the way to the station and Leeds within the hour. As I sat waiting for the Leeds train I could not help wondering whether the crowds on the platform realised the importance of that box. That it contained the probably one and only true pair of acclimatised Greys in England that day. Alas! for the general public. They seemed surprisingly indifferent, and scarcely glanced at the box, except now and then when one of the Parrots scrabbled on the bottom.

Sexual Distinctions.

When I got home I put the pair into a big cage and examined them at my leisure. I was more than pleased with my bargain. They were in perfect health, and a true pair. They say there are several ways of telling Grey Parrots by sex. One rule is to examine the eye ceres—the bit of grey skin round the eyes—when it will be seen that they are of different shapes. The more rounded are the hens. Years ago Mr. Abrahams told me the one and only way to sex Greys. Look under the tails at the patch of red. If you have a cock and a hen it is easy to see which is which. I believe this is infallible. The cocks are also a much lighter grey colour.

I knew, however, without any looking, that mine were a pair, and so I calmly looked forward to baby Greys of my own in the summer. I determined to put the Parrots into an unheated aviary, but fairly sheltered and all to themselves; as I know by experience the power of those awful beaks.

It is my opinion, though I may be mistaken, that I should have been successful, but something happened. I had all the elements of success. I had a cock and a hen. You remember, of course, what Brahms said, "It is as hard to get a wife as to write an opera! We are told that the way to a certain place is paved with good intentions. I had intended to breed Grey Parrots, but seeing that our good intentions may not, after all, be so altogether excellent as our natural conceit would have us believe, it may be well that most of them find their ultimate destination in a place where, of course, we are not likely to meet them again!

One morning I felt ill; the next morning I felt worse, and for eight long weeks I was shut up in the house. All the care of the birds fell then on somebody else. The anxiety was too much. I felt the force of the argument; and on my convalescence I made up my mind to clear out—for a time. I offered all my birds to a rich neighbour, and, alas! he accepted my offer, and within a week I was birdless—and miserable. The Grey Parrots went with the rest, but, alas! instead of being put in a nice aviary, they were cruelly torn asunder and placed side by side in two separate cages, in an abomination of a place called "a pagoda." Thus ended the one and only chance of breeding Greys. When I got better, in a few months, I began to collect birds once again; but, alas! I could not get the Greys back at any price; and as it says in the book of Joshua of other things—they are there unto this day.

A Recipe for Longevity.

Let me here give a receipt for longevity in Grey Parrots, though it has nothing to do with this paper. The proverbial longevity of Grey Parrots was nicely illustrated in a bird to whom its deceased mistress had left a £10 annuity. The bird was not very young when the annuity began to accrue, and as years went on, and friends dropped off, he began to feel the loneliness of his life. With a tenderness which did them infinite credit, the good couple to whose care the bird had been left, imported a companion exactly like himself to cheer his solitude. But 'ere long one of the Parrots died, and the mourners remarked that these young birds had not half the constitution of the older generation! So, as long as they lived the Parrot lived—and the pension lived, too!

And one story reminds me of another, and with this I will end. The vicar was one day summoned to the deathbed of an old parishioner—shoemaker, ranter, and Radical. He expressed his gratification thereat, but asked why the Dissenting minister had not been called in. "Well, sir," the old wife replied; "my poor husband be mortial bad, and, you see, we allus sends for Parson at t'finish." (To be continued.)

Yorkshire Canaries.

Points Concerning Breeding and Management.

By W. MORRIS.

A lecture delivered before the Mid-Rhondda and District C.B.S. on April 20th.

At our general meeting, held at the Parry's Temperance Bar, Tonypandy, Mr. Hy. Jolly took the chair. After the general business had been transacted, and the presentation to the secretary made, the chairman called upon Mr. W. Morris to give his promised lecture upon the "Breeding and Management of Yorkshire Canaries."

Mr. Morris asked to be excused reading the paper himself, as his eyesight was failing him, and he could not read by gaslight. Mr. J. T. Lloyd, assistant secretary, read the paper in his stead. It was as follows:—

Plenty of Room Required.

Mr. Chairman and Fellow Members,—I will this evening try and give you an idea as to how I breed and manage my Yorkshire Canaries. In the first place, I like my birds to have plenty of room, good big cages, and as much light and sunshine as possible. My experience has been that the Yorkshire Canary will stand any amount of cold, providing there is no draught. Before the breeding season starts I get my cages, racks and walls scrupulously clean and painted; that is, anything that needs painting.

In selecting my stock pairs I have had the best results. I like to pair good big buff cocks (if they have a bit of feather I don't mind) to typical, good quality yellow hens of close feather. My experience has been that the hen has a big say in the matter of quality and type in the young. Whatever way you pair your birds, keep type and quality on the hen's side, and length and colour on the cock's side. After pairing my birds I give them a liberal supply of Spratts' Cod Liver Oil Cage Bird Food; my experience has been that this food is a preventative of egg-binding. I follow this treatment up until the first clutch of eggs are laid.

It is optional whether you have the cock in with the hen or not, but if you pair one cock to two hens, then you must remove the cock from hen No. 1 on the evening you find she has laid her full clutch of eggs, and put him with hen No. 2. During the fourteen days the hens are sitting, I feed on plain Spanish canary seed only, and on the 14th day I give a little yolk of egg mixed with a little Spratt's Cod Liver Oil Food, and gradually increase it as the young get older.

Coming back to eggs during sitting, some fanciers advise testing the eggs in warm water; but my advice is: allow Nature to do all that is necessary with the eggs. Testing the eggs in warm water, I think, makes the shell more hard, and consequently a great deal harder for the young to come from. After the hen has been sitting for seven days give her a bath in the morning, and every morning after until the eggs are hatched. I also find that by keeping a spare hen or two, even if of no value from an exhibition point of view, and she is a good breeder, she is worth a mint to you, for transferring eggs from other hens to. Try and put these spare hens to nest the same time as the others.

My Favourite Greenfood.

My favourite green food is watercress or lettuce. I do not start to give it to the young until they are three or four days old, and I make a point of giving fresh green food every time I give soft food, taking care to remove all stale food. I transfer the young to the nursery cage when they are from 21 to 31 days old, and ring them at the same time, putting the numbers in my stud book for reference. I take the young away from the nursery cage when I see them picking up for themselves, and I place them in the same numbers as bred in large cages, as the nestful as bred will agree better by themselves than if others are placed with them.

During this period you will be lucky indeed if you do not get a few youngsters go a little queer. If I find one going a little thick I take him in hand at once, as it is sometimes fatal to let illness get even a few hours' start on a young bird. I think it a great mistake to get young birds on to hard seed too soon. I always give them a little soft food right through the moult, gradually decreasing the quantity as they complete the moult.

I do not believe in giving them water until they are six weeks old, as I find it is fatal for young birds to drink too much water.

When the Youngsters Go "Thick."

If I find a youngster going a little thick I carefully take him in my hand and blow up the feathers underneath. Should inflammation be the trouble, I take away all seed and put him on bread and milk sop. I do not make it too sloppy, and I give milk to drink, taking care it does not turn sour. If my patient does not improve after a few hours, I blow up the feathers on the belly and slightly paint with camphorated oil (I do not believe in using turpentine). I then place the little sufferer in a small cage without perches, and place him upon the hob near the fire, so that he may get a good heat. If this does not draw the inflammation down, I put the little sufferer out of his misery.

In conclusion, I trust the little time spent in writing this paper will be of some little service to the beginners in our society.

At this stage the chairman invited questions, which were numerous, and Mr. Morris had some "ticklers" to answer, but he answered them all admirably. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded him for the excellent advice given.—Arthur H. C. Legg, Hon. Sec.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

Mr. H. J. Fulljames appointed Secretary.

BADGES NOW READY.

Bird Lovers! Rally to your Defence.

Our announcement of the appointment of Mr. H. J. Fulljames to the secretaryship of Cage Birds League will, we anticipate, be of considerable interest to all our readers, for, judging by our post-bag, the League seems to have met with the favour of everybody. The secretarial post promises to be no sinecure, and we are sure Mr. Fulljames would not wish it to be so. He has the welfare of the League closely at heart, and the enormous amount of labour which will be thrown upon his shoulders in establishing Cage Birds League in sound, smooth-working order, Mr. Fulljames is facing with equanimity and with the determination to do his best in the interests of bird-keepers of every degree. That he will carry out the objects of the League without fear or favour, and strictly in accordance with the wishes of the members, we have not the smallest doubt. Mr. Fulljames' qualifications for the post seem to us undeniable; he has had a long experience as a practical bird-keeper, has been a very successful exhibitor of birds, while he is an excellent speaker and wields a fluent, capable pen—above all, he has a thorough grasp of the needs of bird-keepers in the protection of their interests against the unwarranted interference of outside fanatics and sentimentalists, as witness his article which won the £5 prize in Cage Birds recent competition for the best essay entitled "It is cruel to keep birds in cages?" We will leave his first secretarial pronouncement to speak for itself. We confidently ask for the support of all bird-keepers to be given to Mr. Fulljames. Without this the best-intentioned efforts must fail. But we dismiss "failure" as unthinkable in connection with Cage Birds League. So, readers all, it is now up to you to float the League on the flood-tide of success. Let Mr. Fulljames enrol you as members at once. A last word: Keep an eye open for our future announcements.

Our League Badge.

Mr. Fulljames' Initial Address.

Fellow Members, Present and Prospective, of Cage Birds League,—

As announced above, I have been accorded the honour of having been appointed your first Secretary. I use the word "first" advisedly, for an individual mortal has only his allotted span to fill, while Cage Birds League has come to stay, and many successors will, in the future, each have to take up the secretarial duties, as each in turn drops out in the course of Nature.

A Crying Need Supplied.

You will have gathered from the letters already published, which represent only a tithe of those received, that the proposal of our Editor to establish, under the title of Cage Birds League, an association of bird-lovers, has met with such an enthusiastic response as to prove without doubt that such an amalgamation, for it is nothing more or less, has long been needed. As with so many obvious things, the wonder is that no one should have instituted it before, and it has been left to Mr. Carl to give expression to the need, and to formulate a means by which the want shall be supplied. However, here we are, and the necessarily large amount of preliminary arrangements are nearing completion, so that with this issue Cage Birds League is fairly launched. It now only remains for bird-owners throughout the whole kingdom to support the League by their membership, and place it from the beginning in such a position that its voice will be no uncertain one. With a membership such as that of which we are already assured, Cage Birds League enters upon its career with the brightest of prospects, and no efforts of ours will be spared to ensure the successful realisation of the ideals which we have already placed before our thousands of readers, and to some of which reference is made below.

We Shall Help, Not Hinder.

As originally intimated, it is quite beyond our intention or wish to make the League in any sense whatever a governing body. It is to be simply an association of bird-lovers, banded together in their own mutual interests, strong enough not only to do good within its own boundaries, but to defend itself against attack from outside. No club or society will be affected in the slightest degree, excepting in the fact that an increased membership should accrue to all bird clubs, as the mere existence of such an association as ours is brought to the knowledge of the untold thousands of our countrymen who keep, maybe, only one bird, and who are as yet pursuing the ordinary tenour of their lives in blissful ignorance that such bodies as bird clubs, or such an organ as Cage Birds, exist. These people have no idea that the very keeping of a pet Canary is being threatened by the extremists who, if they had their way, would prohibit the keeping of any bird in any cage. That this is no imaginary bogey is patent to all of us who have seen the trend of recent legal actions, and who know of the prospective legislation which these fanatics have in mind.

Try to "Catch a Pal" for Us.

It is not only the support of experienced bird-keepers and exhibitors which is required, but that of the less well-informed private keeper of a cage bird or two. Of the former there is no doubt; the latter depends upon the individual efforts of each fancier to "catch a pal," or, as some of our readers express it, several pals. No better method of doing this may be imagined than for each member to wear at all times his badge of membership, and it is easy to prophesy that he will be surprised to find how many of his fellow-travellers in train, 'bus, or tram are interested in a minor degree in the fascinating hobby which he himself has made his own. The bird-lover who finds himself in a strange town will soon discover that there are around him fellow fanciers of whose existence he would otherwise remain ignorant, and mutual advantage cannot fail to follow. At bird shows the badge will be sufficient introduction between many who would otherwise remain strangers. Experiences will be interchanged, successes and failures compared, and many a friendship will be inaugurated through the medium of the tiny symbol. The establishment of a bond of good-fellowship and union between bird-keepers the world over will do them real good; they will be able to participate in the benefits of a general inculcation of principles under which birds suited to captivity may be kept under humane and proper conditions, and to share the advantages of the defensive and protective plans of the League.

Badges Ready—Why Not Have One?

Cage Birds League has now become an established fact. We want you to help it along. The badges are now ready, and very beautiful little ornaments they are; the price, sixpence each, places them within the reach of everyone; the membership subscription is the modest sum of one sbilling per annum—less than a farthing a week. What is more, half of this subscription may be allocated by each subscribing member, or by a number of them in a body, to a Special Prize Fund for any society or show, to a fund for the dissemination among poor bird-keepers of useful literature calculated to enlighten them and improve the conditions under which their birds are kept in domestication, or to a fund for the protection, by legal or other process, of bird-keepers from swindlers, or from unjust attacks by moneyed faddists and sentimentalists, or for the general protection of bird-keepers' interests. Remittances for badges or annual subscriptions must be made payable to F. Carl, treasurer pro. tem., Cage Birds League, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

The badges are in three forms, all at the same price, one to be slipped through the button-hole on the lapel of the coat, one to be worn as a charm on the watch-chain, and one with a pin at the back making it into a brooch. In remitting, members should state which form they prefer.

Rewards for Recruiting.

Fanciers must not forget that £5 in cash will go to him who introduces the greatest number of recruits to the League by March 11th next year, and £3 in cash to the one introducing the second highest number Society Secretaries Note.

Societies also will have a grant for nominating their members as members of Cage Birds League; £5 for the highest, and £3 for the second highest, and, so that the larger societies may not have a monopoly, there will be four further prizes of £1 each to the societies whose total nominations to the League show the best average per member.

Future Operations.

In a scheme of such gigantic proportions as are promised to be reached by Cage Birds League much remains yet to be settled. An Advisory Committee has to be appointed, and this will be of a very widely representative nature. Short rules, as few as possible, have to be drawn. Questions as to local centres and places of meetings to be agreed, and many other details which I hope will be settled in a week or two. In the meantime my best endeavours will be given in the furtherance of the objects of the League, and I shall have each week an announcement to make in that direction, bearing in mind that the interests of each individual member are as important as the interests of the League itself. Send along at once your eighteenpence for badge and membership subscription, and, with the postal order, don't forget to let us have any suggestions that occur to you. They will all have careful consideration.

Henry J. Fulljames,
Secretary, Cage Birds League, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Sir,—I am very pleased to see Cage Birds League is being formed. Will you enroll my wife and myself as members, and forward two badges (when ready) to be worn in coat, and one in the form of a brooch—three in all. I enclose postal order for 3s. 6d. (two membership fees, and 1s. 6d. for badges). I wish Cage Birds hearty congratulations.—C. Lockett (Dover).

SOME VIEWS OF MEMBERS.

Sir,—Kindly accept me as a member of Cage Birds League. I have been a regular reader of Cage Birds from the first copy. I enclose a postal order for 1s. 6d. (membership fee and 6d. for No. 2 badge, for watch-chain pendant.) —J. H. Davies (Penkethb).

A Membership Matter.

Sir,—Having been a reader of Cage Birds for a matter of about two and a half years, I wish to know if I am entitled to become a member of Cage Birds League. I have kept birds, but becoming short of room, I had to give them up, except one or two, just for song. I might say I am as enthusiastic as ever, and still continue to take Cage Birds. I should very much like to join the League, which I think is a magnificent movement, so I should be very much obliged if you would let me know. I wish the League and Cage Birds. every success.—W. H. L. (Manchester).

[Our correspondent will be welcomed as a member of our League. Cage Birds League is open to anyone interested in birds, whether actually keeping birds or not.—Editor.]

Just What Is Wanted.

Sir,—I will become a member of Cage Birds League. It is just what we want to protect us from some of the people who are against keeping a bird themselves, and who want to stop others from doing so. If something of the sort does not "crop up" to protect us fanciers, the time will come when we shall be unable to keep a British bird. I enclose 1s. 6d. contribution and badge, the latter to be sent to me when ready. I hope many thousands will do the same.—J. G. Taylor (Cannock).

A Secretarial Badge

Sir,—In connection with Cage Birds League, may I be allowed to suggest that when the local secretaries are appointed they shall be supplied with a badge similar to the others, but with the words, "Local Secretary" inscribed on it? This, when worn in either buttonhole or on watch-chain, will often be the means of introducing members to the secretary, who might otherwise not know each other; and when canvassing likely members the mere pointing to it will save a lot of explanation. It might also suggest to some that he (the secretary) was the very person to pay the overdue subscription to. Am very glad to see the League being taken up so well, and trust there will be a lot more suggestions yet. —W. H. Pyke, Hon. Sec. Reading and Dis. C.B.S.

Sir,—Kindly enrol me as a member of Cage Birds League. Also please send me a badge, when ready, for watchchain. The design I consider excellent.—R. D. Thorpo (Maidenhead).

Sir,—I am glad to see you have begun the Cage Birds League. I am very pleased to be able to join the League, for which I enclose 1s. 6d. for contribution and a button-hole badge to be sent me when ready.—C. Bracewell (Colne).

Sir,—Being very much interested in Cage Birds, also in the League you have formed, will you kindly enter my name as a member of the League, for which I enclose a postal order for 1s. 6d. for contribution and badge for buttonhole.—F. Potton (Southend-on-Sea).

"He Won't Say No!"

Sir,—Being already a member of Cage Birds League, I visited a brother fancier's recently, and after explaining the objects of the League to him, I succeeded in getting him to become a member. I herewith enclose 1s. contribution, also 6d. for coat buttonhole badge for Mr. R. S. Rooke, Swanley Village, Kent. I am visiting another fancier (Mr. F. Croucher, of Swanley Village), a good old Yorkshire fancier, and I think that when he knows that his brother fanciers in the village are members of the League, he won't say "No" when I ask him to join. I wish Cage Birds and Cage Birds League every success.—E. H. Peek (Bexley, Kent).

CANARY QUERIES.

Various.

Trilby.—(1) The darkening of the plumage you refer to is the dust and dirt grime which gradually accumulates in the plumage. Ordinary bathing will not remove it: only hand-washing, which requires some expert knowledge. It is impossible to improve the depth or tone of the yellow at this season. You must wait until the moulting season, and then colour-feed. To breed young of better colour you must mate it with a green or variegated bird. This would give you a large proportion of variegated birds, but the clears would be a much richer colour. (2) Give the usual staple, and add a little egg food every second day, mixed seed on the alternate days, green food daily. When hen commences to sit, give the staple diet only. You would find "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. post free, from our Manager, very useful for details. (3) A glazed earthenware bath to go in the cage would suit you best. Or you might place it in a small bath-cage to hang on open doorway. When bird is splashing in drinker remove it for an hour or so, and hang on bath meanwhile. If given two coats of bath enamel the tin bath would answer very well. Remove rust before applying enamel. (4) A simple mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape is best. Glad to hear the husky bird has improved so much. But you should not have mated him until the effect had quite disappeared.

Young Hens, etc.

Inquire.—(1) Your fancier friend would be quite right to say some young hens neglect their first brood of young, but it is rather drawing the long bow to assert it is the general practice. Some neglect the first, and do very well afterwards; others do well at first, and neglect their duties later in life; and others still I have known neglect the first brood in each season, and yet do well with the later broods. But all these cases are exceptions, and by no means the general rule. Therefore, it is quite probable your other hens, or the majority of them, will attend to their duties better than the particular hen you mention. Try leaving the cock with this hen next time, if he does not molest her on the nest. After the third day, add a sprinkling of maw seed to the egg-food, and see the latter is fresh two or three times a day, not made sloppy or pasty moist—crumbly dry is best; and do not give large quantities at a time to satiate the birds. Give a scrap of tender lettuce and top of young groundsel, also fresh gathered twice a day—morning and afternoon, and after the first week begin to give a little lightly cracked hemp. (2) A cock ten months old, especially of the small or medium sized breeds, is quite mature enough to fertilise eggs. Probably the cold during mid April kept your hens backward, which was the cause of their not going to nest to him. He seems to have been in fair condition himself. (3) If hens are in high condition and likely to come forward for nesting again early, a diet of plain Canary during incubation is best. For all ordinary cases I prefer to leave them with the usual staple of Canary and rape. (4) Providing the song has not deteriorated, cocks that have been used for breeding may, of course, if in good song, be used as tutors for the young. It is a matter which only the owner, hearing the song regularly, is able to decide. The song often deteriorates in breeding. (5) In-breeding is most useful in working up a strain, fixing good points, or markings, and so on. But it should only be done with a specific object, and with discretion, as it will fix bad points just as readily as good ones. (6) For remedy for egg-eating cock, see reply to "Novice, Leicester," on April 22. (7) Mate the hen that has had young again in a fortnight from the time the young died. Finally, get the parts of "Our Canaries" already issued, which will clear up all these doubts and difficulties for you.

Canary with Cough.

H. B. (York).—I am sceptical as to this cough being the effect of a cold. It would not have lasted so long without other unpleasant symptoms appearing. First look well into the quality and cleanliness of all seeds and foods supplied. See that they are perfectly free from dust, also the seed vessel, and that the rape especially is free from a minute mite pest which often infests it. Keep cage strewn with clean gritty sand, but see that this also is free from fine dust. Do not hang the cage too high up near the ceiling, nor near or over burning lights in the evenings, and keep it in a fairly equable place, quite free from draughts. Strict attention to these points will do more than anything else towards a cure. Give a staple diet of three parts Canary to one part summer, and for the next month give three times a week a morsel of bread the size of hazel nut, soaked in cold milk, drained, three drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On two other days each week give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts inga, teazle, millet, linseed, black rape, and yellow mustard. Give a little green food daily. Every second day for a week give 20 drops of whisky, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and the same quantity of chlorate of potash, in the drinking water. If the cough has not then disappeared get a chemist to mix you two drams each of oxymel of squills and glycerine, one dram each of chlorodyne and ipecacuanha wine, and six grains of iodide of potassium, and give 20 drops of this mixture in the water every second day for a fortnight.

Not Rearing Young.

Disappointed.—You are right in thinking the cock is not to blame. The hen is clearly a non-feeder, and probably scarcely did anything towards prolonging the lives of the young beyond sitting lazily on them and keeping them warm. Next time try the following treatment of her. Remove the eggs as laid, keeping a dummy egg in the nest from time the first is removed until the evening of the third day, then remove the dummy and replace the eggs, remove the cock and cage him alone out of sight, and hearing, if practicable, of the hen, leaving her to hatch and rear the young by herself. Feed hen on staple of Canary and rape only during incubation, with the least scrap of sponge cake at the end of each week. On the thirteenth and fourteenth days offer a bath made slightly saline by the addition of a little common salt, and for one-half of each of these days dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea in the drinking water. Give a small teaspoonful of egg-food in two instalments on the fourteenth day, and add a slight sprinkling of maw seed to it. Repeat this the next two days, and if she does not appear to be feeding the young add a small piece of greenstuff—lettuce, groundsel, chickweed, or watercress—fresh three times a day, and a pinch of hemp and soaked rape, and if she still refuses to feed on these, transfer the young to a foster hen, if possible, without further delay. Should she feed at the beginning, start adding greenstuff on the third or fourth day, hemp about the eighth day, and soaked rape when young are a fortnight old, or any time when hen appears to flag.

Prolific Hen (W. H. K.).—No, you should not give the hen anything with the object of stopping her laying. She is evidently one of those exceptionally productive hens that turn up occasionally, and no good is done by trying to limit their production. If you cannot remove her to a large flight or aviary quite out of earshot and sight of any cock, when a diet of plain Canary only and green food might bring about the desired result naturally, leave her with the cock and let matters take their own course. If she commences to sit let her do so, and give the superfluous eggs to fosters to hatch and rear. She may, or may not, wear herself out, but in any case it will be no worse than wearing her out by tinkering with drug treatment, which is always best avoided whenever possible.

A Doubtful Pair (Interrogo).—Strange that you do not know whether the cock of your pair of birds is a Canary, a Mule, or Linnet. If you bought them as a pair from any recognised dealer the cock is probably a green or foul green Canary, which I have heard non-fanciers call a Linnet. The latter may be briefly described as a russet-brown bird with a flash of white in each wing, possibly also a rosy tint on the breast, and a call note more like tzi-sik, tzi-sik than the well-known "tz-weet" of the Canary. Surely, you must have someone near you who could solve this puzzle. If it is a Linnet it is quite possible it may breed Mules. Any young from him and a hen Canary would be Mules. Whether they in turn would breed is an unsolved problem. Mules are generally sterile. I never gave cucumber to Canaries sufficiently to note its results. I have given slight pecks of it to pet birds, and my impression was that any appreciable quantity would have been harmful.

Protracted Moulting (C. I. W.).—First of all see that the bird is quite free from draughts, extreme fluctuations of temperature, and does not hang near or over burning lights in the evenings, nor in a window. One or other of these causes is probably at work, and must be removed. Keep bird in a fairly equable place. See that cage is not infested with red mites. Feed on a staple mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of the egg-bread with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed; on the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet, and teazle. Give a scrap of green food daily. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence daily for three days, and afterwards give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel every second day until moulting is stopped. When moulting is quite stopped reduce the egg and mixed seed to once a week each. Its song should then return, but will not do so before.

Moving Birds (Eloc.).—I am not quite clear what place you have the birds in now. You say first a "glass lean-to," and next a "glass-house," which terms are generally applied to greenhouses, but in that case I do not understand what noise there should be to do harm, and scarcely very great heat to "burn off" the eggs. It looks more like its being a glass manufactory. In either case the birds would certainly be better in a cosy place away from draughts in the sitting-room. You might remove the hens that are sitting closely at once. Make the place quite ready for them, measuring the cages first to be sure everything will fit correctly, then throw a light cover over the cages, after birds have gone to roost, and remove them gently to their new position, leaving the cover over until retiring for the night, then remove it. Those that have just hatched off young you had best leave where they are until the young are about a fortnight old, then there will be less risk of the parents stopping feeding them. (2) If the eggs of these hens were clear, neither the noise nor heat of the glass-house would have anything to do with the failure to hatch. More likely the cocks were not in full vigour at the time. You might treat them as advised to "S.E.A.," omitting the whisky and glycerine, until they have gone to nest again.

Slow Moult (Railway Guard). — See reply to "C.I.W.," and treat the bird as therein advised, having first carried out the suggestions as to removal of cause. The bird will not sing until the moult is quite stopped, but should resume soon afterwards.

Not Laying (Chas. Wooldridge).—The birds have probably been kept in too high condition on the mixed seed all through the winter. Stop this, and treat them as advised to "S.E.A.," except that in your case you should give six drops of syrup of buckthorn and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence in the water daily for three days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day for a week.

Addled Egg (H. H. H.).—The egg sent was broken in transit and arrived a pasty mixture of egg and meal in which it was packed. Therefore I can only say that it was an "addled" egg, and had not reached a stage of development when it could properly be described as young "dead in shell." The embryo had, so far as one could judge, developed up to about the eighth or ninth day of incubation, and then died. Cannot give any definite cause of this. It might have been due to a temporary chill, or to weakness of the germ, or many other causes. I suppose, by the way, you had not made a mistake in the length of time they had been sitting and investigated matters too soon. In any case treat the birds as advised to "S.E.A.," but omit the final dosing with whisky and glycerine, and the young will probably come off better in the next brood.

Not Nesting (Percondator).—I fancy the cock is out of condition, though you do not say whether he appears in good health or not. The hen seems to be quite forward, and needs only a lusty cock to drive her to nest at once. If available you would do well to try her with another vigorous young cock. Continue your present general feeding, but mix a quarter-teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts of gold of pleasure and sesame in the egg food each time, and on the alternate days give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, linseed, yellow mustard, and black rape. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts daily for three days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel for two or three days.

Going Bald (E.F.W.).—Keep the birds in a fairly equable and comfortable place, not heated, and free from draughts. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every third day for a month give a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion, dropped on it, then slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and finally sprinkled with maw seed. On three other days each week give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts inga, linseed, black rape, and millet. Give a spray of chickweed daily. In the drinking water every second day for a week, and twice a week afterwards for the remainder of the month, give 20 drops of whisky and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence. Allow birds to bathe freely, and twice a week slightly smear the bare places with sulphur ointment.

Stopped Feeding (Disappointed).—I cannot tell why the hens should stop feeding young after a fortnight's attention without more details of their management. It is quite usual for them to begin to stay off the nest longer at this stage, but feeding should go on even more vigorously than when the chicks were younger, and the cock, if present, generally begins to take a good part of it upon himself. An increase in the variety of food and green food should be given, and if they show signs of flagging a small crystal of sulphate of soda should be added to the water, and a bath given, with a little common salt mixed in it. Next time, try a good home-made egg-food, egg and bread crumbs, giving it fresh at least twice a day. When the young are a week old give a little chickweed and tender top of groundsel gathered fresh twice each day; a few days later begin to give a little cracked hemp daily, and if the hen still appears to flag add a little soaked rape. You would do well to get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., post free, and follow its advice. Do not interfere with or disturb the birds if you can possibly avoid it.

Canary Moping (Corporal A. Thomas).—Unless the bird caught a chill on the journey I hardly think it could have been in very good trim when sent. Keep it quite free from draughts, but in a bright and airy place, not near or over burning lights in the evenings, and in a fairly equable place. As staple diet give a plain mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate days give a pinch of a mixture of hemp, millet, and teazle. Give two leaves of dandelion daily. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week. In the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. As you have no experience at all in the matter you had better get some fancier near you to look at the bird and tell you its sex. Size and colour goes for nothing in sexing Canaries.

Laying One Egg (S. E. A.).—The hen is probably a very young one, and may not have been in very good breeding condition. Stop giving egg-food for a week and give instead a morsel of bread about size of a walnut soaked in cold milk, with four drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on it, and sprinkled with maw seed each day. Every second day give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts inga, linseed, millet, and black rape, and on the alternate days two leaves of dandelion. Give this in addition to the usual staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Leave the birds together and let the quantities named above suffice for the pair. Give a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea in the water for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky and ten of glycerine for three or four days. After the first week stop the bread and milk and give instead a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, or egg food, sprinkled with a mixture of equal parts gold of pleasure and maw every second day only, and give the dandelion daily. Continue this treatment until the hen has gone to nest again, which may be another fortnight or three weeks.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. Weston.

A Middle Claw (J. R. H.).—If the claw "has no use in it," then I am afraid nothing can be done for, of course, the bird has lost the power of controlling it. Try binding it firmly, yet not too tightly, to the side claw for a time. Did the Bullfinch get the foot trapped somehow?

Hand-Rearing Thrushes (H. Hinkley).—You should send 2½d. for the "Nutshell" booklet upon the Thrush, in which you will find a long, detailed account of how to rear (hand-feed) them from the nest. Note, also, several helpful letters on this subject quite recently published.

The Cock Bullfinch (J. McHolme).—I have very frequently stated that the cock Bullie has invariably been found to be useless for the purpose of producing hybrids, such as the Goldie-Bullie, Linnet-Bullie, etc. I have no personal knowledge of even a single case where he has fertilised eggs with any hen other than one of his own species.

Sexing Nestling Thrushes (Thrush).—There is no method by which Song Thrushes can be accurately sexed whilst in the nest. You should choose the youngster which seems the largest and most forward (the "top-dog," so to speak), when I find that the chances are favourable to its turning out a cock. Or choose two or three, and afterwards turn loose in the country those that "warble" (try over their song) the least. It is as little trouble to rear a couple as it is to bring up one. Hardly any birds can be accurately sexed when in nestling plumage.

In an Aviary (Kingston).—Six to eight pairs would be ample. Make up pairs of the species you have already, which would do nicely. You must have only one pair of Bullfinches, however; this means that three of the cocks would have to be removed. The seed sample sent seems an excellent one, but more teazle and some sunflower can be added with advantage.

An Ailing Magpie (Magpie).—Keep the perches very clean, washing them daily with a solution of some reliable disinfectant. Bathe the eyes two or three times daily with warm water to which a little Condy's Fluid has been added—sufficient to turn it the colour of port wine (make it fresh every time). You should also add a few drops of the Condy's to the bird's drinking water, giving the latter in a glass or earthenware dish, and changing it frequently, as this would be likely to afford speedy relief of the "throat trouble," you mention. Give the bird some chopped raw meat amongst its food for a time.

Two Eggs (British Bird).—The eggs of all species of birds vary appreciably in size, even in the same nest, therefore any measurements given can only be approximate. Variations of shape are also common. The egg of the Redstart is about the size of a sixpence, and that of the Missel Thrush of a shilling (neither, of course, is round in shape). The Redstart invariably nests in holes (of trees, walls, banks, etc.), and the eggs are generally 5 or 6 in number and pale blue in colour, with a faint greenish tinge—no markings at all. The Missel Thrush likes the fork of some branch of a tree (near the trunk and not too low down), on which to build, and the eggs generally number 4 or 5. The ground colour is usually a dirty white with a greenish tint, blotched and spotted with red, purplish-brown, and brown. They vary much, both in colour and shape; some are much more rounded than others.

"White Flags" (Special Pilot).—I have never before heard the expression "white flags" applied to anything under the tail of a dark Goldfinch Mule. One lives and learns. I presume that you refer to markings of some kind; and I presume that the said markings are the more or less oval-shaped white patches on the outer-tail feathers—generally termed "moonings." These are characteristic of dark Goldfinch Mules, and no bar to success on the show bench. If the tail-feathers are wholly or partly white on both upper and under surfaces (not merely "mooned" underneath), then, of course, it constitutes a fatal defect.

Identity of Bird (P. H. C.).—The bird you describe is a Great Tit (often called the Ox-eye Tit). It is an insectivorous bird, and consequently must be fed on a good insectile mixture, prepared in the usual way, and be given such live foods as you can provide (mealworms, flies, smooth caterpillars, grubs, gentles, and the like). A few seeds (hemp, sunflower, and Canary) are also relished now and again. Tits are not easy subjects to keep for any length of time in a cage.

Mating Matters (W. Clayton).—Most certainly hen Canaries will successfully pair with Linnets and Goldfinches when cock Canaries are being kept in the same room. Sometimes, however, a hen Canary which has been paired to a cock Canary will act roughly to the Linnet or Goldie when she hears the "call" of her late husband. Hens differ considerably in temperament: one has to study such things. Some hens are quite indifferent and will call freely to anything in the male line. I quite agree that the "feather dropping" would delay the cock Canaries coming into breeding form. I shouldn't give more than a tiny quantity of linseed now to Canaries, though as a rule they do not eat much of this seed. If really cocks, then the two birds you mention must be very, very much out of condition if at this time of the year they do not sing a note, although in the same room as hen Canaries in breeding condition. Give them a little egg food, niger, and hemp seeds every day, and a leaf or two of dandelion. I am afraid drugs will never make them fertilise eggs. Build up their health by good food.

An Argument (Skylark, A. J.).—Pleased to settle the "little argument" for you and your friend. Here you are: 1, The Skylark is mainly insectivorous, but on occasion feeds freely upon soft grains, such as young corn and also shoots of grass and other herbage. 2 and 3, These are best answered together. The crop and the gizzard are two quite distinct portions of the anatomy of a bird. The crop is an expansion of the gullet, very large in seed-eaters, and with thickened walls. In the pigeon, for instance, the crop reaches a high development. It is, broadly speaking, a storehouse for food. Some birds have no crop, or practically so. The gizzard is the second or hindmost) compartment of the stomach, and in seed-eating and part seed-eating birds the walls are very strong and muscular, and assist in breaking up the food, helped by grit and stones swallowed by the bird. In some birds, on the contrary, the walls are not strong and muscular (flesh-eating birds, for instance). And some fish-eating birds, again, have a third stomach—a small one behind the gizzard.

A Thrush Matter (no nom-de-plume).—The tonic you mention ought to do the bird good. You should try feeding it on the lines I described last week, using the packet food you name and the "Melox." Give the bird some live food, and put a little scraped raw lean meat (beef or mutton) on top of its daily food supply for a time. Into the soft food stir every day a teaspoonful of extract of malt, a small quantity of which you can get from any chemist. Keep up this treatment until the bird regains its old-time "high condition."

Various Obstacles (H. Boddy).—(1) I should give this hen two or three doses of syrup of huckthorn on alternate days—half-a-teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water. Withhold the egg-food for a time, and give instead a little sweet biscuit (Osborne) soaked in new milk, fresh twice daily. You speak of "bringing this hen into breeding condition"; then later you say "both hens wish to pair to Roller cock, and call to him all day." Surely this is somewhat contradictory. I don't see what you can do with the Goldie that often drops feathers and has not sung for 5 or 6 months—a breeding cage is the last place for a bird in his condition. He will never fertilise eggs this season, I am afraid, and I think you would be well advised to turn his wife over to the cock Roller you mention—that is, if you want to breed something. But you say she is sometimes "terribly wheezy." Is this merely nervousness? If due to bronchial trouble, then she also is not worth keeping for breeding. To be candid with you, it is a weariness and a waste of time to try to breed with any birds that are not in a sound, healthy condition. You say you have put the hens in the same compartment. Well, if they were in breeding form they would be fighting like blazes, and the feathers would be flying. The seed mixture reads all-right. You could economise by leaving out the charlock and linseed.

Foster-mothers: A Correction (Puzzled).—A printer's error occurred in the answer given you last week. Towards the end, it should have read: "I have put eggs under a hen Mule, which have hatched out in three days, and she has fed and brought up the young quite as if that were the usual thing." The words "in three days" were omitted last week.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Parrakeet with Abnormal Beak.

E.F.M.E.—If the lower mandible is really twisted, I fear there is no remedy for this, and that it will remain so. The upper mandible must be pared back to normal size periodically as required. A piece of hard wood, preferably the piece of a stout branch with the bark on and a lump of mortar will help the bird to keep the beak ground down, and as it becomes accustomed to the deformity of the lower mandible it will undoubtedly keep its beak trimmed down without, or with only occasional, assistance from you. If you have had no previous experience of the operation, it would be well to get either a local vet. or some fancier of experience to pare it for you, and if you carefully observe the way they go about it—it is very simple—you should afterwards be able to do it yourself. The thing to guard against is cutting back so far as to cause it to bleed. If by mishap this should occur, a little Friar's Balsam should be at hand, and if the wound be touched with this the bleeding will soon cease and no harm result. The deformity is evidently the result of an accident, possibly a sudden scare and then hashing the beak violently against some portion of the aviary has brought about the twist, but it will soon learn to keep its beak to normal size without your assistance.

Green Budgerigars Not Breeding (H.A.M.).—Most certainly, as they do not appear to agree together, change the hens. Even with mating the yellow hen with the green cock, fully 80 per cent. of their progeny would be pure green. The probability is they will go to nest almost at once and rear several broods during the season. Get our Nutshell booklet, "The Budgerigar," 2½d. post free, from our Manager. It will help you.

Blue-winged Lovebirds (Lovebird).—The price varies from 3s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. a pair, according to number on the market, but yours should be worth 10s. 6d. or 12s. 6d., and if you care to send me a stamped addressed envelope per the Editor I can pass them on for you for 10s. 6d. It would be of general interest if you would send an account of your success with this species to the Editor for publication.

Cockatiels with Eggs (Nemo).—I should hang the cage up in the aviary and leave the cage door open. The probability is that the birds will go in and out of the cage as usual, incubate their eggs, and duly rear the young, but even if they should desert, this will mean but little delay, as they will soon find another nest and lay another clutch of eggs; so I should hang up the cage in the aviary and leave matters to take their course. Supply green food now liberally—lettuce and flowering (seeding) grass—also cuttlefish and a few oats, in addition to the regulation diet of canary, white millet, and millet sprays.

Budgerigars, etc., Not Breeding (M.E.N.).—You really must give the birds a little time to settle down. Foreign species differ from Canaries in this respect, and do not promptly pair up and go to nest, but take some little time to become accustomed to their quarters. My advice is leave these birds together as they are, and at no distant time they will go to nest and then continue merrily on. I prefer the husks hung up under the covered portion of roof and not under the open roof, unless something be placed above the husk to throw off rain, etc. Some pairs go to nest almost at once; others take quite a few months to settle down, and you cannot force matters. Supply green food—lettuce and flowering (seeding) grass, and the birds should ultimately settle to nesting and rear a numerous progeny. Our Nutshell booklet, "The Budgerigar," 2½d. post free from our Manager, would assist you.

Foreign Bird Queriists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Diet During Moult (M.A.B.).—So long as the bird keeps fit, nothing extra is required, but a little chemical food in the water is a great help, and it is also wise to keep the bowels regulated by an occasional dose of Dunneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful in an ounce of water. I should give at this time as much fruit as it would eat, and also add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed mixture. Keep the piece of wood in the cage, and the crumblings or chippings should be removed at the daily cleaning. No further precautions are necessary. Our Nutshell booklet, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our Manager, would help you.

A Feather-plucking Grey (Mrs. Porter).—You give me so little information that I can only give a general sort of reply. In the first place confine the dietary to: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuits. Seed mixture: Two parts each canary and white millet, and one part each hemp, oats, paddy rice, grit, and sunflower seeds; well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, and on intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Twice a week spray the bird with a dilute solution of fir tree oil, choosing genial days for the purpose. Report progress in about two months with full details.

Aviary Queries (E.G.B.).—(1) Yes, but it would have been better had it been boarded up on the north and east, and I should advise now that the north side be covered in with wood and glass over the netting, and only leave open netting on the west side. (2) For perches use twiggy branches, nailed or wired to the wood sides. Husks you will get from our advertisers; hang them up as wired, with their openings towards the light—two husks for each pair of birds. (3) I cannot give dealers' names in this column; it would be obviously unfair. (4) The firm you name should be able to supply you with good stock.

To go with Budgerigars (F.G.H.).—It is very bad policy to mix Finch-like birds with Budgerigars or other Parrakeets. Of course, I cannot give you any idea as to quantity, as you give me no hint as to size of your aviary, but the following—provided they are not overcrowded—usually agree well together and with Budgerigars: Madagascar Lovebirds, Passerine Parrakeets, Cockaticls, and Red-crested Cardinals. A little ripe fruit, as in season, should be supplied in addition to seed and green food. Clean cuttlebone should also be always available.

Cut Wings (H. C. Amner).—Cutting the wings of a Parrot or Parrakeet is a precaution usually taken to prevent escape during importation, or to a bird which is allowed out of its cage in the garden, etc.; but, for a bird kept in a room, and only allowed out of its cage at convenient intervals, cutting the wings is quite unnecessary. Only one wing should be cut, and I prefer only to cut off the inner webs of all the flight feathers from tip to base; this restricts flight sufficiently, and does not disfigure the bird so much as snipping off the entire feather. Unless you desire your bird to roam about out of doors, I should not cut the wing.

Breeding Parson Finches (T.).—I sincerely hope you will have luck and rear the young birds. A little of any good soft food mixture, made crumbly moist, in addition to their ordinary menu, will fully meet the case. A good mixture is easily made with equal parts of ants' eggs, dried flies, and crumbled sponge cake, making daily portion crumbly moist with boiling water. At this period also the supply of fresh green food should be liberal, as much as they will eat—lettuce and flowering (seeding) grass. Also keep a millet spray in the cage, replacing it with a fresh one when they have picked out all the seed. For some years Parson Finches have been quite uncommon on the market, and 15s. to 20s. for a good pair would not be an out-of-the-way price.

Rice Birds Dying (Unfortunate).—The cause of death is still somewhat of a mystery. I can only conclude that the birds either became infected during importation or in the dealer's shop. All newly-imported birds received during late autumn or winter should be kept in a comfortably warm atmosphere, even reputably hardy species. The white variety is not so hardy as the original (Grey) species; nevertheless, it is not fragile, and can be kept out of doors all the year round, providing it is not put out in the initial instance earlier than May. The same applies equally to the Grey species. I have had young of these (though I do not keep this species now) leave the nest almost every month in the year, including November, December, January, February and March. The two varieties readily inter-breed as a rule, and the Pied examples of such unions are distinctly pleasing.

Aviary Queries (I. Rich). — The aviary has a somewhat sunless aspect, and is also somewhat cold. However, Budgerigars and Cockatiels would do well there, but I am rather doubtful about the Blue-wing Lovebirds, but these are very enduring and they are worth the trial, and I am of the opinion that if you make a wood and glass shutter for use during severe weather the birds will thrive and do well. The door (partly wire netting) would be better for having glass panels permanently fixed over the netting. You must so arrange that proper ventilation is secured when the shutter is closed. The Canaries and Finches failed because they were put out too late in the year; had they spent most of the summer in the aviary the greater part of them, at any rate, would have survived the winter. But the general conditions are more favourable to keeping the small Parakeets than Finches, and I trust you will have luck with them—the present is a good time to secure your stock.

An Ailing Grey Parrot (T.G.S.).—You must give me further details as to your feeding and general treatment before I can give you a full reply—also the same as to the leg trouble. How did it start, and is it of long duration? In the meantime, give three doses of Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful in the drinking water (one ounce)—on alternate days. Do not give tea, coffee, and milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Diet: Canary, white millet, and hemp seed, only one part of the latter to two parts each of the former, well mix, and keep a supply in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit and a few nuts. Plain biscuit or stale household bread, moistened with chemical food and water may also be given. If you have been giving boiled maize, you must not discontinue this suddenly, but gradually wean it off same as it becomes accustomed to the food advised.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Cuttings (D. McCarthy, Cardi Bach, A. Jones, and others).—Accept our thanks for the newspaper cuttings sent.

A Paper (R. E. Helliwell).—Many thanks for your kind promise.

A Photograph (C. Sadler).—Many thanks; pleased to find a corner for the photograph in the near future.

A Wire Front (M. E. N.).—We are inclined to think that you should have lodged a claim with the railway company for the value of the wire front, which they delivered damaged. Do this at once, and see what they have to say. We agree that the sender ought certainly to have replied to your letter. Yes; we may be having a stall at one or other of the summer exhibitions in London, and will announce this in due course.

A Nightingale (W. F. Wilbee).—If you have documentary proof of the alleged arrangement to return the 10s. if the Nightingale turned out to be a hen, then you can undoubtedly enforce it in a court of law. Even without documentary evidence, we think, on the facts as stated by you, that you have a very good case for the return of your money.

The Hand-rearing of Thrushes (Amateur).—The hand-rearing is fully described in the "Nutshell" booklet (post free, 2½d.) on the Thrush. A long letter, full of practical advice, appeared on page 389 of our issue of April 22nd; and an article on page 844 of issue dated April 8th. Did you not see these? The methods which rear Blackbirds will rear Thrushes.

An Aviary Problem (Miss F. Louis).—The particulars you give are too meagre. You must state the size of the aviary, and the number and kind of its inmates. What are the birds which have lost their feathers? And is there any fighting going on; or are the feathers falling as the result of "soft" moult (a moult out of season)? Is the Goldfinch mentioned a very wild, unsteady bird; is there anything wrong with its legs, or wings? We are anxious to help our readers to the best of our ability, but we cannot, of course, unless full particulars of every case be put before us.

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Correspondence.

What Bird Was This?

Sir,—On Wednesday, April 26th, whilst in the garden, about 9 a.m., a bird passed me flying very low, and laboured, from the east, and going against a stiff west wind. Size about the same as a Redwing Thrush, colour black, with bright yellow head and neck. Can any of your readers identify it? I take it to be an escaped foreigner.

C. M. Matthews.

Migrants in Scotland.

Sir,—I see the Cuckoo and Swallow have been seen in the county of Surrey, but no date is given. The Swallows were seen here on April 18th, four days later than last year, and the Willow Wren on the 27th. The Willow Wren, as a rule, always appears here first, from April 15th to the 22nd, and the Swallows a few days later than the Willow Wrens. I have not heard the Cuckoo yet. I may say we are five miles west from Dunfermline.

W. D. Hogg.

A New Cage Bird Society for Redhill.

Sir,—At a meeting held on April 10th, at Mutton's Hotel, it was decided by the Cage Bird Section of the Reigate Fanciers' Association to sever their connection from that society and to form a new Cage Bird Society, i.e., the Redhill C.B.S. Meetings will be held at 8 p.m. on the first Tuesday in each month at Mutton's Hotel. I have taken over the duties of secretary, and hope to have a strong society soon. We shall try our best for the members. I have one challenge cup promised, and one we have got. We hope to be able to get another for the British bird section. Subscriptions for old members, 3s. yearly; for new members, 1s. on nomination, and 3s. yearly. The society is open to England. Will intending members write me at once?

A. W. Bacon, Hon. Sec.

The Clashing of Shows in Ireland.

Sir,—On perusing the dates of the shows which are to be held in Ireland, I see that Sligo and the Y.C. and C.B.S. of Ireland have had their show dates fixed evidently to boycott each other. Could Sligo not hold their show a week earlier? Then, again, the Dublin P.B. and C.B.S. and Larne Shows clash. Could not Larne hold theirs on the 8th and 9th Dec. and give birds that are being exhibited at Dublin a chance of competing at Larne? Although the birds would have to be sent on from Dublin to Larne direct to arrive in time, I am sure it would encourage fanciers to support Larne Show. There has been a new society formed in Newtownards, Co. Down. May I suggest that the secretary of this and other societies have the dates of their shows inserted in the Dates Fixed column of Cage Birds, and so save clashing? Re the Belfast N.C. and Y.C.C., it is surprising that the secretary or corresponding secretary did not reply to the letter signed "Ligoniel." It is to be hoped that at their next meeting the owner of the cup winner will confute the allegations made at the last meeting by the owner of the runner-up, and that the Hon. Secretary will give a report of the meeting through Cage Birds.

Show Supporter.

Lancashires and Lizards of To-day and Yesterday.

Sir,—I see Alex Donnelly wants readers to still think I know nothing about Lancashires. Well, he is welcome to his opinions. Allow me to congratulate him on the way he has fulfilled his mission to "show me up." At the meeting held last Saturday, the members told me to take no notice of him, but if I don't reply readers will think I have given in to a man who has got nothing and never had anything to show on the bench or in the breeding room but mongrels, and not a good one at that. He mentions the names of four good sound fanciers, Messrs. Adams, Turner, Hordern and Fitten; now, three of the above gentlemen are amongst my best friends. Mr. Turner, I have not the pleasure of knowing, but hope to do so before long, as I do know he is a fine fancier. Mr. D. says Barker Clegg cannot teach me anything; no, he cannot, for he did that years ago before Mr. Donnelly was thought of in the Fancy. Most of his letter is twaddle and abuse. My last letter should have read Mr. Samuel Fitten (Laural Street, Rochdale); T. Fitten was a misprint. He goes on to say he believes I showed in the novice classes at the club show, and asks, did I win? I did not show in the novice class, but a bird I bred won first in the novice class. Mr. Donnelly, and will win in open classes, all being well. The gentleman that owns him now thinks he has a good one. All readers know the reason I don't show. But take a tip from me, my time is coming very fast. You will be reading something in Cage Birds before the show season comes round—something new that will open the eyes of you and your mongrel-breeding friends. Wait and see. Mr. Donnelly says I keep drawing the names of his friends into my letter; well, I don't think you have any friends in the L. and L.F.A., only one, Mr. Donnelly, judging from the remarks last Saturday night at the meeting of the best breeders of Lancashire birds. Mr. Donnelly mentions the word honesty. Have you forgotten telling me in your "soft soapy" way the second time you spoke to me that I was too honest to be a bird fancier? That was in the Wellington Hotel, in Stretford Road, some few years ago. It is cheering to know I am honest in my old days. No one ever said what you said in my running days at Sheffield, so it is as well to know it. Mr. Donnelly says I can find his name in the Cage Birds Annual; I should think one will want to know his name and address after reading his grand masterpiece in this week's Cage Birds.

E. Fuller.

Sir,—I see a reply from Mr. Dewsnap. Now, my letter should have read: "I do object to Mr. Dewsnap getting Mr. Donnelly to write and show me up, as he told my friends he would do." Well, you have done it very well, John, and I shall believe them before I shall believe you. You say you could show something up; do so by all means. You do not seem to be convinced that I never intended to do you an injury. You say you have had a good day; you have, and I hope you will have another good one. You have been a good sprinter, but I don't think you are a great stayer. It has been a good job for you, Bob Wood, Jack Ogden, Ben Bardsley, A. Hamer, and Fred Baker were not knocking about. You say you will try again; that is right, but remember you will have to go a bit next season to beat Walter Whipp, F. Hamer and H. Oliver, to say nothing about J. Rukin and Joe Hampshire. It won't be a walk over, John. Good fanciers tell me to let you and your new-found friend, Mr. Donnelly, stew you in your own juice.

E. Fuller.

[We have had to considerably condense this letter, much of its contents being of a libellous and quite unpublishable character.—Editor.]

Sir,—Mr. Fuller says the Lancashire is a "mongrel," and no breeder or exhibitor has contradicted him. The only reply is one of "abuse." Now, breeders, Mr. Fuller knows what he is talking about, so what has the novice to learn from this? Simply this: Instead of buying "Weedlings" from so-called Lancashire breeders, get a Lancashire and a Crest—do as the champions do—and if you breed a "fat head," show it. Never mind the schedule stating "prizes awarded for purity of race"—it has no reference to the Lancashire. And if you keep Lizards, if you breed a good bird with a few white feathers, put it on one side until the later shows where special judges are appointed—at these shows the deck sweepers are often cardless, and the novice and painters get a chance there. But don't try anything on at Rochdale. During the season just closed one of our most successful exhibitors was asked to judge the Lizards at a certain show, and like the gentleman he is, said he knew nothing about the Variety. But he was persuaded to take it on. He did manage to muddle through the Clear Caps, but when he came to the Broken Caps, they brought him one without cap, which bottled him up altogether.

A Novice.

A Goldfinch Slaughters Its Canary Mate.

Sir,—Kindly allow me to ask any of your readers if they have ever had a cock Goldfinch kill and almost skin a hen Canary? He was a last year's Greypate. I mated him up the last week in March to a yellow hen which has gone to nest. I moved him into the next compartment and put him to another Canary hen. But on going into the room about two hours later, he had killed and almost skinned her. I should be interested to hear if anyone has ever had the same thing occur.

T. Hanbury.

A Linnet Problem.

Sir,—In reply to "Novice" re the above; if his Linnets are singing it is a good sign that they are contented with his treatment, or they would not pour forth their beautiful song. But he should buy Cage Birds "Nutshell" booklet (price twopence) on the Linnet. He will not have had such a good bargain when he bought his Linnets as he will have when he buys this booklet. He will then have a "cop" indeed. Various ways of steadying are given therein. He must always remember that Linnets when in health always hop about, especially when he goes to feed them—it's natural to them. And "Novice" must keep a cool head, and fuss about with them and talk to them before they will come and take tit-bits from his fingers. But you can take my tip: if you can't tame them by the treatment in the "Nutshell" you can let them alone to jump about. I am aware there are other ways, such as partially starving them, etc., into subjection, but that is not at all good for the birds.

Keeping Birds' Eggs.

Sir,—Could any of your readers tell me the best way to preserve British birds' eggs for a collection? I find after they have been blown and kept for about twelve months that they crack. I should be very pleased if someone could tell me if anything can be put inside the shell, after they are blown, to preserve them.

British Bird.

Early Mule Breeding.

Sir,—As a reader of Cage Birds, I noticed letters on early Mules. I may say I have a Siskin paired to a hen Canary which laid her first egg on March 5th, and two more. She hatched out on March 21st two young which are now on the sticks. I have the same bird paired to two more hen Canaries—one sitting five eggs, and the third just building. I would like to know if I am the first with Siskin Mules this season? I wish Cage Birds a good seasou and much success.

H. Nanson.

Fife Shows and Their Judges.

Sir,—I agree with the writer of the letter on April 15th, not with the writer of the 29th. I thought Fifeshire was a large shire, but by the last-mentioned letter it is very small. You mention, "Fifeshire Exhibitor," a few prominent men for judges. Surely you never took into consideration how many shows are held in Fife? If those are the only judges you can put your hands on, the Fifers are forced to cross the dub for judges. Your idea might work well enough in 1911. Behold, 1912; you would not need auy judges, I suppose? I could choose twenty more judges, if not specialists. About the judges you mentioned, did you take into consideration what section of birds they followed up? If a secretary writes to any of these men for their terms, and their terms are satisfactory, they are engaged. That is very well, for they give their straight opinion, based on what they know. But the poor exhibitor has to pay for it. My way of thinking is to select judges to judge birds that he breeds himself. For instance, a Crest breeder is engaged to judge two sections, Crests and Plainheads. He is not able to give full satisfaction, for a Crest breeder goes for feathers, whereas a Plainhead is short in feather, and compact. He cannot give satisfactiou. It is the same with the Borders; these fanciers will not have a Plainhead judge on any condition. When the Border Club gives their patronage to any shows the latter have to appoint a club judge to get it. I hold for type, quality, and condition.

Fair Play All Round.

An Appeal from the Secretary.

Sir,—I would make an earnest appeal to all societies who intend holding their shows under Cage Bird Union rules to let me have the following particulars at once, so that I can get on with the work. Without these particulars, it is impossible to fix dates, so as to avoid clashing, and also impossible to get the new Council elected. Now that rule 22 is suspended, there is nothing to debar any society from joining, as affiliation does not prevent members from showing where they please. No doubt members of the Union will support Union shows as far as possible. I do not think any fair-minded man will gainsay the statement that since the formation of the Union the Fancy has been cleaner than ever it was before. Not so much on account of the fraud detected and punished, but because of the fact that the Union has made fraud a very dangerous thing to practise. So if the Union has done nothing but prevent fraud, it has justified its existence. The particulars wanted are: The payment of the initial 5s. subscription to enable dates to be fixed; the name and address of delegate so that the new Council can be elected; and the date of show. Once I get these particulars all matters connected with the working of the Union will be promptly dealt with. If any societies have railway petitions not yet sent in, will they please send them in at once as the matter must be dealt with at end of this month. I thank all societies in anticipation.

A Lucky Hit in Light Mules.

Sir,—On receiving this week's Cage Birds I had a pleasant surprise to see you had done me the honour of putting the picture of my Goldfinch-Canary Hybrid on your front page. I may say he has only been out of the money once in three years, and that was at the last Crystal Palace Show. On that occasion he won me the Crystal Palace Brouze Medal for the best vhc in three classes, and I had hc with his brother. I value the medal more than the prize money. I thought it might interest my brother fanciers to know how I met with these Mules. They were bred by a man in Newport (Salop), who did not show, or take much interest in birds—only bred a few in his humble cottage. He bred the clear one that Messrs. Tanis and Son exhibit, only it is a hen, and rather small; still, it has done some winning. I heard he had bred three in the season 1907, so I was in Newport one day, and by accident met with him, and a lucky accident it was, too! He told mo he would like me to see his light Mules. I went with him. He had sold one to Mr. Brotherhood (which did some winning, and was claimed at Peterborough £5 limit Show by Mr. Lawrence, Coventry). I tried to buy the two that were left, but he would not decide then. But he sent a letter for me to take him a pair of colour-fed Norwich Canaries and some cash. I was at once off, you can guess, and gave him 15s. and the birds in exchange. It was a nasty foggy day, but when I secured them I found there was no train for 3½ hours, so I walked to Dawley, a good ten miles, with them, and if I had the same chance again I would walk thirty miles. I may say that one bird is little inferior to the other. One critic in a show report of the recent Horticultural Hall, said: "Look like twins, cannot tell 'tother from which." When they were at the Palace I had them painted by your Mr. Norman, and I have a picture that would not disgrace any drawing-room. It is marvellous, and shows the superh qualities of your artist. In conclusion, I may say that as regards Sib breeding, this man knew nothing about it, and this Goldfinch would breed light or clear Mules with any hen. I tried to get this Finch, but, no, he would not part with it, and I believe the bird came to a sad end when he was braced for catching one day. This man could breed at random, while we other fanciers try, try, try again, but have not succeeded. But I mean keeping on. I am sure of this, that the lightness comes from the Finch. Cage Birds is a blessing every week-end to fanciers, and I wish it all possible success.

Green and Cinnamon Border Fancies.

What Constitutes Correct Colour and Pencilling?

Sir,—The committee of the Border Fancy Canary Club appointed to decide upon what constitutes the correct colour and pencillings of the Green and Cinnamon Border Fancy Canaries, met in the Viaduct Hotel, Carlisle, on April 22nd. Present: Mr. J. B. Richardson in the chair, Messrs. Arnot, J. Patterson, D. Hamilton, J. Johnstone. After due consideration they arrived unanimously at the following decisions: That the Green Border Fancy Canary must conform to the club's standard on all points but colour; that the correct colour should be a rich grass green, sound and level throughout, free from bronze or olive tints; pencilling on back to be clear and distinct, but neither broad nor heavy, flank pencilling to be finer, but in harmony with that ou back. Beaks, legs, and feet dark, light beaks, legs or feet not to be a disqualification, but to count against a bird according to extent. Points to he avoided are: Head too dark; light throats or thighs; lightness on abdomen towards vent or on rump. The Cinnamon variety must also conform to the club's standard in all but colour. The colour must be of a rich deep cinnamon tint throughout, with faint markings on back and flanks; greenish or too light tints to be avoided.

J. B. Richardson, President.

The Making of a Breeding Cage.

Sir,—I should feel greatly obliged if you would make clear the following. I am making a rack as per Cage Birds illustrated article by Mr. Norman, and I am going to make cages to fit same. But I cannot quite grasp whether the back of the cages overlap the sides or whether the sides overlap the back of cage, as by cutting the sides 15½in. by 11in. and nailing the back to the sides, there is a projection of ½in. Also kindly state what thickness wood is required for tops and side. I wish Cage Birds every success, as I think it is a grand penny-worth.

J. H. C.

Mr. H. Norman writes: In making breeding cages as described in the several articles already published, it is intended for the backs to go inside, the sides being nailed to them. Has J. H. C. seen the letter in the correspondence columns of our issue of April 8th? The thickness of the wood for the top and bottom is the same as is used for the sides and back, that is, ½in. boards (which are ⅝in. thick when prepared, in which condition it can be bought through the advertisements in "C.B.")

A Reader Makes a Good Start in Canary Breeding.

Sir,—I started the season on January 15th last. Seeing one of my hens carrying a bit of rubbish about, and as they have a cosy corner in the kitchen, I introduced the cock Canary to her, and she started to build, and laid her first egg on the 19th of January. She laid four eggs. Two proved fertile, and hatched; so I was just in time with the cock bird. She fed one of them well, but the other she let die in a day or two's time, so I had good hopes for the next round. I am colour feeding the one, which is deep in moult now, and coming out with the colour-fed feathers. The hen started pulling his feathers out, so I put him in a Yorkshire show cage and put him on the front of the breeder and let the cock in for the second time on the 5th of March. She laid four eggs, and hatched four young on March 30th, which are doing well, and will do for the early shows. The hen laid on the 28th of April, so I hope to have a successful season with this one pair. I have not been so successful with my other pairs in my aviary, as the weather has been so changeable. I have my Muling pairs up now, and hope to breed a Mule or Hybrid or two. I must thank the writers in Cage Birds and Cage Birds Annual for the many hints I have had from time to time, as I have been successful on the show bench.

W. Aitken.

Mule and Hybrid Breeding Notes.

Sir,—Most Goldfinches, Linnets, Redpolls, Twites, Greenfinches, Siskins, and some foreign Finches will breed with Canary and with Goldfinch hens, but there is no instance of the cock Bullie breeding except with hens of his own species, so that all the Bullfinch Hybrids hace come from the hen Bullies. It is the ambition of every Mule breeder to breed perfectly light or clear Mules, but the birds all have a tendency to throw dark ones when paired to Canary hens. Any hen that can breed a Mule that has even a few light feathers should be mated with a closely related cock for the purpose of getting the strain. This is what is called sib-breeding, but unless the tendency is there to throw pied Mules, no amount of sib-breeding will induce a bird to do so. Birds of this class are very hard to get, and can be got only by inbreeding your own stock. Muling hens as large as possible should be selected, and the Finches also should be big, for a small Mule, however beautiful in plumage, or marking, is not so valuable for selling or for the show bench as a large one. Nearly every house-moulted Goldfinch or Linnet, if tame and steady, will pair with a hen Canary, and most Bullfinch hens (those reared from the nest are preferred, or large foreigners may be used), will breed in cages. The chief thing to avoid is the constant quarrelling and fighting; but the use of the two-compartment cage will easily remedy this, and there is no necessity for the birds to be constantly together. When the hens have made good progress in nest-building, they will accept the attentions of almost any cock bird. Canary hens, paired with cocks not of their own species, should be shut off by themselves after the eggs have been given them for incubation, as they will be more likely to hatch and rear their young by themselves. Young Mules grow very quickly—much quicker than Canaries. They will generally feed themselves at the age of three weeks. Wild birds will not generally rear their young in confinement. The eggs should be given to other Canaries to hatch and rear when attempting to breed from Goldfinch or Linnet hens paired to any other Finch; very large cages or small rooms should be used. Goldfinch Canary Mules are valued in the same way as Canaries—the lighter the plumage the more valuable the bird. Variegation is not of any value unless it constitutes even markings on eyes and wings. Clear Mules on account of their rarity fetch large prices. The best cages for Mule breeding are those called double-breeding cages, with a sliding wired partition, so that the pair can be easily parted. It should be thirty inches long, ten inches from back to front, and twelve inches high. High perches must be avoided when one is dealing with hen Bullies, as these birds are apt to drop their eggs; the floor of the cage, too, should be covered with moss or finely cut chaff.

George Knight.

Blackbirds and Thrushes: Their Rearing and Management.

Sir,—Seeing the letter on Blackbirds in the correspondence columns of Cage Birds, I think perhaps my method of feeding big Softbills, such as Blackbirds, Thrushes, Fieldfares, Missel Thrushes, and Redwings, may be of interest to some of the novices. Staple food: Biscuit meal, 2½d. a pound, "Laymor' Meal, 1s. a bag (about 7lbs.). Add to "Laymor" Meal 2lbs. oatmeal (3d. lb.), 1 lb. peameal (2d. lb.), and thoroughly mix. Last, but not least, a 3d. packet Spratt's "Crissell." Soak biscuit meal in boiling water (not too sloppy), then add same quantity of "Laymor" Meal to make it into a dryish crumbly paste (one teaspoonful of "Crissell" to each bird); soak with the biscuit meal. Also give six or seven grocer's currants to each bird daily, and any greenstuff in season (chopped). Any live insects, such as snails, white slugs, beetles, flies, spiders, caterpillars, as may cross your path will be appreciated by them. For hand rearing I use the above, excepting that I mix with milk instead of water, and I add hard-boiled egg, and a few mealworms. I reared sixteen Thrushes out of sixteen last summer on same. I make my cages out of Quaker Oats boxes as they are a decent size—roughly, 25 inches long, 18 inches high, and 12 inches deep. The box costs 3d., wire front 9d., and food and water I give outside. Have the door seven inches long, so that you can put in a bath. Size of bath, 6½ inches square by 3½ inches deep. Pull out false bottom or sand tray, and then put in the bath. When they have washed put the false bottom back, with sand in summer and sawdust in winter. I say sawdust in winter because I find that in damp wintry days the air makes the sand keep damp, and anyone knows that a damp cage is harmful to birds. Clean your perches once a week, or oftener, if you can spare the time, and clean the cage out every third or fourth day. Birds treated as above will be well, look well, and sing well. I have heard it stated that a Redwing will not sing in captivity, but I have one which is fairly tame, and sings very decently (not so free as my Blackies or Thrushes, but, still, it sings). I have a cock Blackbird five years old which is in grand feather; it whistles little snatches of the following: "Army Duff," "Going to get married to-morrow," "Prettiest little song of all," and other odd notes. I also have a hen Thrush which, if I show her a cock bird, will fuss about and call to him; she is mad to go to nest. But I can see no fun in trying her with a Thrush when you can get a nest of wild young ones for a shilling. I tried her with a Blackbird, but they fought like Kilkenny cats, and looked perfect wrecks. So I separated them. If any of your readers would like the hen to try they are welcome to have her. I think the "Bird Fever" must run in the family, as my father is a birdy man, and many the light Mules my grandfather (who is still in the hobby) has sold to the old veteran actor, Jimmy Doel.

C. M. Matthews, Jun.

We Are Seven.

My Favourite Finches and their Foods.

Sir,—The Greenfinch is, no doubt, the commonest of our British Finches. It is to be found all over Great Britain. It is a large, powerful bird of grass green colour. The cock bird can be easily distinguished from the hen by his brighter colour. In the spring and summer time the birds can be seen along every hedge, where they build their nests in the thorns and other trees. In the autumn large flocks can be seen flying southwards to warmer climes. None of the birds start migrating until they have moulted, and then the young birds fly first. It is when the birds are flying southwards that we in Lancashire catch them; good call birds are required, and on frosty mornings, between daylight and 11 a.m., large numbers can be taken with nets or birdlime. At that time of the year cock birds can be purchased for twopence each, but if the Greenfinch were not so common, it would be worth more than any other British bird. When first caught they should be placed in a box cage to get them steady, and should thrive on the following mixture: hemp, canary, and sunflower, two parts of each; rape, half a part; shepherd's purse, plantain, chickweed, and any other wild seeds or green food they will eat. The Goldfinch is the most popular Finch we have. His variety of colour and pretty song make him a general favourite. He is caught on the same lines as the Greenfinch, and should be treated the same, although a great deal of sunflower is not necessary. In addition to the above, he should have inga, thistle, and dandelion occasionally. He is an invaluable bird to the mule and hybrid breeder, but very seldom breeds before he is house-moulted. The Bullfinch is another great favourite, becoming very docile in captivity. He can be taught to pipe tunes. Canary, summer rape, and sunflower seeds form his chief diet. Do not give him hemp. When moulting, his colours are apt to dull down, but plenty of berries, fruit, and wild seeds tend to make his colours bright. The Chaffinch, commonly called the "pink" (on account of his note), is a beautiful bird. His food should consist of rape, canary, and teazle, a few hemp seeds occasionally, and sunflower. Some fanciers give soft food, but I never do. Mine get two or three mealworms a day, and any live food they will eat, especially the common house fly, which they greatly relish. These birds breed very freely in Lancashire, and large numbers are taken in the autumn, when they are migrating. When first caught they are very nervous, but that soon wears off. Their song is by no means to be despised. The Linnet is the working man's favourite, and to a beginner I would recommend this bird for three reasons. Firstly, because it is cheap; one can be purchased for sixpence. Secondly, it settles down and becomes tame very soon. Thirdly, it has a beautiful song. His diet should consist of the following seeds: canary, two parts; rape and cole, half a part; and a little crushed hemp and wild seeds occasionally. The Bramblefinch (the beautiful spangled Finch) is the wildest one. His food should be hemp, rape, canary, and sunflower, which has plenty of colour in it. He is much sought after by exhibitors, and when moulting, should be colour-fed. Be careful if he is put among other birds, because he is strong and powerful, and his beak can do much damage. The Redpoll is a delightful little bird, good at mimicking other birds, and doing tricks. Strange to say, the red poll does not return after moulting in captivity, but is replaced by a yellow one. He should be treated exactly the same as the Linnet. All the above-named should be given green food and wild seed occasionally, and should have the cages strewn with sand. A piece of cuttlefish should always be in the cage for them to pick at.

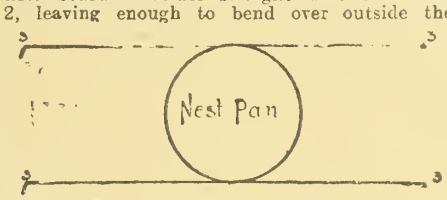
Illustrated Ideas

No. 504.
A Swing Wire Front.
Sent by Mr. Thos. Burns, 30, Hammond Street, Newcastle.



I send you a sketch of one of my own ideas, viz., a swing wire front. It only requires two thick wires, one for the front to swing on and one to fasten same on to at both ends of cage. Your readers will find it very convenient when cleaning out and renovating any size cage. I think the sketch will explain itself.—Thomas Burns.

No. 505.
A Sanitary Nest-pan Holder.
Sent by Mr. A. Bryden, Birthwood, Biggar, N.B.

I enclose this sketch after using the appliance with great success myself. It suits those who use the all-wire cage, as a sanitary nest-pan holder, in place of the old-fashioned nest board. Solder straight wire at 1 and 2, leaving enough to bend over outside the cage bar, at 3. I also gauge it so that the nest comes right opposite the end door, and by placing the perch close to the front wire it makes a good job and keeps the birds much cleaner around the nest. I trust the idea will prove useful to others.—Alex. Bryden.

*A Story of a "Lark."

During a conversation about birds and their song, a farmer told his friend what a good singing Lark he had, and invited his friend to come over and hear the bird. But his friend said he would rather buy the bird. So the old farmer decided to give him the bird as he had plenty more left. The day was fixed for him to come over a distance of five miles, and when he arrived the farmer asked him if he had brought a cage. He said "Yes." Off they went then up the fields, and the first Lark that mounted up singing the farmer told him was the one he meant. You can take it with you, he added. This story is true, as the farmer lives in same street as myself.—Sent by Winnie Smith (age 10), 77, Queen Street, Mosbro', Sheffield.

Under the White Rose.

Yorkshire County British Bird and Mule Club held their annual meeting on Saturday last at their headquarters, the Market Tavern, Bradford, when a fairly representative body interested put in an appearance, the business of the evening being got through in good style. Financially, the club is in a much better position to start the year with than since its formation, and here great credit is due to the hard-working secretaries, Messrs. Lane and Jowett. They have struggled hard to attain the end, and they hope now that the club will flourish considerably, and continue to be a great help to the British, etc., Fancy.

THE post of President was unanimously given to Mr. Archer, of Huddersfield, who during the time he has been a member has put in some useful work for the advancement of the society. Amongst the vice-presidents were also included such well-known fanciers as Messrs. Towers, Hammond, and Chittenden, the latter being the principal worker in the formation of the club; the honour is well deserved. These, along with the other vice-presidents, who were re-elected, ought to make things "hum" a little in this section of the Fancy. I might also mention that Mr. Duncan, Jun., who retires from the position of president, is included in the list of vice-presidents. The joint secretaries were also with one accord re-elected to continue in office.

DURING the week end I dropped across a member of the above-named club who had been spending a few hours roaming about the country side, and he informed me that many of the migrants had arrived in the district. Several Warblers, the Yellow Wagtails, the Wheatears, etc., had all taken up their old haunts. I know now it will be of no use going to visit him; he will always be off to see if anything new has turned up.

Y.C.B.B. AND M.C. are trying to make arrangements to have a lecture by a prominent fancier on the various exhibition birds, Linnets, all the Finches, etc., and I would like to suggest that a pleasant afternoon be made of it, say, a ramble, a tea, and then the meeting to follow. There are many places round Bradford both worthy of a visit and convenient.

Brace Birds Again.

John B. Williams (65) was charged on April 27th with cruelty to two birds by bracing their wings whilst in captivity and attached to a certain appliance, causing them unnecessary suffering, at Longwell Green, near Bristol, on April 20th.

P.S. Sims deposed that he saw the man in a field at Longwell Green. There were two long nets, and the birds were braced to the ground. Now and again the man used a trigger, causing the birds to fly up in the air. Witness took possession of the birds (Linnets), and they were so exhausted they died in his hand. They were tied around the body with string and wire. Defendant said he was employed to catch the birds, which were a pest on the land.

Inspector Cole said that he examined the place where defendant had been operating with the birds, and found that extensive preparations had been made. He had seen hundreds of places arranged for bird catching, and he never saw one laid out as the one in question was. Five posts had been laid in the ground for hanging the "call" birds.

It was defendant's first offence, and, promising not to offend again, he was fined 5s. and costs.

*A Parrot's Teasing Way.

My uncle once had a Parrot, which was kept in a cage in the sitting-room. He also had a dog called "Fido." When Poll was given any tasty bits, she would call for "Fido," who would run out of the kennel into the house. Then Poll said: "Go to your kennel, go to your kennel," and the poor dog would go back to the kennel disappointed.—Florence Hargraves (aged 11), 4, New Bank Road, Blackburn.

A Bit of Luck.

A friend of ours thought he would breed Canaries, so he bought a pair. The hen laid four eggs, and they were all clear and he threw them away. One day he paid a visit to a friend who had a hen sitting on three eggs. His friend's hen became ill, so he said he would take the eggs to his hen. It was a bitterly cold night, and he had a mile and a half to go. About eight o'clock the next morning he saw three baby Canaries in the nest, and they are now getting on well.—Sent by Jane Davey (age 12 years), 30, Baillie's Causeway, Hamilton, Lanarkshire.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

SUPERIOR ALUMINIUM RINGS

METHODICAL BREEDERS aiming at success, must proceed on scientific lines by marking their birds with these first-grade rings, to enable them to identify the pedigree of all birds bred. Adopted and highly recommended by leading fanciers for years. CAGE BIRDS says:—"One of the best samples we have seen. Very light and beautifully made, with no rough edges." 100 for 2/9, 75 for 2/3, 50 for 1/6, 25 for 10d., post free. Consecutively numbered with or without year. Supplied with or without flanges.

Remember, these rings enjoy a reputation of many years' standing. They are the lightest, compatible with strength, and obsolutely the neatest on the market. Plain numbers, which do not fill with dirt.

Send your orders, or for new samplea, at once. Sure to run short, and can't get any more this acason. There's a great scarcity in new crop. Mr. J. E. Davies, Stockport, May, 1911.—"Sir, I have much pleasure in saying that your colour food has during the past year given me every satisfaction, having secured over 50 firsts, also seconds, etc., besides N.P.C. Challenge Cup. This is second year in succession. Two firsts, fourth, and champion diploma Crystal Palace, 1911, and my birds were as bright a colour at Crystal Palace after being washed eleven times as they were at commencement of season. At Crystal Palace aix out of the eight champion first prize Norwich." Never saw any colour food, only my Royal Red. Every winner in champion Cinnamon section bar one third. Never saw any but my colour food. Another big winner in Yorkshires, who won two firsts, seconds, etc. Mr. Ambler, Morecambe, writes: "April, 1911.—Sir, I can say I got a hotter colour from your feed than any I have ever tried." Scotland's greatest winner this last season. Mr. G. Mitchell, Brechin, writes: April, 1911.—"I have used your colour feed for years, and have found it to be all that you claim." Wales' greatest winner, Mr. D. H. Tedstone, Brecon: "Sir, I am pleased to iuform you that I not only won the Welsh Cage Bird Cup. I won the solid silver Norwich Cup, the Leach Challenge Cup scores of firsts and specials, etc." I could fill this paper with testimonials like above; which should prove you need not try any other. CHEAP BIRDS THAT HAVE THEIR CHARM.

There are some British Hardbills whose songs and sprightliness give a cheery tone to any home. It is possible to so treat these that captivity has little effect on their natural inclinations. You can still have your Goldfinch keep his perkiness, your Bullfinch his rich plumage, your Chaffinch his charm, your Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite all their amusing little ways, and your Linnet his grand song, if you know how. To obtain any of these birds costs you little, and if you properly feed them and manage them during band-rearing, moulting, and breeding, you can easily get back your outlay many times over. What is the best way to set about preparing birds for exhibition, or for contest singing? You will find full particulars in any of the booklets which form a veritable library for even the humblest bird lover. "Nutshell" Booklets: No. 1, "The Goldfinch"; No. 2, "The Linnet"; No. 11, "The Bullfinch"; No. 13, "The Chaffinch"; No. 22, "The Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite." Post free 2½d. each, from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

and undoubtedly the severest to which the life of a bird is subjected is termed the moult. Moulting cannot be prevented, but it can be made easy and brought to a successful issue. If you do not know how to treat your birds at this time, you may lose them. Be guided by the experience of experts. There are good and bad methods of doing everything. Adopt the best in feeding and treating British Hardbills and Softbills during the moulting season. Get "Nutshell" No 12, "How to Moult British Birds," post free 2½d., from F. Carl, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

A Little Knowledge is a Dangerous Thing, and will certainly not bring you success if you are beginning the hobby of Canary breeding. It is ever so much more pleasing to turn your hobby to practical benefit to yourself than to aimlessly dabble with and make a hash of it. Do the latter and you might just as well have flung away the money you laid out. Get a sound knowledge of the branch of the bird Fancy you are about to adopt, and you will profit by it. You can do so for 6d. A book specially written for the beginner is Claude St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners." It has many helpful illustrations. Post free 7d., cloth bound 1/2, from the Publisher, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

EVERY BIRD A MODEL.

Good illustrations are an asset to every book. The illustrations in "House's Canary Manual," are by the famous bird artist, H. Norman. The matter in the book is as good as the illustrations. The Chapter on Roller Canaries is of exceptional interest to breeders. The illustrations show what to aim for, and the contents how to get it. "House's Canary Manual," post free 1/2, cloth bound 2/2, from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

WHO TOLD YOU?

Who told you I had sold out? Whoever it was made a mistake, for I always reserve a lot of extra good birds for this time of the year, just to make up my own breeding stock and the stocks of my many customers. Just you come over and inspect my stock, for I am sure to have the very birds you require, and what is most important, every bird is of sound, reliable quality. All cock birds are in full song, and hens in proud breeding condition. Every bird I guarantee untried, not a lot of breeder's wasters. If you want satisfaction, genuine, reliable birds, absolutely the best possible quality money can buy, you must send to the fountain head. It will save you such a lot of inconvenience and dissatisfaction, besides, look at the money you save. My customers do not know the meaning of the word dissatisfaction, for every bird I send out is well worth 25 per cent. more than the price paid for it. St. Andreasberg Rollers, cocks, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 17/6, 20/-, 25/- each; a few hens, 3/-, 3/6, 4/-, 5/- each; Yorkshire and Norwich songsters, 7/6, 8/6, 9/6, 10/6 each; Yorkshires all ready to nest, genuine, untried, long, slim, typical birds, cocks, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6; hens, 3/6, 4/6, 5/6, 6/6. Norwich, typical birds, in breeding condition, full of quality, cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6; hens, 3/6, 4/6, 5/6; matched breeding pairs, Yorkshires or Norwich, 9/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-. Thousands of unsolicited testimonials open for inspection. "THE STOCK BOOK," our invaluable "Breeding Room Register," by G. E. Weston. A well-known fancier has said of it:—"It makes bird breeding easy." It simplifies the operations in the bird-room, and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred; it contains both pedigree, breeding, young bird and show registers of simple and unique character, post free, 7d. from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-street, London, E.C

TWO EXAMPLES

Taken from hundreds during the present month. "High Street, Maidenhead, May 4, 1911.—I received the birds quite safe, and I am more than pleased with them; and I must thank you for your prompt manner of business, also the way in which they are packed. The pair of Yorkshires give every satisfaction, and the two hens are quite up to the mark. One has started building today, so I hope to have some good luck this season. I will let you know how I get on. Thanking you for your kind and esteemed services.—L. W. Copsey to W. Rudd."

A FACT WORTH KNOWING.

"Hartforth Grange, Richmond, Yorks., May, 1911.—Bird to hand yesterday, for which I beg to thank you for prompt attention. It is needless to say anything about the bird's quality, as everything is always first class from you. He is a good singer, and above my expectations. Thanking you again for the way you have always treated me.—A. E. Griffiths, to W. Rudd."

Remember, you still have plenty of time for successful breeding this season, and the following are all

RELIABLE BIRDS

OF UNAPPROACHABLE VALUE.

That is what all the following will be found:—

YORKSHIRES.—A really grand collection. And what is the Difference? Well, there is all the difference between what I sell you for the same prices as others charge—in the quality; and, for the best, there is all the difference in price. But, approval and comparison is the test of all tests. Hence, I say, favour me by having on approval. SITTINGBOURNE & DIST. C.B.S.

A very interesting evening was spent on May 1st. There was a table show for British birds, and also a lecture by Mr. T. Monday. The table show proved to be the greatest success of the year, there being a fine number of birds staged, which were judged by our energetic chairman, Mr. G. Whatford; the Goldfinch class especially, there being a large number, which made competition keen.

LINNET (10): 1, Olive, wins well, in fine condition; 2, Smith, splendid bird, good chest; 3, Hyland, running 2nd very close, beautiful spangled breast; 4, Broadbridge; vhc, Apps; hc, Attwood; c, Jacobs. GOLDFINCH (11): 1, Attwood, grand bird, ought to win in better company; 2, Burley, grand bird, splendid blaze, running winner close; 3, Tidy, grand bird, rather on small side; 4, Apps; vhc, Olive; hc, Hyland; c, Broadbridge. A.O.S. (12): 1, Rumble (Bullfinch), fine bird, good chest and cap; 2, Hyland (Redpoll), splendid condition, wins well; 3, 4, Smith, leader (Bramblefinch) splendid spangling (other a Chaffinch), grand bird; vbc, Broadbridge (Greenfinch).—B. Tidy, Hon. Sec.

Club Reports.

PELTON FELL AND DIST. C.B.S

Meeting held in Institute Hall, May 6th, Mr. J. Stanger in chair. Letters re judges for annual open show, on December 23rd, were read out for members' consideration. Ballot taken for judges, which resulted in Mr. F. Marwood (Thornaby-on-Tees) and Mr. J. Riseborough (Sunderland) being selected. Messrs. E. Atchinson and R. Peart were chosen as auditors for 1911 season.—W. Forster, Sec.

TORBAY O.S.

Annual ramble took place May 3. The morning was very dull, but it was not before our party was at the railway station that it commenced to rain, and it continued all the afternoon, ceasing just as we reached Churston Station for the return journey. We entrained at Paignton for Churston and walked to Greenaway, where we found a boat waiting to take us across the River Dart to Dittisham, a hamlet on the banks of the river, famous for plum orchards. But a ramble was made impossible by the weather, so the afternoon was whiled away quaffing ginger beer and looking out on the river from the parlour window of the village inn. A couple were daring enough to walk to the top of the village to view the Church, and were rewarded with a further drenching, while our chairman who, we learnt after, had visited the tea room on the previous occasion, was missing until we crossed from the inn to the tea room, where he found seated in the settee by the fireside quite "comfy." The hostess and her daughter had matters well in hand, so that there was no waiting, and after a good tea where Devonshire clotted cream was served ad lib, we immediately started for home, and owing to a wait at Churston Station a weighing competition was indulged in, when our late chairman, Mr. J. Webber, ran out an easy winner at 17st. 7lbs. Paignton was reached at 7.30 after an enjoyable, if wet, afternoon.—J. N. Jeffery, Sec.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Meeting held May 4th, Mr. J. G. Hutchinson in chair. We had a good attendance. Following new members elected: Messrs. Dunn, and T. W. Lumsden (of Newcastle), and Mr. J. H. Cross (Winlaton); and we all welcomed our old member from Wallsend, Mr. J. M. McDonald, who was re elected at the same time. After some discussion re the delivery of specials, it was proposed and carried that all members winning specials at our annual show collect them themselves. Of course, where any person is living at a distance, it will rest with the Secretary to see to their delivery. Two medals won at our late show were handed over, and Mr. Crawhall kindly provided one of these as the donor of the other medal had evidently only intended to give one, and we had taken his promise as two. A hearty vote of thanks was given Mr. Crawhall for his generosity. There are a few who think he is too generous in this respect. The balance sheet for the annual social was presented and adopted; this unfortunately shows a loss of £1, which was reduced to this amount by a donation of 2s. 6d. from Messrs. J. Taylor, sen., and T. C. Crawhall. The Committee of the social were greatly disappointed at the number of tickets which were returned on the day, and also on the previous day after all arrangements had been made for refreshments, etc. The next business was very pleasing to all, as our Chairman informed us he had the offer of the Engineers' Drill Hall, Sandyford Road, to hold ou rannual show in, on practically the same terms as we had the Cambridge Hall. This is a larger hall, and is well lighted and heated, and should prove a splendid place. He had been to great trouble, and had spent a lot of time in securing this hall, and a very hearty vote of thanks was passed to him. The Secretary was instructed to write and thank Colonel Crawford for his kindness in allowing us to use the hall. Proposed and seconded that the Carrer special be handed over to Mr. T. Taylor. Mr. Curry proposed that the secretary write all Specialist Clubs for their patronage. Schedule for Nest Feather Show were distributed, and also tickets for same. A slight error has crept into the schedule, and the secretary was instructed to rectify this. Many members paid their subscriptions, but there are a lot not paid yet, and he would like to avoid sending any notices out, as several members who received these last year took exception to them; so please let secretary have them as early as possible. The end of May is the latest date to entitle members to compete at Nest Feather Show. Will members who intend going to the annual picnic kindly let secretary know as soon as possible?—J. E. Atkinson, Secretary.

UDDINGSTON & DISTRICT O.S.

Meeting held Reading Rooms May 6th, Mr. J. Shepherd (treasurer) in chair. Moved and seconded to hold our F.F. show on first Saturday in August; points gained at same to be added to annual show totals for cup. Also agreed to hold annual show last Saturday in November. A motion to have a class at each of our monthly meetings was discussed; it was agreed to have a Redpoll class at next monthly meeting. Entry fee, 2d. each bird. Two new members were proposed and admitted. A motion to combine our show with poultry and pigeons was left over till next meeting so as to hear the opinion of fanciers in the district. A vote of thanks to chairman closed a very interesting meeting.—Jno. Kilpatrick, Sec.

SCOTTISH CRESTED C.C.

Result of official election, 1911:—Committee, Messrs. John McLay (28), G. F. Adamson (28), Wm. Paul (25), Allan Chalmers (25), John Noble (24), C. Campbell (23), J. Young (19), Wm. Cairns (19), G. McLay (27), J. Noble (25), A. Chalmers (21), G. F. Adamson (21), C. Campbell (18). Secretary and treasurer, Mr. John Young (27). Auditors, Messrs. F. Taylor (19), Geo. Smart (19). Venue of club show: Perth (8), Kilmarnock (5), Scottish National (3), Broxburn (3). 34 papers returned.—(Signed), Messrs. Taylor and Smart, Scrutineers.

WOMBWELL & DISTRICT B.F.A.

Meeting held May 6th; Mr. Malpass presided. The nest feather show business was dispensed with, and we devoted the rest of our time in framing a series of lectures. We are indebted to Mr. Hinchliffe, one of our members, for condescending to give us a washing lecture. As be is an experienced fancier, we are looking forward to an instructive lecture. Decided that two of our members visit the respective schoolmasters of the district with a view to holding a drawing competition. The society to give eight prizes for the best drawings of any kind of bird. At our annual show Messrs. Dean and Malpass promised to give specials to scholars giving the best essay on what they saw at the show. The society is in a fairly good position considering the period of existence of about twelve months, having a little over £4 to their credit. Anyone wishing to become a member will be welcomed.—J. Hudson.

LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

Meeting held at Manchester, April 29th, a good number of fanciers attending. The balance sheet, which showed a balance in hand of £5, and also auditor's report on same were passed as satisfactory. Decided that balance be used as per rule in getting specials for champion in Lancashires, champion in Lizards, also champions in novice Lancashires, ditto Lizards; also runners up in each section. Messrs. J. Swalwell and Jos. Oldham were appointed to purchase specials. Decided, that we let the idea of a first feather show drop, but we intend having a club show at Shaw instead. Decided, that we again give patronage to L.C.B.A., and Nottingham, and secretary was instructed to try and break fresh ground for shows for next season. Mr. Hartley Laycock was proposed a member. Also unanimously decided that we have our annual party at Mr. T. White's, Hyde, May 27th. Tea on the table at 5 o'clock. A hearty welcome will be extended to all, and members are requested to let the secretary know as soon as possible number likely to attend, so that Mr. White will know how many to cater for. It is also to be hoped that members will bring their wives and friends, as this party is open to all. Prizes will be presented after tea, and it is intended to finish the evening in a social manner. Will any members desirous of singing a song, etc., kindly let me know, so that if possible I can arrange a programme.—John Rukin, Hon. Sec.

SITTINGBOURNE & DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held May 1st, at headquarters, Mr. G. Whatford chairman. After the general business (and Mr. W. R. Elgar elected as president, and Mr. C. Smith as hon. auditor), Mr. T. Monday delivered a most interesting lecture, entitled "How to Become a Successful Breeder." He described everything minutely from the selecting of one's stock to the training and exhibiting of the feathered pets. Decided, to have a ramble on June 4th, taking the direction of Frinsted and Torry Hill, coming home via Downing Court and Milstead. Date fixed for nest feather show on July 5th, judge F. G. Wickham (of Chatham). After a very interesting evening the meeting was brought to a close.—B. Tidy, Hon. Sec.

SCOTCH FANCY CANARY NATIONAL DERBY O.A.

Membership for 1911 continued: Messrs. R. Johnstone (Musselburgh), T. Smith (Shannonwood), J. Wynnes (Airdrie), W. Allan (Edinburgh), H. Crawford (Robinsborough), J. Dalgleish (Leith), W. McCulloch, W. Lees, and J. Ward (Glasgow), J. Archibald (Greenock), J. Kennedy, jun. (Paisley), R. Thoms (Dundee), J. Carlaw (Falkirk), J. C. Millar (Govan), W. Nivin (Grahamstown), F. Strathearn (South Alloa), J. Maxwell and P. Maswell (Falkirk), A. Jardine (Maryhill), A. Buchanan (Shuttleston), J. Burnside (Lasmahagow), A. Lang (Rutherglen), J. Muir (Parkhead), R. Douglas (Mossend), L. Jackson and T Jackson (Kirkmuirhill), T. Brown (Duns), G. Byers (Dumfries), J. Jackson (Blackwood), J. Main (Coatbridge). Breeders of the Scotch Fancy Canary are reminded that membership closes on 31st May, and that all wishing to become members should be enrolled by that date at the very latest. A general meeting of the members will be held in the National Halls, Main Street, Gorbals, Glasgow, on 12th June, at 8 p.m. Business: Election of judges, etc.—R. Wright, President; J. Hogg, Vice-President; Thomas Smith, Sec. and Treas., 10, Lochside Street, Crossmyloof, Glasgow.

SCOTTISH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

Committee meeting held Good Templars' Hall, 122, Ingram Street, Glasgow, 29th April, Mr. Lay presiding, others present being Messrs. W. Aitchison, C. Campbell, R. B. Jarvie, and J. Young, and Secretary. A letter was read from Mr. J. Winter, proposing that Mr. Hector be appointed president. This was seconded by the chairman and carried unanimously. The following were appointed vice-presidents: Messrs. J. McLay, R. B. Jarvie, W. Aitchison, J. Winter, and T. Adamson. Mr. Hector (Aberdeen) wrote suggesting some alterations of the medal to be competed for at the shows during the coming season, and sent a sample, which he considered would be very suitable. After full discussion, it was decided to do nothing meantime, but when the time arrives for the selection of medals Mr. Hector's suggestions to be kept in view. Mr. Aitchison moved that the club discontinue the granting of medals, and instead, that one, two or more prizes be given for competition by members at the patronage shows, on the same lines as president's prize had been competed for during the past few years. The Chairman stated he was in sympathy with such an alteration, but pointed out that the committee had no power to adopt the points prize competition, which would require to come before the annual general meeting; and the matter was allowed to drop. The following were admitted to membership: Messrs. A. K. Chalmers, and J. McMeikin (Glasgow). J. S. Harris, and W. Gibson (Dysart). Secretaries are requested to note that club show will be held in East and South district this year, and those desirous of having this event in conjunction with their show are requested to send on their application. Annual subscriptions are now due, and should be paid early. Any fancier wishing to join the club can have full particulars from J. Brown, Secretary, 599, Duke Street, Glasgow.

NORWICH P.C.C. OF IRELAND.

Special meeting held Clarence Place Hall, May Street, Belfast, May 4th. There was a fair turn-up of members. Mr. John Cummings, president, occupied the chair. After some discussion on the matter, it was decided to proceed with the election of officers for 1911, which resulted as follows: Mr. J. Cummings, president; Mr. W. Connell, vice-president; Mr. J. Stewart, secretary and treasurer; committee, Messrs. J. Montgomery, J. Carson, S. Scott, H. Houston, J. Thompson, S. Bamford, and J. Kelso, with power to add to this number at any time. Mr. Stewart proposed, and Mr. Thompson seconded, that the club accept the two cups on the conditions laid down by those that have wins on them, that the cups are put on the table with the shields of present winners taken off, and in future to be competed for by unflighted birds bred by the competing exhibitors, one cup to go to champion section and one to novice section, the winner of the novice cup to receive a gold medal similar to those supplied by the Young Bird Club.—Passed. Mr. Stewart proposed, and Mr Montgomery seconded, that no society get the patronage of the club unless there are four competing exhibitors resident in the city or town in which the show is held.—Passed. Mr. Montgomery proposed, and Mr. Thompson seconded, that no application for the club's patronage be considered after the first of October in each year.—Passed. Mr. Connell suggested that points for cups at end of show season be drawn from a hat, one show in four or five to be left in hat. This was freely discussed, but was left over until next meeting, May 25th, at 8 p.m., in Clarence Place Hall, May Street, when the business will be the revision of rules, etc. A hearty invitation is extended to all old members to attend. I will be pleased to receive names from outside districts of any fanciers wishing to become members, either champion or novice; the subscription is 2s. 6d. annually.—Jas. Stewart, Hon. Sec.

WARRINGTON AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held headquarters April 27th. Mr. Knowles presided. After a lengthy discussion of the pros. and cons. re holding an open show, on the motion of Mr. Harper, seconded by Mr. Bretherton, it was decided to hold a one-day open show on November 11th, all being in favour. Nest feather show left over till next meeting.—G. M. Nelson, Sec.

NORTH SHIELDS AND DIST. O.S.

Meeting held May 3rd. Nearly the whole of the evening was spent in business dealing chiefly with the coming nest feather show, first Saturday in July; notification of time and place will be given later). Prominent members present: Messrs. Wilson (Tynemouth), Whittaker, of Border Fancy fame (North Shields), and R. McVay (the British bird king), who all had something very pleasing to say. Members please note time of starting, 7.30 prompt. Look out for nest feather show in July. Something great and grand.—R. P. Fox, Sec.

SCOTTISH METROPOLITAN (Open Derby) O.A.

On May 3rd and 4th we posted our recall notices to those fanciers who have not yet replied as to membership tickets sent earlier in the year. As our meeting takes place on May 27th I am very anxious to be in the position of making a good report as to membership. To enable me to do this, I will feel greatly obliged if you will send your decision by that date. Progress up till now is very satisfactory. Help to swell the number of joining.—J. R. Meikle, Sec.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Special meeting held May 3rd, Crown Hotel, Mr. Burke in chair. A moderate attendance did not look very well considering our total membership of 60 strong, but those that did come brought four intending members, who were nominated to be elected at next meeting. Proposed and carried that Rules 1 and 13, which are to be worded as proposed at April meeting, Mr. G. Baldwin (Hockley) was duly elected to membership. Proposed and carried that we hold our members' nest feather show at Crown Hotel on June 28th, with the same classification as last year's nest feather show.—S. Mole, Hon. Sec.

VALE OF LEVEN C.B.S.

Usual meeting held May 2nd, headquarters, Village Schoolroom, Alexandria, Mr. Hannah, president, in chair. Twenty new members were admitted, viz., Messrs. A. Nicolson, G. Stratton, J. Hill, D. Bell, J. Jeffries (of Dumbarton), J. M. Lay, J. Pringle, R. McGowan, D. Kilpatrick, G. McColl, H. Lindsay, F. McCafferty, J. Smith, J. Kerr, R. Dinnett, J. Somerville, J. Kinlock, G. Garnett, J. Rodgers, G. Naden. Decided to hold first feather show August 5th, and annual grand competition in November, both shows being entirely confined to members, so that anyone desiring to compete must become a member by our next meeting, first Tuesday in June, which is positively the last day for entry. Mr. A. Lees, the well-known ornithologist, gave a lecture on "Softbills or Insect-eating birds (British)," which was thoroughly enjoyed, as were his specimens. The hearty vote of thanks he received was well earned. Next meeting classes for shows will be arranged, election of judges and suitable hall for exhibition.—A. H. McLean, Hon. Sec.

MANCHESTER & N. COUNTIES O.S

An Interesting Lecture on Mule Breeding

General meeting held April 24th, Mr. W. A. Bladon in chair. After the general business (which included a letter from the secretary of the Norwich P.C., saying the N.P.C. had decided to hold their club show at our open show), Mr. Richards gave us an interesting lecture on mule breeding.

To commence with, he said he intended the lecture to be just a friendly talk of one bird lover to others. There were two points to make clear: First, it is quite an easy matter to get Mules early in the season, and secondly, that the books on Mule Breeding are not always right. Some fanciers, he said, make a mistake by not putting nesting material in cages where they have the British bird with the Canary. Putting nesting in the cages brings birds into condition quicker. Try, and you will find out. Try one pair with, and another pair without it, with both pairs in the same condition. Books advise putting eggs in warm water a day or two before they are due to hatch. My opinion is that it is a mistake. It hardens the shell, and makes it more difficult for the bird to get out. He thought the Goldfinch easier to breed with than the Brown Linnet, the reason being that the Finch was always singing or twittering more than the Linnet. Look to your perches. With Linnets, have plenty of room above the perches; they like to fly up and then come down on to the hen; so have your perches low when using the Brown Linnet.

The lecturer thought Clear Mules were freaks, and simply got by accident, the British bird having a lot to do with it. A friend of his had been breeding Mules for 27 years, and has never had a clear yet, but has had plenty of variegated. Ten years ago I had a Pea throat Goldfinch, and paired it to a common hen. All the young were ticked, and one almost clear. Sorry to say, I gave the hen away, and have never had another almost clear since. He thinks it possible to breed Chaffinch Mules. He had one that tried to breed, paired with Canary hens; it was finger-tame from the time it was caught. He paired it to a Canary hen, when the hen called. It would sing to her at the bottom of cage, and fly up to her. The first nest were all clear eggs, then he gave the Chaffinch away. I once had a Bullfinch hen, he said, and a cock Goldfinch together; they were very friendly together, but showed no signs of breeding. One day, in taking the bath off a cage a Chaffinch was in, the bird got out and flew on to a cage where the Bullfinch hen was. The hen called for him. I put it down to the Chaffinch having a red breast like the Bullfinch. I think the reason we do not get any young from the Bullfinch cock and hen Canary is that the hen calls and gives over too soon. I think the best way to get Brown Linnets into condition is to have two cocks and put them together at times. I think the methods, as stated in most books, viz., to put birds together in November to get them friendly, is wrong, it not being natural for British birds to mate with Canaries; and you cannot feed the Britishers properly when they are with Canaries. I think the Finches sing themselves into condition a lot.

Mr. Richards brought a young Goldfinch-Canary Mule six weeks old, bred in a cold room, and the mother of it had three more one week old. After the first egg was laid he took the Canary away and put in with the hen a young Goldfinch. While the Canary was singing, the hen called, and the Goldfinch paired with her. She had four eggs, but only one hatched out, and this was the bird he had brought, and everyone was satisfied that it was a Mule. Mr. Richards was then asked several questions, which he answered satisfactorily. The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to Mr. Richards.—H. Boothman, Hon. Sec.

FALKIRK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Oddfellows' Hall, May 4th, Mr. T. R. Wallace presiding. Three new members were enrolled. After the usual business it was decided to have a social in the lesser Oddfellows' Hall on May 13th, in connection with the presentation to our late secretary, Mr. R. Hamilton, who leaves us on May 20th for Canada. Members and friends invited.—R. Rennie, Sec., 13, Pleasance-square, Falkirk.

EDINBURGH AND DIST. C.B.S.

Would district delegates of the above society kindly forward the names and addresses of prospective members in time for our next meeting on May 16th, as this is the last meeting of the season in which new members can be admitted to membership? It is desirable, too, that the contributions of the whole membership be fully paid by above date. The following well-known fanciers have been appointed district delegates: Messrs. A. Hoyle (Musselburgh), G. Wotherspoon (Broxburn). Fanciers wishing to become members, kindly communicate with local delegates or direct to me. The 100th member is to be admitted free. Who is it to be?—J. I. Mackie, Sec.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

An interesting and instructive paper, on "Mule Breeding," was read by Mr. G. Stevens before the members May 3rd. The essayist, who is well qualified to speak on the subject, described his method of establishing a muling strain, and the selection of the Finch, giving minute details as to the feeding and general management. He elaborated on the following crosses: Goldfinch-Canary, Linnet-Canary, Greenfinch-Canary, Siskin-Canary, Redpoll-Canary, Twite-Canary. He spoke of Mule breeding as being "the most interesting, fascinating, and elusive branch of our hobby, and if anything tests the patience and grit of a true fancier most, it is in trying to produce high-class Mules." After the lecture several questions were asked, notes compared, and a vote of thanks was proposed by Mr. Lewis, and seconded by Mr. Pounsett.—A. S. Treasure.

HETTON-LE-HOLE & DIS. C.B.S.

Meeting held May 6th, at Crown Inn, Mr. Hy. Wilson in chair. There was a good attendance of members, when the following resolutions were carried: "That our F.F. show be held July 8th, with Mr. A. Brown as judge, and that we have 24 classes for same"; also "that we support the CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE"; also "that the committee make arrangements for holding a show on November 11th, in the Hetton-le-Hole Workmen's Club, and that they bring it before the members at next meeting." The Secretary then took the following accounts of the breeding season up till now: Hy. Kilner, 31 young Norwich; R. Lawson, 9 Nor.; Geo. Gowland, 2 Nor.; Vipond, 9 Nor.; H. Wilson 7 Nor.; Allen, 7 Nor., 3 Yorks.; M. Dixon, 4 Nor., 3 Liz., 1 Cinn., 4 Crest, 8 Yorks.; R. H. Dixon, 6 Nor., 7 Yorks.; A. J. Notley, 2 Nor. The general complaint is clear eggs, and hens not feeding.—A. J Notley, Sec

SHEFFIELD O.S.

Meeting held May 2nd, Headquarters, Rose and Crown Hotel, W. Wingate in chair. Attendance was not so large as usual, owing, I suppose, to its being a business meeting. The great feature of our nest feather show will be fixed prize money, 4s., 2s. and 1s. in all classes; this is out of the ordinary in the Sheffield district. We are giving our members something to show for, and in addition to prize money we have already about 20 specials promised, so that we should have one of the best nest feather shows ever held in Sheffield and district. The date is July 22nd, to be held Foresters' Hall. Classification is 9 champion classes, 9 novice classes; British birds, champion or novice, 6 classes; Mule or Hyb., one class; Foreign birds, champion or novice, 4. Judge, Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield). We again had the pleasure of adding a long list of new recruits to our membership. Next monthly meeting, June 13th, when we have the great event of all, and the one for which we are anticipating the largest crowd, viz., a table show of Foreign Birds, together with a lecture on keeping, feeding and exhibiting foreign birds, by Mr. E. E. Smith. Some of the rarest birds in captivity will be staged. Any fancier joining at next meeting will be eligible to exhibit at nest feather show. Don't forget the ramble to Worksop on Sunday, June 18th; this is going to be a great day. We have got one of the best-known men in Worksop district to act as guide.—John A. T. Woodall, Press Correspondent.

BOLTON AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held May 1st, 1911, Mr. Gerrard chairman. We had a decent muster of members present for passing of our revised rules, which were all confirmed with a few slight additions. It was decided to change our name to "The Bolton and District Cage Bird Society," instead of Ornithological Society. The classification for F.F. show was carried out. Also decided that we advertise our open show. The show will be held as usual in the Co-operative Hall, which is a grand room for the purpose.—Percy Brierley, Sec.

READING AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held May 3rd, but it being such a very wet night only a few members turned up. Mr. G. W. Maisey had promised to give a paper on Yorkshires, but was unable to come, so it was postponed till next meeting. Three or four letters were read, and it was decided to add £1 to the prize money of Y.B. show in proportion to the entries. The secretary would be glad of a few more specials to complete the schedule. In the general discussion members reported plenty of eggs but very few young birds, and a larger proportion than usual of clear eggs. Our silver cups are now on view in the window of S. R. Holdaways, 85, Oxford St., Reading. —W. H. Pyke, Hon. Sec.

BARNSLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held May 6, headquarters, Clarence Hotel, Mr. J. Eyre presiding over a good attendance. Decided, to hold nest feather show July 1. Mr. W. Rapson will officiate. Also decided to have a ramble on May 21, route selected being Stainboro' and Wortley Parks. Decided to meet at Stainboro' Inn, 9.30 a.m. All fanciers and friends have a hearty invitation to join us in this our first ramble of the year. Mr. R. Jackson was made a member. Business being done, Mr. J. Simmons gave us a washing exhibition, which was keenly watched by all. Mr. Simmons, in his usual form, put the birds through their tubbing in fine style. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded him, which brought a pleasant evening to a close.—F. C. Sims, Hon. Sec.

LOCHORE & GLENCRAIG C.B.S.

At a meetinpg held in McMenemy's Hall on 29th April, Mr. J. Donaldson in chair, the Secretary read report of meeting held in Cowdenheath in connection with the proposed Cage Birds League for West Fife. After a good deal of discussion, it was agreed to join in with the other societies. The following delegates were appointed to attend next conference in Penman's Masonic Arms, Cowdenbeath, May 15th, at 6 p.m.; Messrs. Rodger, Johnston, Croy, and Secretary, with instructions how to vote on different matters. Next business, in connection with first feather show; we added a Scotch fancy and a variety class. Secretary instructed to write Mr. Grewar (Lochgelly) asking him to officiate as judge. This being all the business, the meeting closed. Next meeting, May 27th, when we hope members will turn out in larger numbers.—Duncan Grant, Hon. Sec.

MANCHESTER AND N.C.O.S.

General meeting held May 1st, Mr. Bladon in chair. Mr. Harrison (Altrincham) gave us a most interesting lecture on cage bird ailments. There can be no doubt Mr. Harrison has spent a lot of time studying birds, their organs and ailments, and what is best to cure them. He advised all who had the misfortune to lose a bird at any time to open it and examine it, trying to find out what was the cause; then you know better how to treat others. He went thoroughly into the matter, the cause of a lot, signs, and what to give. All who missed this lecture missed a treat, and also a great amount of instructive advice. Mr. Harrison was asked a lot of questions, all of which he answered to everybody's satisfaction. The time for closing came all too soon, and we ended with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Harrison. Next meeting May 15th, when Mr. Bladon will give us a paper on the Cinnamon, and the uses of the Cinnamon. I hope we shall have a good muster to hear our worthy President. Friends specially invited.—H. Boothman, Hon. Sec.

NEW CROSS & DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held headquarters, Bond's Rooms, 39, New Cross Road, May 4th, the meeting being well attended, to hear Mr. J. Robson's lecture on "How to Become a Successful Breeder and Exhibitor." I am pleased to report that we made two new members in Messrs. Baker (Catford) and Rhodes (New Cross). Letters were read from gentlemen wishing to join, also one from the London Federation; there being not much time to spend for discussion on the Federation subject it was proposed and seconded that we leave it over to next meeting, June 1st, when we intend to look well into the subject. The schedule for the two young stock shows was discussed—1st, June 8th, and the 2nd, July 6th. Mr. J. Robson to judge the July show, Mr. Meades the June show. Several specials have been given, to be allotted for the July show, this being the chief show. Arrangements for the Hildenboro' ramble for Sunday, May 21st, was settled. Train fare will be 4/-; train to leave New Cross (S.E. and C.Rly.) at 9.25 a.m. A reduction on tickets will be made if it is possible. Mr. Robson intends to accompany us on this ramble. Any fancier wishing to join us on this ramble should drop us a note. After settling several other items, the Chairman called on Mr. Robson for his lecture. The lecturer dealt with the mating, feeding, and staging of the birds. It being the breeding season several questions were asked as to the cures for the young birds, which seemed to be a great trouble to a few fanciers. The Chairman threw the meeting open for further questions, which were readily and clearly answered. A vote of thanks was then passed to the lecturer.—Barton and Hearn, Joint Hon. Secs.

HULL.

Hull L.F.A. weekly singing contest for quality held at new headquarters, Cartman's Arms, Canning Street, off Brook Street, when 18 birds were entered for three good prizes. 1 and 3, Broadbent; 2, Norton. Judge, Mr. Fred Allen; timekeeper, Mr. Thundercliffe. Also contest on May 6th. 1, Norton; 2, 3, Broadbent. Our worthy landlord is giving a tea service for next Saturday's contest; first bird up 2.30 prompt.—Fred Allen, Hon. Sec.

Contest every week-end; Whitsuntide Club going strong.—A. Brown, Sec.

CASTLEFORD.

Linnet contest, held headquarters, George and Dragon Hotel, Bridge Street, before a good company. We had 52 birds entered for four good prizes. The birds did very well, but not up to last week's standard. Winners: 1, J. Kirk; 2, T Piper; 3, J Rollinson; 4, O. Potter. On May 20th, we are having an open-to-all-England sing. We hope some of the time singing clubs will take advantage of it, and show us what their birds can do on 5 seconds a break. Our Roller Canary Club, started last week, is going very strong, thanks to your valuable paper; we hope we shall see some fresh faces on Saturday.—Walter Dobson, Hon. Sec.

DURHAM.

Linnet sing, held Black Horse, Elvet, May 6, when 32 birds entered, and some good singing was heard. Result: 1, 2, 3, Wilson and Adams; judge, Mr. Geo. Reed. Next contest, R. M. Canavan's, Gilesgate Moor, May 13th; 1st, cup; 2, kettle; 3, case of silver spoons; 4, pipe and case; 9d. per bird, 3d. back.—Geo. Reed.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.

Seaham Harbour and Dis. Linnet Club contest, held Londonderry Arms (2nd club sing), May 6th, when 32 birds competed for eight prizes and two specials. 1, 2, and two specials, R. Elliott; 3, G. Hills; 4, Hartley; 5, T. Elliott; 6, G. Robson; 7, Wilson; 8, Hartley. Judge, Mr. G. Robson; timekeeper, Mr. J. Watson, Sec.

SALFORD.

We hope fanciers will do their best to come with their birds May 13th, as there is another prize offered of 7 lbs. special Linnet seed given by Mr. Bird (Manchester). The secretaries of Linnet clubs are requested to send representatives, which we are sure they will do to ensure a success, as many interested visitors are going to attend. B. Wharton.

LEEDS.

Leeds Linnet F.A. (King's Head).—Usual quality singing contest held King's Head, Shannon Street, when 26 of the best birds entered for four good prizes. 1, W. Sissons, 2 and 3, H. Wigfield; 4, Chippendale. Judges, Messrs. T. Johnson, Wilson, Naylor, A. Jennings. Also May 7th, when 30 birds faced the judges, Messrs. H. Jennings, T. Johnson, and W. Naylor. 1, J. Bland; 2, T. Twitterings.

All members' subscriptions are now due, writes Mr. O. Mitchell, sec. of the Open Norwich Plainhead Club.

Those who intend getting a hot colour on their birds this season see Sandiford's advertisement in Advertisement columns.—Advt.

Mr. A. Wellings has been engaged to judge at our open show on November 16th, writes Mr. J. Pitchford, sec. of the Stoke-on-Trent Cage Birds Society.

Ramsden's Pure Peppers have arrived. They are of wonderful quality and colour. Prices as usual, and guaranteed absolutely pure. The finest the world produces.—Advt.

Messrs. G. H. Martin and J. H. Mitchell have come to terms, and will show now as partners under the name of Messrs. Martin and Mitchell, writes Mr. J. H. Mitchell.

I always look forward to getting my copy of Cage Birds on Fridays. I think it a very valuable paper for bird lovers. May I also wish Cage Birds League every success?—G. Armitage (Bedford).

We hear that Mr. B. Hollins, the well-known Hull bird specialist, returned home on Tuesday last, bringing with him a large and varied consignment of African birds, all in the very best of condition.

I regret to say that my old winning Crest-bred, winner of prizes at a large number of shows for the past six years, and father of winners for all those years, died this morning, writes Mr. J. G. Hutchinson (Newcastle-on-Tyne).

The Coventry O.S. has resigned membership of the Cage Bird Union, writes Mr. A. J. Barratt, the sec. The reasons are that the Rule 22 has been rescinded, which has weakened the Union; and that the working of the Union has ceased to be of any good to the Fancy.

We have received from Mr. W. Wilson, the well-known naturalist, of 247, Argyle Street, Glasgow, an excellent sample of coloured celluloid marking rings for Canaries, etc. They are extremely light and most easy to fix, and can be had in a large variety of colours.

The undernoted gentlemen will judge at our coming show, writes Mr. R. Trimble, sec. of the Ulster O.A.:—Mr. David Black (Glasgow), for the Belgians and Scotch Fancies; Mr. Robert Taylor (Preston), for the Norwich and Yorkshires); and Mr. Geo. Marlin (Hamilton) for the Mules, British Birds, etc.

In future our meetings will be held on Saturday nights, instead of Wednesday, to begin at seven o'clock prompt, when we hope to have a good attendance of members, writes Mr. J. Barrass, sec., South Shields C.B.S. Our next meeting will be on May 27th, to make final preparations for First Feather Show.

The Oxford and District C.B.S. are giving two Roller classes (one old bird and one young bird) at their open show on October 26th. All exhibits will be staged in a separate warm room, and Mr. F. Wilsdon has kindly offered to judge. Will all Roller fanciers note this?—A. F. Fifield, hon. sec.

The Pendleton and Salford O.S. are having a ramble on Sunday, May 21, when they are going by the 9.48 from London Road to Glossop, where they will have a ramble round the district, writes Mr. J. Critchley, the hon. sec. We hope to have a good muster of members and friends. All wishing to join us will be very welcome.

Will all intending members for the Yorkshire County British Bird and Mule Club kindly send in their full names and addresses as soon as possible, as we want all members' names printed in the new books? write Messrs. Lane and Jowett, the hon. secs. Also, will all secretaries wanting the patronage of the Club please apply as soon as possible?

The East Ham C.B. Society's ramble takes place on Sunday, May 14th, writes Mr. B. C. Smith, the club reporter, and members and friends are requested to meet at Stratford Station, where the party take train to Loughton and walk through the Forest to Epping. Trains leave Stratford for Loughton ten o'clock and 10.8 o'clock. Cheap return ticket, 9d. It is hoped there will be a good muster, and, given fine weather, an enjoyable day is anticipated.

Will members and fanciers kindly note that we have removed our headquarters to Mr. Wear's house, the Stanley Inn, writes Mr. W. Elliott, sec. of the West Stanley C.B.S. At the same house we are going to hold our nest feather show on June 24th. A more ideal room could not be found for a show, having windows all round, and being situated in the centre of the town. That very prominent judge, Mr. J. Hands, chairman of the Blaydon C.B.S., will adjudicate.

A meeting will be held at the Welbeck Inn, Soresby Street, Chesterfield, on May 20th, at 7.30 p.m., to arrange classes for the first of a series of nest feather shows in connection with the Whittington Moor, Chesterfield, and Staveley Cage Bird Societies, writes Mr. G. Dodd, sec. of the Whittington Moor Society. Will all fanciers in the district please attend?

The Dulwich and Peckham C.B. Society's year book comprises a capital programme of fixtures for the current season. The lectures, exhibitions, and demonstrations are of a representative character and should ensure success. The names and addresses of the members are also included. The sec. is Mr. W. Hodson, 39, Friern Road, East Dulwich, London, S.E.

The present month's issue of the "Avicultural Magazine" (price 1s. 3d.) contains an article by Mr. C. T. Maxwell on the Purple Sunbird, which is nicely illustrated by Mr. H. Goodchild. Miss Alice Hutchinson contributes "More Notes on the Brom Vogel," and Mr. Gregory M. Mathews, F.R.S.E., "Australian Bird Notes." The issue comprises other interesting matters.

The annual general meeting of the National Green Marked Yorkshire C.C. will be held on May 27th, at 3 p.m., at the Market Tavern, Bradford. All money specials gained by the members during the past show season will be paid at this meeting. Will all members please make a special effort to attend, as the business is important?—F. Armstrong, hon. sec. and treas.

The Barnsley and District C.B.S. have arranged a ramble to take place on Sunday, May 21st, the route selected being through Stainboro and Wortley Parks, writes Mr. F. C. Sims, the secretary. We extend a hearty invitation to all fanciers and friends to join the members. We have arranged to meet at Stainboro Inn at 9.30 a.m., start to be made at 10 o'clock prompt.

The Sheffield C.B.S is going strong, writes Mr. J. Woolhouse, the assistant secretary. Although we commenced the year with a deficit of £9 10s., we have already cleared that off, and have £5 in hand. The members deserve congratulations for the way they have worked. We have seventy members, and other fanciers keep joining. Anyone is welcome at our meetings, held the first Thursday in each month at the Wentworth Cafe, Pinstone Street.

Mr. A. J. A. Marley is giving a paper entitled "My Method of Feeding, Moulting, and Exhibiting British Birds," before the members and friends of the North London C.B.A. on May 17th, at the Public Library, Church St., Stoke Newington, N., at eight o'clock, writes Mr. R. P. Harper, the hon. sec. This paper has, I understand, been some months in preparation, and I have it on good authority that it will be an exhaustive report of Mr. Marley's actual experience. Visitors will be cordially welcomed.

The Newcastle C.B.S. have secured the Engineers' Drill Hall, Sandyford Road, Newcastle, in which to hold their annual show on October 20th—21st, writes Mr. J. E. Atkinson, sec. This is a larger hall (190ft. by 30ft.), and is splendidly lighted, and heated and well ventilated. Fanciers need have no fear in sending their birds here, as they will be well looked after. Will members please alter their Nest Feather Show schedule as follows:—Classes 1 to 18 should be Classes 1 to 20; and Classes 19 to 29 should be Classes 21 to 29.

The Wood Green F. and F. A. have issued a capital year book for the 1911 season. It consists of 28 gilt-edged pages, handsomely bound in imitation red Morocco; it is, in fact, quite one of the neatest manuals we have ever seen. The booklet comprises, among other things, the general, show, and cup rules of the association, an attractive list of fixtures for the year, the names and addresses of the members, and the 1910-11 balance sheet (showing cash in hand £4 8s.). The sec., to whom applications for membership should be addressed, is Mr. Geo. H. Bates, 41, Brunswick Crescent, New Southgate.

We have secured the services of the following gentlemen, writes Mr. F. Western, sec. of the Bradford West C.B.A., to judge our members' shows, viz.:—June 10th, Mr. A. Shaw; July 8th, Mr. H. H. Towers; October 17th, Mr. J. Bailey; November 21st, Mr. H. Sutcliffe; and Boxing Day, Mr. L. Ogden. We are also having a lecture on Canaries, Mules, and British Birds on May 13th by Mr. S. Dean, who will deal with the different species of British birds, their nesting places and habits, to be found around this district. This should prove very interesting to all, and a hearty invitation is given to fanciers.

Robin's Nest on Mantelpiece.

A Robin has made its nest at one corner of our drawing-room mantelpiece behind a piece of china, and has laid five eggs and is now sitting, writes "X" (Finchley) to the "Daily Mail." We go in and out of the room in the usual way. We discovered it wished to build by finding the bird in the room whenever we went in, and dry leaves littered on the mantelpiece. The bird does not move when anyone goes to look at the nest.

FANCIERS AT THE CORONATION.

Those fanciers who are desirous of viewing the Coronation Processions will find that a splendid view can be obtained from the windows of "Cage Birds" Offices.

Seats are offered at low rates. For terms, apply to—

The MANAGER,
"Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street,
London, E.C.

It is my duty to thank you for the honour you bestowed upon me by putting my photograph upon the front page of your world-famed Cage Birds (writes Mr. A. H. C. Legg (Porth). I hope this may influence all fanciers in the district to become members of the Mid-Rhondda Cage Bird Society, and I shall be only too pleased to give all information to any who may wish to join.

We have been fortunate in securing the services of the following gentlemen to place the awards at our forthcoming show on November 18th, viz.:—Messrs. Webster (Greenock) and Edgar (Dumfries), for Scotch Fancies; A. Chalmers (Kirkintilloch), for Crests; G. Mitchell (Brechin), for Norwich; R. Lambie (Whitburn) for Border Fancies; and R. Bald (Bathgate), for British and Foreign, writes Mr. Wm. Guthrie, sec. of the Kilmarnock O.C.B.S.

We have received from Mr. John Allan (13, Elm Place, Leith), a copy of the revised rules of the Scottish British Bird and Mule Club, with the list of members, and of the birds eligible to compete for the club's prizes. The front page is occupied by photographs of the most handsome trophies open for the members to win. We are pleased to hear from Mr. Allan that the club is now in a better position, and he will be glad if fanciers who would like to join would write him at once, when he will give them all particulars.

Two really fine samples of colour-foods for the 1911 season have reached us from Mr. W. Rudd, the famous bird specialist, of Norwich. One is his noted tasteless "A1 Red Feed," the other a blend of hot and sweet peppers, in correct proportion, ready for use. The "A1 Red Feed" is first class in every respect—properly ground, free from useless impurities, and really marvellous in colour. It should be in big demand. The blended feed has all the good qualities of the tasteless sample, and will appeal to the many fanciers who like a little hot Natal in their colour-food.

Bird's Nest and a Fire.

Through a spark from the chimney setting fire to a bird's nest in the roof of a house in Alton Street, Crewe, on May 3, it became necessary to summon the fire brigade. The occupier's son, named Mottram, had, however, managed to confine the fire to small dimensions.

No Dual Ownership.

The instance (recently recorded in the "Express") of a Blackbird and Thrush co-operating by laying their eggs in the same nest at Sutton, Norfolk, has ended in a tragedy. The Blackbird drove the Thrush away, destroyed the Thrush's four eggs, and afterwards hatched out her own.

Northern Crest Club.

I shall be pleased to hear from secretaries of societies who are desirous of having the patronage of the Northern Crest Club for their annual shows. Also I shall be glad to hear from anyone who is desirous of joining.—J. G. Hutchinson, sec., 72, South View, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. Ramble.

The annual country ramble of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. will take place on Sunday, May 21st, 1911, to Homewood, Dorking, writes Mr. W. Hodson, the hon. sec. Arrangements are being made for a special saloon carriage to be reserved for the party from Peckham Rye Station, time to be announced. Members and friends wishing to join the party should communicate with me at 39, Friern Road, East Dulwich, S.E., as early as possible. Cold luncheon will be provided at a moderate cost.

TWO NOVEL CAGES.

With reference to the photograph published on the front page, the sender, Mr. W. Simpson, of Oldham, writes: "This shows what I venture to think is a model Thrush cage, while I am holding in my hand a novel form of Canary cage. The Thrush cage is made of pitch pine, and has a solid slate slab at the back, and another at the bottom. It can be taken into the yard and thoroughly cleaned with a brush and water without coming to any harm. At the front I have arranged a "shutter" (or blind) to pull down, either to shade the bird, or to put it more or less in the dark if singing too noisily in the house. The corners are fancy glass panels, and looking glass is run round the bottom, at front, giving a rich and pretty effect. Possibly some of your readers may also care to make one for their Thrush or Blackbird.

The Roller Canary:

By "SCHOOLMASTER."

New cages, remember, should be placed in the open air (to remove the smell of paint) before the birds are placed in them. Having decided upon your exhibits, run them into their show cages about a fortnight before the date of the show; this will allow them sufficient time to become thoroughly acquainted with their new quarters.

The same rule must be observed in darkening the show cage as recommended for other shutter cages. Always ascertain that the birds can find food and water before closing them up. Feed them well, but at the same time carefully, so that by giving a little mixed seed and egg food a few days before going to the show, you will then get them up to concert pitch.

Taming Birds for Show.

Birds that have been trained in a quiet room are apt to be shy at singing when anyone is close to their cage, so endeavour to tame them as much as possible before the show day. Those that have been trained in a living-room will not, as a rule, require any taming, as they are used to people passing about the room, also to sudden noises. But nevertheless, birds do not study their song so well in the latter kind of a room, as they keep breaking off their song when different things attract their attention. Other reasons against it are red mite, soft moult, and the danger of taking colds, when travelling on rail; and to take a bird from a warm room to the extreme cold of draughty offices and platforms, combined with the rough handling which they often get by railway officials, is quite sufficient to throw the birds off song for several days.

It is surprising we do not see in show reports more cases of numbers marked "no song," which means that the birds would not sing at judging time; but every credit must be allowed the judges, as they give a bird every opportunity. A man has to be very patient and a real lover of the hobby to make a good Roller judge.

Making Entries.

Make your entries early, and in the course of a few days you will receive from the show secretary the labels bearing your cage numbers. These should be placed on what might be termed the bottom rail, on the cage front, between the perches, as they are more convenient in this position than on either of the cage doors.

Before despatching your birds for the show, cover the cage bottoms with a good supply of seed; also put some in the hopper, but don't put any water in the cage. Instead of water put in the drinking tin a piece of bread soaked in boiled milk. This will not lay you open to the accusation of sending in a marked cage, as the remainder of the bread would be thrown out at watering time. Show secretaries would also be well advised to see that water tins are emptied of their contents before packing the birds up again for their return journey, because travelling cases sometimes get turned over, and both birds and cages arrive home in anything but a pleasant condition. I hope that one of the objects of Cage Birds League will be to lessen this rough handling and to prevent undue delays in transit. You should read the conditions under which the railways convey your stock, and you will find that should your birds get lost, or killed, en route, the company will only allow you the magnificent sum of 5s. per bird, and this is after you have paid 50 per cent. above the ordinary rate of parcel carriage. To be more explicit, supposing you were to send a parcel, say a travelling case, containing empty show cages, and the carriage amounted to 1s.; if this parcel contained birds the charge would be 1s. 6d.

Off to the Shows.

The best method when sending birds anywhere by rail is to insure them, which you can do at 1½ per cent.; you would then only be charged at the ordinary parcel rate; in this way it is often as reasonable, and sometimes a little cheaper, as the following will show. The parcel rate charge on your package is 1s.; you insure them for, say, £2 at a cost of 6d.; this makes an inclusive charge of 1s. 6d. Now, if you should send them uninsured it would still cost you 1s. 6d., because you would have the 50 per cent. extra to pay, and in case of loss you would only get 5s. per bird, whereas by the former method you would get £2. If the ordinary parcel rate on your package is 8d., and you insure for £1 (which costs 3d.), this would make 11d. inclusive. This same package sent uninsured would cost you 1s. Of course, I am assuming this latter package also contains live birds. I think I have said enough on this subject to make my meaning quite clear.

Sundry Show Tips.

Should you want a catalogue of the show, you should enclose the fee at the time of making your entries; endorse the schedule to this effect. Also, if you are willing to sell any of your exhibits, put the price of them separately in the space provided on the schedule; this price will include the bird and cage, but not its travelling case. If you do not desire to dispose of the birds, leave the column blank.

If your exhibit comes back with a card, I say good luck to you; go in and win again. If it doesn't, don't be disheartened, but try again, and yet again.

Do not place your returned exhibits back in their accustomed places again until you have satisfied yourself that they have not picked up any undesirable notes.

Treatment of Faulty Singers.

Having now given the method of training youngsters under a tutor without faults, perhaps it would not be out of place if a little advice were given, say, in the case of your best bird being a faulty singer. If he has a good variety of tours, with only one fault, and you are not prepared to get a better one of the same strain (this being necessary to obtain the best results for exhibition purposes), you can use him as a tutor; but it will be useless removing the youngsters, as they bring out this fault in their song; this is so because those left behind are nearly sure to do likewise. But isolate those that bring a different fault to the one their tutor has. We often see birds on the show bench reported as having two faults, and in some cases even more, but a bird having a couple of faults is severely handicapped by a faultless singer. I do not know where this craze for purity is going to land us, as our experts are complaining that the song is shorter, and one or two of the tours are falling off in quality. Credit must be given to the judges, as they are rather lenient in the number of points they take off for a fault. At the same time, I must admit that opinions differ as to which is, and which is not, the worst fault. Again, some will not consider a faulty note so bad if the song does not end on this, and the bird will afterwards sing other good tours before finishing his song.

Should your best bird have two or more faults, I would suggest the use of an organ only, as some good songsters have been turned out from its use without the aid of a bird tutor. The same instructions will apply in cases where an organ is used without the help of a tutor, as was recommended previously for training under a faultless schoolmaster.

Obtaining Early Songsters.

The Roller show season is a short one, commencing in November and finishing in February. This year, 1911, in consequence of no Roller section being included in the Crystal Palace schedule, the last open show was at Bury in January.

If a fancier desires to get some cocks from the first round ready for the first open show of the season (which, at present, is the Midland Roller Club contest held at Wolverhampton in November), he must pair his stock up in March, so as to get the youngsters hatched early, say, the first or second week in April.

Now, to further the object of obtaining fertile clutches of eggs in a month when, as a rule, adverse weather prevails, a little artificial heat judiciously given is very beneficial, but you must aim as far as possible to keep the room at an even temperature. The young Roller which is in a normal condition should be singing steadily at the age of seven months, while some of the forward youngsters even at the baby age of six months old will be ready for exhibition.

Birds from the later nest, or nests (as three nests in one season should be the limit), will come forward in song and be ready for the December and January contests. These later-bred birds will also receive a certain amount of song tuition from their older brothers bred in the first round.

The show dates between November and January fall on us rather heavily, so in the near future those new clubs now forming will probably choose February for their open contests.

Should you be satisfied with your strain of birds, and wish to choose candidates for the following year's breeding, choose those hens that are the nearest related to your best singing cocks, and as far as possible introduce fresh blood on the cock's side.

In concluding, I thank those readers who have followed me through this article, and I hope the tyro, for whose benefit it has been written, will have gained some little knowledge in the selection and general management of this most interesting variety of Canary. As for the experienced fanciers, I have the consolation of knowing that I have at least kept them for a time from the mischief there is still for idle hands to do.

My Five Favourite Finches.

By I. THOMAS. (Otley.)

The Sprightly Goldfinch.

Of all the seed-eaters I think the sprightly Goldfinch is the most handsome, and universally the best favourite. I prefer to rear this bird from the Greypate stage, as you can then get him much steadier and tamer than you can the newly-caught adults. If you can select a few young birds of good size from a catcher before they get to the dealer's hands, you have a fair chance of getting a good exhibition bird or two. But you must remember you have to get them on hard seed, which must be done very steadily. Put the birds into a good flight cage with nice clean sand, and soaked rape and crushed hemp in saucers, or pots, inside the cage, well to the front for light; also a pot of water inside the cage. Put seed boxes on outside filled with dry seed, which the birds will find in time and gradually commence to eat.

In selecting your show bird after the moult, pick one of good size and one that stands well on the perch—bold and graceful in carriage. Its head should be long and well formed; the beak should be long, massive, and straight; and the blaze should be broad and expansive, rich in colour and square in appearance, and it should also extend to just by the eye. The whites of the cheek and breast should not be too pale, but of a grey or brownish tint. The collar should be black as jet and the bars of the wing of a rich golden yellow. The wings and tail feathers should be a dense black in colour and mooned with pure white spots, evenly and distinctly distributed. The back and sides of breast and near the vent should be of a rich chestnut, and the legs and beak white (when the bird is house-moulted).

The staple food should consist of canary, hemp, teazle, rape, and almost any other kind of seed as luxuries, while you can give him soft seed in the season ad lib, such as ripe thistle heads, hardheads, plantain, sow thistle, shepherd's purse, and all the wild seeds you can gather—all these will add to his colour and beauty.

Prolific Breeders.

Goldfinches in their wild state are prolific breeders many of them having as many as four broods in a season; so that their powers of propagation are very great. This is well, as the catchers are netting thousands per year, and I fear their number are becoming less than formerly. The Goldfinch is one of the most beautiful of nest builders, his home being acknowledged by all to be a marvel of bird architecture.

At the back end of the year these birds congregate together in flocks, and many of them migrate across the channel, many however, staying here to face the winter, and live upon the seeds of plants and weeds which thrive here the winter through. Those birds remaining in this country through the winter are called "harbour birds," while those arriving back at spring are known as "flight birds." The latter are far more handsome in colour, a warmer climate intensifying the brilliancy of their plumage; and they are easily distinguished from the less forward "harbour birds." The "flight birds" arrive back about the beginning of April, and after mating again commence their arrangements for the propagation of their species.

An Ideal Show Bird.

The Yellow Bunting (or Yellowhammer) is another of the species of birds which has sprung up into great favour during the last few years as ideal show birds. And a splendid bird he is! The beautiful blending of soft brown and yellow colours which he possesses appeals to all British bird lovers.

In selecting a show specimen, pick an adult bird two or three years old, as the birds are then in full colour and show more golden yellow than the younger birds. These birds' chances are very great on the show bench if they are well colour fed. The head marking should form a perfect V, commencing at the base of the beak and extending to the back of the head, the space between being a perfectly clear yellow. The bird should be of good size, well spangled on back, chest, and sides, with good cheek marks, even on each side of face, and a rich golden brown on rump over tail; the feather should be of good quality, and as tight as wax. Feed on good Spanish Canary seed and a little crushed hemp seed and oats occasionally; also give a few ants' eggs and mealworms daily. Give plenty of water for the birds to bathe in, and you will find he will well repay you for the interest you take in him.

A Deservedly Popular Species.

The Bramblefinch is another British bird that has risen into great favour during the last few years; and right well he deserves his popularity. He is not really a resident species, visiting us in winter only. Its native home is Norway, Sweden, and Denmark. In Great Britain it visits the majority of the counties, but is most generally seen in the counties south of the Trent. It is also to be met with in many parts of Scotland and Ireland. It feeds in its wild state on grain, beach nuts, and the seeds of grasses. Like the Chaffinch, it also feeds on insects.

In selecting a Bramblefinch for exhibition be very careful. If you have a lot to pick from, pick a nice-sized bird of good colour, but make sure he is one that takes to cage life calmly, or he will nearly break your heart. Pick the steadiest bird you can, or you will lose a lot of sleep. He is a terribly nervous fellow, dashing about in the dead of night if he hears the slightest noise, or even sees the moon shining. But persevere with him, and you will love him all the more when you have gained his confidence.

His colours are a beautiful blend of what one might term two shades of black on the back, making him appear scaly. His magnificent chestnut red breast and bars, with the intermediate black bar, afford a striking contrast to the rest of his colours. He can be greatly improved during the moult by being given a little colour-food.

Mind His Claws.

His staple food should consist of Canary, oats, beech nuts in season, and the various grass seed with the addition of ants' eggs and mealworms. Be careful to attend to his feet, as all his chances are gone if he loses his claws, which he soon does if he is not kept very clean. Let him have plenty of bathing, and he will look after himself.

In bringing my essay to a close, let me say that I did not wish to weary the reader. I have therefore dealt only with a few of the popular species. If this should be welcomed by the readers of Cage Birds (of whom I have been one since No. 1 was given to me), I shall be well compensated.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red also.

The Lizard - - Canary.

My Method of Breeding.

By E. THOMPSON (Glossop).

A paper read before the Glossop, Hadfield and District C.B.S.

Gentlemen,—In accordance with an outstanding promise to give a paper on the breeding of the Lizard Canary, I may say that it gives me the greatest possible pleasure to endeavour to give a few helpful hints, more particularly to the younger Lizard breeders in our Society, than to the older hands, or rather heads, I should say. However, I trust that if the "Old Heads" in our Society fail to see eye to eye with me in all details they will at least be merciful, and let me down gently.

The first thing you require is a room, and if at all possible one having a southern aspect, and which can be well ventilated. On the other hand, it must be free from draughts, as I submit that draughts are one of the deadliest enemies to birds.

Preparing and Arranging Cages.

The cages I use for breeding Lizards in are usually 3-compartment cages. I reserve the centre compartment for a nursery, divided by means of wooden and wire slides. This method is far easier, and it is possible to feed the young broods on either side. It does away with a lot of temporary and unnecessary nursery cages tumbling about, in addition to preventing the plucking, which is so detrimental to young Lizards. However, I will touch, at a later stage, on what I consider the great cause of plucking, and the advantage of the compartment cage.

In arranging the breeding cages I favour a position where the birds may obtain the full light as long as light lasts, but at the same time I do not think it wise to let the sun's rays strike directly on them, as it might, on a very hot day, "tag" or eventually kill them. In passing, I think Glossop fanciers will agree with me that we don't need to fear sunstrokes very often in Glossop.

Attention should be paid to the firm fixing of all perches, as unfertile eggs occur through either carelessness or ignorance in regard to this. I personally favour lime-washed cages on account of the medicinal properties that lime possesses for birds.

The House in Order.

The time to begin breeding is a matter with regard to which you must use your own judgment; but personally I think about the first week in April is quite early enough here, as we are undoubtedly nearer the North Pole than some of our favoured friends down South. However, if there are any new beginners who have not put their house in order by now, I should strongly recommend them to do so at once.

The time of the year at which the birds should be put together varies according to circumstances. There is nothing in Lizard Canary breeding, or, I may say, in any Canary breeding, that requires such a cool head and the capacity for resisting temptation, as the pairing of the birds to make a beginning, and I may add that it is only failures that make old breeders wise in this respect. Nature, if you will only take the trouble to study her, has regulated all these things well for the protection of both old and young birds.

A warm temperature is all we require, and this practically obviates egg-binding. I submit that there is nothing gained by being too anxious in pairing birds up early during cold weather. Of course, if artificial heat is available, this to a great extent can be avoided, but scores of eggs are unfertile through pairing too early and in cold weather. So much for the time to commence breeding; I pass on to what I consider the most important step in Lizard breeding, viz., the selection of birds to breed from.

Pairing Your Birds.

Although it is a very difficult thing to breed a perfect Lizard, it is not more so than to breed any other variety to perfection; and you can depend upon it, if you pair up Lizards you will obtain Lizards; but the same cannot be said of our present-day Lancashires, as we have one of the specialist judges of our district pointing this fact out only in a recent issue of CAGE BIRDS, and I have very grave doubts about the composition of our present-day Norwich and Yorkshires. Therefore I strongly advocate young fanciers going in for a few Lizards.

In pairing up, pair Golds with Silvers always, as a general rule; and if possible let them be as dark as you can get them, remembering that dark feathers means dark spangling, and that the Lizard will deteriorate in this respect quickly enough if encouraged. White beaks, white legs, and white claws, are frequently followed by white something else. But mate as near as you can get, with a view to a balance of good properties. Experience in breeding will teach you that the cap is most variable and an intractable feature. Never hesitate to pair birds, however wanting in this respect, if satisfied that good caps have been bred from that strain.

Being a distinctive plumaged bird, and spangle its chief feature, it is to a great measure dependent on a broad back, and cannot well have the attributes of size and distinctness, without the broad back and compact feather, just as a wide cap cannot be present in the absence of a broad skull. I strongly urge on the new beginner, before he settles on the pairs he intends to begin breeding with, to pay particular attention to spangle, which should commence on the neck, at the back of the cap, in elaborate minuteness, enlarging on the scapulars, running down the beak in straight rows, and gradually increasing in size. The larger the spangle the better. The same may be said about the blackness of quill and web, beak, legs, feet and claws the blacker the better. Before finally pairing just trim the claws of the birds; by doing so you will assist them to get a firm grip of the perches, which will repay you.

Where a Grave Mistake is Made.

Many fanciers, at this time of the year, make a grave mistake, in my opinion, by feeding their hens up too freely and neglecting the cocks. Because the cock sings a little the owner is under the impression that it does not require any feeding up, and the consequence is unfertile eggs follow. A safe rule, I think, would be to give the cocks now egg meat at least three times a week with mixed seed; and give the hens this once a week, with a little inga seed to help to prevent egg-binding; then, when the proper time arrives the cocks will be ready to pair about the same time as the hens.

Provide also a liberal supply of grit, cuttle-fish bone, watercress, or other suitable green food, and nesting material after pairing, and let the birds alone, providing they are sociable to one another.

I might just add that I believe in removing the eggs when laid, placing pot ones in the nest until the third egg has been laid; and in the afternoon of the day I propose to set the hen I clean the cage out, set the eggs, and allow them to commence their duties.

Hatching the Young.

From incubation to the next important landmark of the year, viz., the hatching of the young, is a short step—a matter of 13 or 14 days, according to the state of the weather. And long and dreary the days appear in passing to the over-anxious beginner! But upon proper management at this stage depends a good deal of one's success or failure; and I strongly recommend the over-anxious beginner to resist to the utmost the temptation to fetch out or inspect them, and to interfere with them as little as possible. On the evening of the thirteenth day of sitting I recommend giving a little yolk of hard-boiled egg and dry biscuit, or bread crushed up, mixed well together; this may be given to the hen in the egg drawer. For two days I should not give more than one teaspoonful at a time. This should be sufficient for the first and second days.

I venture to say that the chief thing to avoid just at this time is the old bird (or birds) over-feeding on a rich diet, after a fortnight's plain living. About the third day the diet should be increased gradually and green food added.

Some Exhibition British Finches.

How I Feed Them.

By C. LEWCOCK.

A paper read before the members and friends of the New Cross and District C.B.S.

I will first deal with the Bullfinch, this being a favourite of mine amongst British birds. Specimens for exhibition I find are not at all common, for they must have a broad skull, with a clean-cut dense black cap and evenly-cut wing bars. They should be very chubby and possess a brilliant breast colour. Specimens possessing these, together with other points, I conclude, are fit for the show bench. And these birds are not to be dropped across every day—as I mentioned before, they are not common.

The food I give to Bullfinches consists of Canary seed, hemp, teazel, flax and thistle, with a little sunflower seed and a diet of groundsel, dandelion, dock, privet and blackberries when in season: which I always find a good mixture for them.

A Favourite for Song.

Secondly we have the Linnet, one of the working man's favourite cage birds, mostly, I believe, because of its song. A Linnet, for a place on the show bench, should be more of a Norwich type with good round head, showing a rich brown colour down the back and a good white edging on the wing flights; above all, it should not be open down the breast. A bird with these points I consider fit for show.

As a stock mixture, I give my Linnets Canary, linseed, rape, teazel and thistle, with a few grains of hemp, and occasionally a tit-bit mixture of maw, dandelion, and gold of pleasure.

Next we have the Bramblefinch. These are very like, in many ways, the Chaffinch. They resemble them in shape and size and, in fact, many other ways. A show specimen should possess a good tan-coloured breast running well down; the head and back feathers should be a greenie-black in colour, with a spangled effect, clean and well cut under the beak, and thrown well back over the head. The wing bars should be cut away very clean, especially the lines dividing the several colours. The bird should also have a bold head, be wide across the skull, and not in any way pinched.

As a mixture I give my Brambles hemp, teazel, flax and Canary, with a few sunflower seeds, and animal food such as green caterpillars, earwigs, spiders and mealworms.

Now we have the Greenfinch. It is somewhat a hard job for anyone to pick up a thorough good specimen just when he likes, as most of them are lacking some of the points necessary for the bench. I may say that on one occasion I only picked out what I thought to be two good specimens from a hundred birds. They must be selected from the largest birds with big, and, if I may say so, noble heads and broad yellow wing flights. Your choice must be a yellow.

A good mixture for Greenfinches consists of Canary, hemp, teazel, rape, charlock, linseed, and a little sunflower, grass and thistle seed, together with a little animal food, the same as suggested for Brambles.

The Ideal Chaffinch.

We turn next to the Chaffinch. First of all he should be of a jonque colour, and should possess well defined wing bars. He should be a large upstanding bird, with a crest if possible. By crest I mean that there should be a slight lifting of the head feathers from the beak to the top or back of the head. He should show a great amount of white on the shoulders and wings, and should not be pinched on the skull. This latter is one of the great failings of the Chaffinch. As regards the food, I feed them on exactly the same mixture as I do the Bramble, not forgetting the animal food.

To conclude, we have the Goldfinch. The British Goldfinch, if required for exhibition, should be a fair-sized bird possessing a deep, square-cut blaze; well tanned on the breast and back, and having evenly marked buttons on the wings, with a broad yellow wing bar. The trouble with most Goldfinches is that they are pinched on the top of the head instead of having a bold, round head with a broad skull, as they must have for the bench, and the black finely cut.

This bird can be greatly improved for the show bench by the aid of colour feeding, which produces a deep blaze and a rich tanning, which we must have with them for exhibition. As a mixture I give them Canary, teazel and linseed, with a little hemp and sunflower seed separately.

A hearty vote of thanks was given the chairman for the able manner he dealt with Mr. Lewcock's paper.

A Gratifying Rush of Members.
Many "Early Birds."
HAVE YOU GOT YOUR BADGE YET?

Notes by the Secretary.

The announcement in our last issue that Cage Birds League had become an established fact has met with a response that I confess was even beyond the bounds of my own optimistic imagination. Letters of application for membership have literally rolled in by every post, and even the first of these was late in comparison with the personal calls made at the office early on Friday. Receipts and badges have been sent out to all members, and future applicants will receive them by return post. The subscription covers one year from the date of sending. I have dated the membership of all who applied before the actual starting as being from the 1st inst., and those enrolled afterwards date from the time of their application.

Rally Round, Bird Keepers.

I hope all intending members will send in their proposals and postal orders as quickly as possible. Their membership can only extend through one "off" season and one show season, so there can be no object in postponing the application. "Well begun is half done." We have already begun well, much better, in fact, than could have been anticipated for the few days which have elapsed between the announcement and the date of writing. We have upwards of 50,000 readers, and every one of the 50,000 odd must benefit by the establishment of Cage Birds League; so I want the help of everyone, and this may easily be given. Send along your eighteenpences. We will do the rest.

MR. H. J. FULLJAMES,
Secretary of Cage Birds League.

The promises of support, and the expressions of appreciation of the value of the League are so numerous that it is impossible for me to reply to them individually. Will all the members please accept my thanks for their kind letters, and my assurances that nothing will be left undone to ensure that the League shall be a power for good. As to the kind friends, many of whom are personally quite unknown to me, who have mentioned me by name in their letters, modesty forbids me to say more than that their good wishes are fully reciprocated. I hope to fulfil, as far as is in my power, the duties which involve upon me as secretary to Cage Birds League, and if I fail it will not be for the lack of enthusiasm.

A Pictorial Introduction.

In this connection I have to introduce another personal matter. Mr. Carl, the founder of Cage Birds League, has expressed the wish that my portrait shall be published, "in order that members may know their secretary at shows." This is how the fiat reads, and hence the production in this issue of my "counterfeit presentment." In London, at least, I am known personally to many hundreds of friends in the "Fancy," and many more know me by reputation. I hope that the reproduction of the portrait will be the means of an introduction to all Cage Birds League members, and I can assure them that at all times I shall be pleased to have a chat over the League and its objects and progress.

Some "Firsts": Honour aux Dames.

Even during the two or three days of the working existence of Cage Birds League it has been my pleasure to enrol many lady members. This is as it should be, for many a fancier owes his success to the good offices of his wife in assisting him in the pursuit of his hobby, and he could scarcely do a more appropriate deed than enrol his wife and helpmate a fellow member of the League. In addition, there are many lady bird-keepers who are themselves fanciers.

The honour of becoming the first lady member of the League belongs to Mrs. Lockett, of Dover, enrolled by Mr. Lockett, her husband.

Actually, the first member to enrol himself a member of Cage Birds League was Mr. C. Watts, of Bow, who sent his subscription with his letter published in our issue of March 18th. Many were before him with letters of appreciation and promises of support, but still his name comes first on our list of members.

The first member to be enrolled after the official starting of the League was Mr. W. H. Drew, of Romford Road, E., who was the first of those who anticipated the post by calling at the office on Friday last.

The first society to benefit by the power of a member to allocate half of his subscription to a Special Prize Fund for the benefit of his own society was Bournemouth C.B.A., the allocation being made by Mr. J. E. Stead, of that town.

The first allocation to the Legal Defence Fund is made by Mr. Claude St. John, as in his letter below.

The first Society to notify its intention of supporting the League was Hetton-le-Hole and District C.B.S., as recorded in our report in this issue of the last meeting of that Society.

And, may I add, the first member of Cage Birds League to be photographed wearing the League Badge was myself, as your Secretary. Of course, this "First" was a certainty, for, at the time, no one else had a badge, but I hope the example will be followed. The badge is not at all obtrusive but it is in its place, and that it is which counts.

Several applications have been received for badges only. I should like to make it quite clear that badges are supplied to members only, and those who are not already members must enclose the membership fee of 1s., as well as the payment for the badge or badges required.

SOME VIEWS OF MEMBERS.

Sir,—Please enrol me a member of Cage Birds League and send two badges. It is the thing that was needed, and one that has come to stay, and to be of service to the Fancy at large. If I am not the first one to join from this town I don't intend that I shall be the last. Now, what about getting recruits? Could I act as your representative here, or have you anyone else to take that position? I shall do what I can to further the League's interests here; not that I expect to get that £5, but because unity is strength, and every additional member helps to that end. Wishing the League and the Secretary a busy year enrolling members. Frank Thomas (Ramsgate).

Reply: Thanks for good wishes. Why not get the £5? You have as good a chance as anyone else. There is, I believe, no bird society in Ramsgate, so send along all the members you can get; they will all be entered to your credit.—H. J. F.

A Family Group.

Sir,—Will you kindly enrol my father, brother, and myself as members of Cage Birds League? Enclosed 4s. 6d. for three memberships and three badges. We all wish the League and Cage Birds every success.
H. Swindells (Scunthorpe).

Catching on in Falkirk.

Sir,—Glad to see that Cage Birds League is booming. It was brought up at the last meeting night of the Falkirk Good Intent Cage Bird Society, and I think we shall be successful in making a good many members. You will probably hear from the hon. secretary after our next meeting. Wishing Cage Birds and the League every success.
John Laurie (Camelon).

Sir,—Will you please enrol me a member of Cage Birds League (I enclose a postal order for 1s. 6d.—sixpence being for a badge, to be sent me when ready), which I consider a very good idea?—Terence Flynn (Kildare).

Sir,—Cage Birds League is the finest thing ever got up for the Fancy. Good luck to Cage Birds, and success to the League.
W. E. Scott (Acton).

A Bright Example to be followed.

Mr. G. H. Peck, of Bexley, had not only enrolled himself as a member, but had caught three "pals" before our announcement of last week that Cage Birds League had started. He has jumped off with a good start in our race for the £5 cash for the greatest number of recruits introduced by March 11th next. However, it is not always the runner that is first off that wins, and there is plenty of time to overtake Mr. Peck. Slow and sure is the motto. The one who gets first to the post is the winner, so peg along. Don't forget, also, that there is a £3 prize for the second.

SHOW DATES FIXED.

A Valuable Introduction.

Sir,—I wish Cage Birds League every success. I am greatly in favour of it, and can see from your valuable paper, Cage Birds, that it has taken quite a hold. I am sure all interested in birds will join, as it is just the thing we all want. It will mean that fanciers will enter on speaking terms with other fanciers who otherwise would be unknown to them. I wish the League and all who join it the best of luck.—A. E. Jeffries, of Messrs. Jeffries and Husband, Richmond, Yorks.

A Worthy Fund.

Sir,—Allow me to congratulate you upon your appointment to the Secretaryship of Cage Birds League, and to express the hope that under your able management and organisation the League will go forward by leaps and bounds and quickly far exceed the boldest anticipations of everyone. I was most pleased to see that the League had been given a definite start, and I have no fear that you will fail in keeping the interest in the League very warm. Please apply half my subscription to Legal Defence Fund. This is the fund which I should like to see grow. I have another idea in mind for a fund, but will keep it for a while, and see if any other member hits upon it. With renewed best wishes for success.
Claude St. John.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

T. E. Miles.—Thanks for promise of support in getting new members, and for expression of appreciation of the League's objects.

A. Woodall.—Glad to hear from a beginner. Our Mr. Claude St. John will be pleased to advise you at any time in any difficulty you may find yourself with your Canaries, and Cage Birds will help you in anything appertaining to bird-keeping. You are quite right about the £5 prize; it goes to the member introducing the greatest number of new members before March 11th next; and there is £3 for a second prize. No, you do not pay every month. Your subscription is for one year from joining. I thought I had made this clear last week.

Hon. Sec.—You are quite correct. The only limit to the value of the special which will be given at your show is the limit of the number of your members and their friends nominated by you as members of Cage Birds League, and who allocate, through you, half of their subscription money to the purpose. No matter how many you send; half of the money will be spent in a special prize or prizes for your own show, and you may divide these up as you like, in accordance with the wishes of the members subscribing. Further, if your society introduces the most or second most League members before March 11th next, you will receive an extra cash prize of £5 or £3 accordingly.

G. P. Morgan.—Thanks for your offer of assistance throughout your district, Llandovery. Any members you may introduce will be counted to your credit in the competition for the £3 and £5 prizes.
Henry J. Fulljames.

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.
Post Free 7d.

A practical, up-to-date guide to Canary Breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby.

Contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing, and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, etc.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9).—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Eggs and Singing Hen.

W. G. Delves.—(1) No, I should not consider it advisable to take away the eggs as laid if you cannot remove them, or get some trustworthy person to do it for you, before the evening of the day they are laid—say, not later than mid-day each day. In some cases they could be removed in the evening quite safely, as some hens do not sit at all closely until the third egg is laid, but there are others that sit quite tight from the laying of the first egg, so as you are away from home all day and cannot see how the hens are acting, it is best to take no risks, and leave the eggs alone. (2) The hen might have laid the egg found on the floor from the perch, or it might have been accidently dragged out of the nest. Overgrown claws will sometimes cause such an accident. The circumstance is not sufficient evidence to condemn the cock without more clear proof. Had he served this one egg thus, it would, in all probability not have been the only one to receive his attention. (3) Certainly, a singing hen is good for breeding if she elects to do so, mates up, and goes to nest. The mere fact of her singing is no proof that she will not breed successfully until she has been given a chance. She will probably not mate with the Linnet as long as the cock which she has evidently "set her mind on" is within sight and hearing.

Young Dying.

J. P. (Carstairs).—Non-feeding does not appear to be the trouble with you. But if hens seem to drop off feeding you will find advice in reply to "F. Beauchamp," of service. The real trouble with you will be found in the food supply, and, if I am not greatly mistaken, in the quality of the hemp. Break open some of this and examine it well, and if it is not quite sound and sweet reject it, and get some that is, or, if you cannot do that, use none at all, but substitute a supply of soaked and well drained rape, crushed dry plain biscuits, etc. Also see that your other seeds are good, and the egg-food perfectly fresh and sweet, and given fresh not less than twice a day. Do not satiate the birds with a large supply at one time. Similarly with green food. Give it in reasonable quantities and fresh two or three times daily, and see that it is grown under clean and wholesome conditions, and is also clean when given to the birds. (2) I take it from your letter you have mated the supposed Border cock with another cock. Perhaps you are right. But the bird does not appear to be in condition. Separate it, and in addition to the staple diet give half a teaspoonful of egg-food with a quarter-teaspoonful of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure mixed in it every second day. On the alternate days give half a teaspoonful of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and black rape, with a sprinkling of yellow mustard. Give two leaves of dandelion daily. In drinking water give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn for three days, and afterwards four each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, for three or four days. Try mating again in a week or ten days.

Amazing.

Sandy.—Yes, Sandy, it does look "as though one were exaggerating" to say that all your young from all your pairs, after flourishing grandly for a week, straightway begin to die one each day—no more, no less, with cruel regularity, until not one is left. If only two would die some one day it would at least add variety and "shorten the agony." But I believe you, never fear; although I am rather at sea as to what influences are at work. So far as your feeding and general management is concerned there seems nothing at all to blame. After carefully weighing the pros and cons, there's only two suggestions I will make now, after referring you to the replies to "F. Blewchamp," and "J.P., Carstairs," which may be of assistance to you. First, you should remove the eggs as laid (I rather suspect you did not do this with the earlier nests), substituting a nest egg for the first one removed, and then remove the nest egg on the evening of the day the third is laid, and return the three eggs. You may also remove the cock at this time if you have already been doing so with former nests. Secondly, cease using the biscuit food and either use fresh new laid eggs and good household stale bread, or you may use the first-named egg and biscuit food with a third part of its bulk of bread added after the young are four or five days old. Of course, you should begin to make this addition gradually. Soak the bread for a few minutes in cold water, then squeeze as dry as possible, and it will still contain sufficient moisture to bring the egg and biscuit to a nice crumbly consistency without any more moisture being added. Give lettuce, groundsel, or chickweed fairly freely after the fourth or fifth day, and a fresh supply two or three times daily. Try this system with your next brood, and if you have a repetition of your loss write again at once referring to this reply.

Not Feeding.

F. Beauchamp.—It is quite likely the hen may attend to her duties better with the next brood. It would have been as well to try the effect of removing the cock, but as the hen will have been sitting some time when this appears, if you have not already removed him when she began sitting, you had better leave them together. As you say, he refused to feed the hen much on the nest; it will probably make little difference anyway. If you did remove him, then keep him away until the young are getting well fledged, and the hen is beginning to nest again. When the next young are hatched give the hen a bath daily for a few days, beginning the day before young are due, and make it slightly saline by the addition of a little common salt. Also add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea to the drinking water for one-half of each day for a few days. Give egg-food in small quantities, and fresh two or three times a day. If she does not seem to feed freely with it, add a little maw seed to it, and if this fails, try a little soaked rape with it. Remember, the latter turns sour very quickly. Should this also fail, give a little cracked hemp each day, and on the second day after hatching begin to give a little freshly gathered chickweed, groundsel, or lettuce, or some other green food if these are not available, fresh twice or thrice daily. Do not interfere to feed the young if the hen seems to do the job just tolerably well. Examine the crops at night for the first day or two if she appears to be neglecting her duties, and if they contain little or nothing, give them a cropful of egg-food moistened to a creamy consistency, morning and evening, until she seems to fill them herself. But only do this in case of necessity.

Canary Seed (A.B.).—The seed is very small, but quite sweet and of very fair quality. It also appears very bright and clean, but these points cannot be judged from a mere pinch of seed. You should see that the bulk is clean, and quite free from dust. In that case its small size is its worst point, which, after all, only affects the economic point of view.

Cage for Yorkshire (W. G. L.).—The cage described will do very nicely for the Yorkshire if the perches are placed a little below the middle distance, so as to give seven or eight inches of head room above them. Two perches could be put in on a level with each other. The cage is very low, and should have been 16ins. high; hence the necessity for placing perches below the middle, which may give the whole a rather odd appearance, if the crossbar is across the middle. Being wired in the sides will only increase the necessity of seeing that it is not hung in a draughty position.

Cannot Stand (I.H.).—I cannot say definitely what is the nature of the injury to the bird's legs without seeing them, but I am strongly inclined to think that both legs have been broken in some way. Are the claws much overgrown? If so, this may be the indirect cause of the injury by getting fast round the perch or wires of the cage, and causing the bird to twist and struggle to get them free. If this is the case you would probably make matters worse by interfering, and it would be about the kindest thing to destroy it. But if you prefer to give it a chance, keep it in a rather small low cage, either without perches, or with only one rather wide perch placed quite low down; give seed and water in small shallow vessels on the floor; keep floor strewn with clean dry sawdust; and keep the bird as quiet and still as possible. Do not flutter it about at all, nor try to compel it to take exercise until it does so voluntarily. If claws are overgrown, trim them to the proper length at once. Report result of this treatment in a fortnight, when I will advise further if necessary.

Rollers and Yorkshires (W.H.K.).—(1) The only rational thing you can do with the Roller which persists in laying from the perches, to the irremediable detriment of the egg, and which refuses the nest in any position at all, is to place all the perches low down and cover the cage floor with an inch depth of sawdust when she is about laying. In this way you will save the eggs, and must then give them to another hen to hatch and rear. This would only be judicious if you have good reason to believe the eggs are fertilised. As any progeny from them would be a very common type of Mule, if there was any reasonable doubt about fertilisation it would scarcely be worth sacrificing the eggs of another pair for these. I suppose you have tried more than one type of nest-pan? If not, do so. (2) You seem to imply that you kept this pair on a stimulating diet whilst sitting last time. In this case, as you have now gone over to the system of feeding given in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, they should do better this time. But you should also have removed the cock when the hen began to sit. To be prepared for contingencies read replies to "F. Beauchamp" and "J.P., Carstairs."

Loss of Voice (Maes-Gwyn).—See that the bird is kept in a nice, bright, airy place, free from cold draughts or great fluctuations of temperature, and not near or over burning lights in the evenings. Give a staple diet of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with equal parts of maw and gold of pleasure seed. Twice a week on the alternating days give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts inga, linseed, black rape, and teazle. Give a spray of chickweed daily. In the drinking water give ten drops of lemon juice, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash daily for three days, and afterwards 20 drops of the following mixture daily for four days, and every second day for a week after. Mixture: 2 drams each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, one dram each of chlorodyne and ipecacuanha wine, and six grains of iodine of potassium. Any chemist will mix this for you.

Sample of Canary (Glsbro-chick).—The seed is very small, but clean, and of very fair quality. Its size is the only objectionable point about it, and that concerns only the economic standpoint.

Canary Seed (Straight 'Un).—No. 1 is very small, none too well ripened, and does not seem to have been any too well harvested. The quality is poor. No. 2 is a trifle larger and better than No. 1, and of just moderate quality. No. 3 practically the same as No. 1, but may not be quite so clean. No. 4 practically same as No. 1 but slightly better flavour. No. 2 is the best sample, but there is very little to choose between them all.

Laying One Egg (S. E. A.).—Continue the treatment advised in reply last week, but add a part of yellow mustard to the seed mixture to be given every second day, making it equal parts inga, linseed, millet, black rape, and yellow mustard. If they do not appear to eat any of the latter try the slightest dust of dry table mustard on the bread and milk before putting on the maw. By the way, "cod liver ail" in last week's reply should, of course, have been "cod liver oil."

Nibbling Feathers (Constant Reader of CAGE BIRDS).—You do not seem to be feeding bird correctly. Treat as follows, but first of all closely examine cage and bird for presence of insect pests, and if any are found eradicate them at once. Staple diet, a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape only. Twice a week for a month give in addition a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with maw seed. On two other days each week give a half teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts inga, millet, teazle, and cracked sunflower. Give a spray of green food daily, and allow the bird to bathe freely. In the drinking water give ten drops of syrup of buckthorn daily for three days, and six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid, for two or three days afterwards.

More Deaths (Dolly).—It is impossible to suggest any cause without some data to go upon. You ought to have said where you keep them, whether the cock was with the hen; what green food you used; and whether the young were being fed up the last day, and so on. By following instructions in Canary Querists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "Hnuse's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Ynrkshire Canaries," 1/-, pnst free.

CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL closely, there cannot have been anything wrong in the feeding, unless the quality of the foods was at fault. Read replies to "F. Beauchamp," "J. P., Carstairs," and "R. J. D.," which should help you to discover what is wrong, and how to proceed in future.

A Triplet (W. W.).—(1) If the hen is a large feathery specimen, with loose flowing feather about the flanks, and abdomen, it is quite possible this is the cause of the infertility. In such a case you catch the hen before she goes to nest next time, and carefully trim off all the loose tips of feather about these parts. No need to disfigure her, but only just trim off these parts from a loose rough appearance to a neat close-feathered one. Be careful not to cut the skin. A pair of nail or embroidery scissors are best implement. (2) No harm in trying another cock, if you have one available for next nest, but still trim the hen as above if the circumstances are as stated. (3) About a fortnight, or a little over, if the hen is not very forward again. They should, if possible, be old enough to transfer to a nursery in case the cock molests them.

Trnuble with Hens (Troubled).—(1) Your hens were probably in an overfed condition, and should have been kept on a very plain diet, with greenstuff, and aperients, for a week or two before being mated. If they have not now gone to nest, put them on a diet of plain canary only as staple for a week. During this time give only a morsel of bread and milk once, and on two other days half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts millet, inga, black rape, and a half part of yellow mustard. Give a liberal supply of green food daily, and every second day add six drops of syrup of buckthorn to the drinking water. At the end of the week give six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel in the water for two days. (2) For the diarrhoea in sitting hens look well into the quality of your seeds and purity of water. Give a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape, and each day until the looseness is stopped give a pinch of hemp and crushed dry plain biscuit. Stop all other extras whilst sitting and give no greenstuff. See that the hemp is quite sound.

Cock Pecking Ynung (W. P.).—You did the right thing to remove the cock again. If the hen was not very anxious to begin nesting again, you really returned him too soon. It is best to wait if the condition of the hen will allow of it, until the young are well fledged, and able to get out of the nest, so that in a case like this, when the cock begins to ill-treat the young, the latter can be transferred to a nursery-cage, and hung on the open doorway of the breeder, leaving the parents free to go on with their nesting arrangements for the next brood, when one or both will almost invariably continue to feed the young as long as is necessary through the wires of the nursery cage. You should wait now until the birds are out of the nest, and beginning to feed themselves before re-introducing the cock—that is, of course, if the hen does not start to build again, in which case you should put the young in the nursery and proceed as above suggested.

Young Dead in Shell (Unlucky).—It is quite possible that the accident to the cage may be the cause of the young dying in the shells. It is just such a sudden noise and jarring combined as would result from this accident that will cause the death of the young. But if this was the case, the young would be nothing near fully developed in your case. A temporary chill, or even weak embryos, might also be the cause. I cannot tell what the trouble with the hen's leg may be without more data to go upon. If it was first noticed soon after the accident referred to, it might have received some injury from that jar, or it may be simply a cramped condition which occurs sometimes with sitting hens, in which case it will pass off as the hen gradually resumes a more active condition. I do not think you are likely to do any good by interference. Beyond looking to see whether the foot is sore, leave it alone, and if the trouble does not quickly pass away, write again, and give full particulars.

Dying at Week Old (R. J. D.).—See reply to "F. Beauchamp," and if you begin to give hemp anywhere about the sixth day, the first part of reply to "J. P.," Carstairs, will also give you a hint or two. Personally, I do not like dandelion as green food after the young are hatched, and I am inclined to blame this, or rather the way you give it. You ought not to chop the greenstuff, and mix it in the egg-food. Nothing at all should be mixed in the egg-food, as long as the parents eat it, and feed with it quite freely, and seem to appreciate it. If they appear to flag at it a sprinkling of maw may be added, or occasionally a little soaked rape, as mentioned in the reply referred to. The greenstuff should be stuck in the wires, or in a rack, just as it is gathered, or mixed in water if not quite clean, and then shaken dry, and given fresh two or three times a day. It is possible the breakfast biscuits may contain too much fat. Next time try Osborne or Mnizena, or use bread crumbs and egg only, with a pinch of maw, and for greenfood use chickweed, lettuce, groundsel, or watercress, in the order named, and I think you will do better.

Bald and Scurfy (1st Query, Yorks.).—I expect the cause is to be found in wrong treatment, but you are quite silent as to how you treat it. Keep the cage and perches scrupulously clean, and see that all insect pests are kept at bay. Strew cage floor regularly with clean, gritty sand. Allow bird to bathe freely, and keep it in a bright, healthful position, but free from cutting draughts. Feed on a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape mixed together. Every second day for a month give a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice a week on the alternate days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts black rape, inga, teazle, and millet. Give a spray of green food daily. Slightly smear the bare place twice a week with sulphur ointment, in a quarter ounce of which two drops of creosote has been well blended.

Sleeps in Daytime (A. A. H.).—A hen must be in a rather bad condition to be frequently nodding at this time of year, when they ought to be overflowing with life and spirit. I do not anticipate any big results from the mating, as she is clearly not fit to be mated. Separate her; put on a diet of plain Canary for a week, during which time give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake sprinkled with equal parts maw and gold of pleasure seed on two days; on two other days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts inga, teazle, millet, black rape, and yellow mustard, and three leaves of dandelion daily. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and then four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, for three or four days. If she is then in good condition, bright, and active, you may try mating her again.

Ynrkshire Minpy (E. B.).—Look well into the condition of your seeds, especially see that the rape is free from mite, and that any hemp you use is sound and good. Keep cage and perches scrupulously clean, and cover floor with sawdust until the diarrhœa is stopped, changing it frequently for fresh. Give gritty sand in a tin meanwhile. In addition to the staple of canary and rape, give a pinch of hemp every second day, and on the alternate days a piece of bread and milk, the size of a hazel nut, with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed. Limit the diet to this, and give no green stuff for a fortnight, or for a day or two after the looseness has quite disappeared. In the drinking water dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda, the size of a split pea for one day only, and afterwards give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day for a week. After the bird has had the one day dosage with sulphate of soda, slightly dust the bread and milk each time for the next three of four times with carbonate of bismuth. Dust this on after the oil and before sprinkling with the maw seed.

Ynung Dying (Yorkshire).—The cause of the young dying was in all probability the parents starting nesting again and stopping feeding them. You gave fresh nesting material a good deal too early, and this, doubtless, incited the hen to throw over the young and devote all her attention to starting afresh. The daily supply of egg-food in some form is necessary, whilst the young are being reared. Did you keep the hen on a diet of plain canary seed, with no extras whilst sitting? This you ought to have done, and must do so this time. For the rest, I think you will find all you want to get over difficulties with the next brood in the replies to "F. Beauchamp" and J.P., Carstairs." For fuller detailed particulars you could not do better than get the parts of "Our Canaries" which treat of feeding and rearing young.

Cages for Rollers (G. F. C.).—I take it your first query refers to singing cage, though you do not make this clear. A very good size is 16in. long, 15in. high, 7in. deep. This will allow two perches to be placed on the same level on middle crossbar, and induce birds to exercise more. Show cages are usually black outside and blue inside. With singing, one can exercise their own taste more. Personally I like a walnut or mahogany stained outside, and either a light blue or electric green inside. I am not aware of any fixed law for a Roller show cage. One the same size as ordinary show cages, about 13in. long, 12in. high, and 6in. deep, would be most generally convenient on account of packing into the ordinary type of cases on the market. In this case black and blue would be the best colours to use. Before starting making a number of cages, you would do well to visit a show or two with Roller-singing classes, and see what cages are most popular and serviceable.

Removing Nesting Material (W. E. Sturley).—The big bird breeder who advised you to take away all the nesting material from the nest in which were young a fortnight old was also a big something else. This was the sole cause of the hen's desertion, you may depend on it. The Keating's would have nothing to do with it. The hen resented the interference, that's all. Being only two young ones there was no necessity whatever to touch the nest at all until they left it. Even with a full brood it is only necessary to give a clean nest if the one they are in gets very soiled and foul.

A Spring Moult (J. W. Harris).—The bird probably had only a partial moult last autumn, and is now only completing the process. Keep in a comfortable place, not necessarily very warm, or near a fire, but quite out of reach of draughts, and do not keep it in a window, nor over or near a burning light in the evenings. See that cage is quite free from insect pests, and strew floor regularly with clean gritty sand. Allow bird to bathe freely as long as the weather is nice and mild, but withhold the bath should there come a cold chilly wet day or two. Give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape as a staple, twice a week give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of black rape, linseed, millet, teazle, and cracked sunflower seed, and every second day, whilst moult lasts, a half-teaspoonful of egg-food sprinkled with maw seed. The latter may be varied now and again with an equivalent quantity of bread and milk, or crushed sponge cake. Give a little green food daily, and twice a week add 20 drops of Chemical Food to the drinking water until the moult is quite finished. Bird will not sing until moult is over, but should do so very soon afterwards.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. Weston.

A Pied Linnet (E. R., Peckham).—Your Linnet is not sufficiently white to be of any particular value—birds entirely white are fairly frequently to be bought, and birds half to three-parts white are fairly common. Your Linnet with the white head and partly white back I should value at 7s. 6d. to 10s.; it is a cock, you say, and singing.

A Siskin Matter (Siskin, W.G.S.).—Possibly the bird has been gorging himself with egg-food; or hemp, niger, and the like. Shut off by himself and give two or three gentle doses of syrup of buckthorn (on alternate days; plain water in between) until his bowels are moving freely. Don't purge him drastically, of course. The dose is a small half-teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of water. Feed plainly.

Goldfinch Not Singing (Olive Green).—So far as I can judge the only answer to your question is the obvious one that your Goldfinch is not a cock bird. You do not state that you are certain upon this question of sex. You say the bird is well fed (according to the directions in the "Nutshell" booklet) and that it is "lively enough." All I can say is that no cock Goldfinch could possibly be in good health and condition at this season of the year, and yet not singing. It would be contrary to nature. If my shot does not hit the mark, write me again.

Another Sex Matter (G.B.F.).—I am inclined to the opinion that the two Goldfinches are a pair. It would be highly unlikely that a dealer would sell two cocks as a pair. Two cock Goldies will often be quite friendly together, but not two cocks and one hen. The cock Linnet is aggressive because he has no mate. Find him a hen, and he will cease troubling the other birds. Yes; a British cock Bullfinch will fertilise the eggs of a Siberian hen Bullfinch. The disparity in size should not, of course, be too great, if it can be avoided. The place you describe is an excellent one.

The Meadow Pipit (F.E.M.).—The Meadow Pipit certainly sings in captivity, some of them very prettily indeed, and for a good number of months out of the year. Both cock and hen are alike in plumage, and one can only guess (more or less) about the sex by choosing the brightest coloured and most richly marked bird, with the boldest (most masculine) manner—not an easy task for a beginner. In the breeding season the vent is an infallible guide as to the sex. Yes; feed in similar manner to the Skylark, but on a better grade (quality) food and give a more varied and liberal supply of live-food.

Light Linnet Mules (Smite).—I hope you won't mind me saying so, but I have my doubts as to whether the birds you describe are really Linnet Mules. They read like pure Canaries. Has any expert Mule breeder seen them and agreed that they were Linnet Mules? If you have a clear Linnet Mule with a crest, then you have indeed a great novelty—the first ever bred, I fancy. Did you exhibit either of the four anywhere last season? I should like to have a look at them. The three hens would not be worth a great deal, and if the cock is a small bird (I expect so, bred from a crested German Canary hen) then his value would be discounted a good deal by his lack of size. If the birds are indeed Linnet Mules, then you ought to mate their father this year with a large clear yellow hen of Norwich type, a hen that blows perfectly clear in the underflue.

Rearing Wagtails (G.M.O.).—The finest food of all for hand rearing small softbills is live (fresh) ants eggs; these will soon be on the market. They can be moistened now and again with warm milk. Nothing else is needed in the early stages; but some minced yolk of hard-boiled egg can be added as the youngsters grow, and a few scalded (or steamed) gentles. Later still, add a little of a good insectile food (the one you name is excellent; I use it myself). The youngsters must be kept clean, warm and snug — most important things, these. I have kept all the Wagtails throughout winter in an unheated indoor birdroom and they were in grand condition.

Discharge from Gathering (No nom-de-plume).—You must try to press out all the matter from the place (gently, of course), and afterwards thoroughly cleanse the place with a swab of surgical lint (from any chemist) dipped in warm water, to which a little Condy's fluid has been added (enough to colour it like port wine). Repeat, as may be necessary. For a day or two lightly colour the bird's drinking water with the Condy's fluid, using a glass or earthenware drinking vessel only, and changing the water four or five times daily.

Bullfinch Hens Building (Frank).—Hen Bullfinches are very uncertain indeed in the matter of going to nest. One of my own made a start last year about a fortnight before August Bank Holiday! They say "better late than never"; but this kind of "better" is not of much use. June is really the month of months for the hybrid breeder; or, at least, I find it so down here in the South. Many hen Bullies start about the middle to the end of May. Both the flowers, the seeds, and the leaves of the dandelion are liked by hen Bullfinches, etc. The young, tender leaves, and the freshly gathered seed are by far the most valuable, however. The shoots of fruit bushes (gooseberry, currant, etc.), hawthorn hedges are very valuable things, too. Nothing else needed in the way of ordinary seeds.

Hand-rearing Thrushes (Darlington).—I cannot understand you asking me this question, seeing that this matter has been fully dealt with in several recent issues of Cage Birds. Did you not see the letters and articles dealing with the hand-rearing of Blackbirds and Thrushes? Anyway, you will find the method fully explained in the "Nutshell" handbook on the Thrush (post free, 2½d., from Cage Birds). Feed every half-hour at first (a little and often is one of the secrets of success); later on, every hour. Don't cram too much into them at once. Water is not necessary at first; the sloppy food supplies all the moisture needed. As the youngsters grow up, let them have a little new, sweet milk now and again (or water, if you like). They soon begin to pick up bits of food for themselves; no "teaching" is necessary. Put a few mealworms amongst the food, cut in two.

Linnet Muling Couple (Pippin).—A Linnet will often pull the nest-pan lining about, and sometimes the first bits of material carried in by the hen. But when the hen Canary sets to work building in earnest, he then ceases to molest the nest. Further, even a steady old stick of a Linnet (in the ordinary way of things) will appear to get wild and nervous when mated up. This is only a mannerism, however. I have a shining example in my own birdroom now. This Linnet fusses about and flutters about, and acts as though demented when in a breeding cage with a hen Canary. Put him in a show cage and he is like a lamb. He fertilises his eggs, too. With regard to your hen Canary, she is evidently somewhat backward, or she would have built before this. It is not at all necessary that your Linnet should be with the hen throughout the day; a short time in the evening and the very early morning is all that is required. Shut him off in one half of the double breeder, with the wired slide down the centre. You will soon see, then, if he is really preventing her from building a nest, as you appear to think. You should fasten down the lining of the nest-pan with some paste (try "Stickphast" paste).

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., etc.

A Feather Puller.

R. S. N. O.—I am afraid your bird has become possessed with the feather pulling vice; in such case I fear he will continue to do so. You give me no idea as to how you have been feeding and treating the bird. Please supply this information, and, in the meantime, confine its diet to seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Every fourth day, so long as the voidings are not watery-loose, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia, in the drinking water, and spray it with quassia solution every other day.

Aviary Queries.

M. E. S.—I much fear I cannot give you a definite reply till you describe the environment of your aviary a little; at present it would appear that the birds get a chill by possible draught. I should suggest sending the body of the next bird that dies to our Mr. Yates for post-mortem examination, and so ascertain whether there is any contagious disease among your birds. Undoubtedly the hen birds have died from egg binding; this also is usually the result of a chill. Your dietary is about right, but white, Indian, and spray millet should be given, also seeding (flowering) grass, and for the foreign Finches, at any rate, cease giving the egg food, and in lieu of same give a little insectivorous mixture—see our advert. columns.

Birds for Aviary.

H. J.—You do not say which group you require, neither do you give capacity or whether your aviary is an in- or outdoor one, but the following are all showy species: Finches.—Green Singing, Ruficauda, Long-tailed Grass, Saffron, Parrot, Melba, Gouldian, Painted, Cuban, Red-headed, Diamond, Crimson Pileated, White-throated, Parson, Chestnut, Pectoral, Lavender, and Fire. Buntings.—Indigo, Nonpareil, Green, Yellow-billed, Red-crested, and Pope Cardinals. Tanagers.—Scarlet, Blue, Maroon, Archbishop, and Superb. Weavers.—Madagascar, Napoleon, Orange, Grenadier, Masked, and Black-headed. Waxbills.—Crimsoned winged, Violet-eared, Zebra, St. Helena, Sydney, Green Amaduvade, Orange-cheeked, and Cordon Bleu. Also Pekin Robin, Red-eared and White-cheeked Bulbuls, Blue Grosbeak, Virginian Cardinal, Abyssian Yellow Sparrow, Spectacle Birds, St. Helena and Sulphur Seed-eaters, Black-headed and Hooded Siskins, Queen, Paradise, and Red-collared Whydahs.

Green Parroquet.

Evelyn (Parroquette).—Your description is very incomplete, and again your bird is in immature plumage, but I think it is the Rose-ringed Parrakeet. In such case it will undoubtedly talk a little and prove an interesting pet when it gets tame and knows you thoroughly. Diet: Seed mixture, three parts each canary and white millet seeds and one part each oats, hemp and sunflower seeds—well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, shelled nuts, and plain biscuit. Add a pinch of grit to the daily supply of seed and keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage. Do not give sops, table scraps, or animal food, but supply water regularly.

Another Feather Puller.

W. J. Graves.—You are dieting the bird correctly, and, like many other intelligent birds, it has adopted the vice of feather-pulling, and I am afraid it will continue in it to the end of the chapter; but never give up hope. Keep bowels well regulated with Dinneford's Magnesia. Spray twice weekly with quassia solution, and paint bare patches with bitter aloes. You might also try Spratt's "Pennakura." A weak solution of fir tree oil may also be used for the spray as a change from the quassia. Keep it occupied as much as possible, and give it all the liberty you can. Let it have cotton reels, pieces of tree branch, etc., in its cage to play with and cut up, and the trouble may be much mitigated if not cured.

In Poor Plumage.

Parrot.—I presume you have not had this bird long, and that it is rather wild, and probably is pushing its beak continually through the bars of its cage and damaging its feathers that way. As it gets to know you well it will become steadier and the feathers will then be renewed. Diet: Seed mixture, Canary, White millet, hemp, and oats in equal parts, ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit, cuttlefish, grit and water. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Once a week put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water, and on other days lightly colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food.

Amazon with Cold.

J. Marsden.—You have done quite right to stop the sops—chemical food and water in equal parts will answer well for moistening bread or biscuit. Confine the dietary to the following: Seed mixture, boiled maize, ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit, also cuttlefish, grit and water. Cleanse the nostrils daily so long as the running continues, with diluted glycothymoline. It will not matter if it swallows a little, but you must take a little for each occasion, and not dip brush or rag into the bottle of solution. Give three doses, one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in one ounce of water (to take the place of the drinking water for the day), with three days between each dose. The bird must be kept out of draught, but should not stand in a hot, dry atmosphere — keep it where the temperature is most equable. Spray it once a week, choosing a warm day, with tepid water, but wait till the cold has yielded to treatment before commencing to do so.

Parrot Casting Feathers.

H. A. Hopkinson.—It is a young bird, and probably the dropping of feathers is natural. I have known such cases, and if this is so it will ultimately cease and only the normal moult be indulged in. At the same time observation must be kept, and if it is pulling its feathers an attempt must be made to check it. Spray the bird every other day with quassia solution, using a fine sprayer, and take precautions against draught till it is quite dry. So long as the voidings are not watery-loose, put every fourth day, one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water. If the bird will take sufficient of it, a seed mixture of oats, hemp, canary and white millet seeds, in equal parts will be better than the one you are giving. Also give ripe fruit, nuts and pieces of plain biscuit. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, nor any kind of animal food whatever. As a precaution against parasites well scald out the cage, also othe cage cover, perches, and food vessels. Our Nutshell Booklet, The Grey Parrot, 2½d. post free, from our Manager, would help you.

Blue-fronted Amazon.

W. P. Q. Erdington.—(1) The mixture you are giving is equal to any ready-made mixture on the market. Parrots are wasteful creatures. I should spray the bird two or three times weekly with quassia solution, and also take the precaution of scalding out the cage, perches, and food vessels. Diet: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, and a little boiled potato, turnip, or carrot (all without gravy), may be given. It is well to add a pinch of grit to the daily supply of seed mixture. (2) It is the minimum size, and would be far better in a larger one, though I have seen birds well kept in such a cage as yours. (3) The bird is in strange quarters yet, does not know, and grunts its dissatisfaction at a stranger when you go near—by quietness of movement, patience, and kindness, you must tame it, and its moroseness will gradually disappear. (4) Aged Parrots usually have the scalings of the legs and feet very coarse and horny. Sexual distinctions are comparative and not possible in scope of this reply. (5) "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit," deals with Amazons and others—write our manager. (6) Amazons are intelligent birds, the Bluefront as good as any, and usually make good talkers, and mimics, but the Grey Parrot heads the list.

Too Late (S. J. Willett).—Sorry our reply arrived too late, and that your bird was dead. I presume you are using the same cage for the fresh bird; if so, unless it has been well scalded out with boiling water, it is a dangerous proceeding, and I should advise you to do this now. Keep the young bird warm, but not in a stuffy corner. The booklet gives full information, but if you are still in doubt after reading it, we shall be pleased to try and make all clear. It is not by any means an easy matter to establish a newly-imported Grey Parrot, young or old.

A Feather Puller. (Secondi).—I cannot assist you fully till I know how the bird has been fed and treated. Please repeat query and supply these details, and I will try and give you a helpful reply. In the meantime see our reply to another correspondent in this issue on "Feather Pulling," and apply this to your own case—it can do no harm while your own reply is getting through. Our Nutshell booklet, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d., post free, from our Manager, should be helpful to you.

Correct name (A. J. C. P.).—The correct name is Jacariui Finch, the blue-black bird is the male, and the olive-brown one the female. The species was bred last year for the first time; it is only quite recently that hens have been imported—when the young are hatched in addition to seed, supply soft food and live insects in the form of live ants' eggs, well scoured gentles, and mealworms, also unlimited greenfood, grass in flower, etc., and do not examine, that is, pry into their domestic arrangements too closely—you cannot take the same liberties with Foreign Finches that you can with Canaries. Hope you'll have luck with them.

Cordon Bleus and Bishops (J. R. Barrett).—(1) Yes, some few Cordon Bleus are bred annually, and when they are feeding young, supply greenfood ad lib, also a mixture of ants' "eggs," dried flies, and crumbled sponge, made crumbly moist for use, in addition to the usual seeds. The male Cordon has red ear coverts, which the female does not possess. (2) Speaking from memory, I think the Orange Bishop has been bred once, perhaps twice, but Bishops or Weavers are shy breeders in captivity and only isolated instances of success have been attained. Still, there is no reason why they should not do so, and it is certainly worth the attempt.

Will They Breed? (Devonian).—The Saffron Finch is said to cross with the Canary, and I know of one instance of its doing so, but many try and do not succeed. The male Saffron is not a good tempered individual, and apt to kill his spouse if in confined quarters, otherwise, a double breeder with the partitions removed should suffice. They have song, but the notes are somewhat harsh and screechy. Silverbills breed freely in the garden aviary, and have also been bred in cages, so there is no reason why you should not succeed. They are partial to a Hartz travelling cage, with the fittings removed and two of the bars cut away for entrance; half fill it with hay and hang it up in the cage, and then supply a little loose hay, so long as they show inclination to build.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Rev. A. R. Runnels-Moss.—Hen died of ovarian disease, brought about by chill. A saline laxative, e.g., glauber salts, occasionally administered during this period, is frequently prescribed, and by some a few drops of gin given in the drinking water. These parts are in a highly vascular and active condition during the breeding season, and readily predisposed to morbid changes.

GENERAL.

Answered by The Editor.

The Cage Bird Union (On the Square).—Sorry, but we could not possibly publish your letter as written. It would be actionable at law.

Mice in Aviary (S. R. Williams).—We have published your letter, and no doubt some reader will be able to give you helpful advice.

Nests and Wild Seeds (Lanarkshire).—Many thanks once again. We will certainly endeavour to give the felt nests a trial.

Cuttings (W. Fisher, J. Holland, A. Short, E. P. S., and others). We tender you our thanks for the newspaper cuttings sent.

A Breeding Cage Partition (J. Stratton).—We utilised a similar notion some little time back.

A Hen Thrush (A. Hopkinson).—Send your request to us in a sealed, stamped envelope, and we will see that it is forwarded to the correspondent in question.

Making a Breeding Cage (J. Andrews).—The articles on making a breeding cage appeared in our issues dated Feb. 11 (a double number, 2d.), and Feb. 18. We wish you success in the hobby.

The Proposed Border Fancy Specialist Club for the North.

Sir,—This club has been long talked about, but nothing has been done. Come along, fanciers, and let us do something for the "wee gem" of the North. Could we not call a meeting and see what could be done? There is a specialist club for every variety except Borders. Now, ye "wee gem" breeders, let us have one as well. We could make our centre in Newcastle, and have our meetings to suit all. Could we not call a meeting at once to arrange secretary, etc., say, 20th May, at 8 p.m. Fanciers, please reply.

A Scottish Presentation.

Sir,—I noticed in "Twitterings" of last week's Cage Birds that at a committee meeting of the Scottish Plainhead Club a list has been opened and 15s. subscribed amongst those present. I see the list has been left open until May 13th. I would suggest that they keep it open until some time in June, as the half-yearly meeting of the City of Glasgow Show comes off some time in May. I would be glad to see Mr. J. Brown at the City meeting with his list. I believe that he could get a lot very glad of the opportunity of subscribing to it, as Mr. A. Chalmers has been a member of the City of Glasgow Committee for a long time, and is considered by them one of the best workers that Scotland's premier show has got. The Hamilton fanciers join with me in wishing Mr. A. Chalmers and his wife a long life of prosperity.

The Proposed Union for Lancashire and Cheshire.

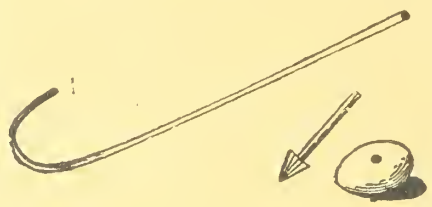
Sir,—I should be glad if you would again allow me a little space in your columns in order that I may remind the various secretaries to whom I have written that I am still waiting to hear what the feelings of their societies are with regard to the above. Considering the number of letters which have appeared from time to time in your columns, especially at the beginning of this year, as to the advisability of forming such a Union (which the majority of fanciers seemed to think was an absolute necessity), I am very much surprised at the lack of interest which is now being shown, and cannot understand where the writers of those letters have got to. Up to the present, although I think that by now the majority of societies have had meetings, I have only received replies from about one-fifth of the societies in Lancashire and Cheshire; and, with two or three exceptions, these replies are from societies who only hold members' shows. My object in writing this letter is to ask whether or not a Union based according to my circular letter shall be formed, as I am desirous of either getting the thing into working order at once, or of abandoning it altogether, whichever fanciers prefer, as I do not see the use of wasting any more time on it if this is the way it is to be supported. May I therefore ask for replies to my circular letter at once?

Jno. Hopkins,

126, Bury New Road, Bolton, Lancs.

Lancashires and Lizards of To-day and Yesterday.

Sir,—I thank Mr. Fuller for his congratulations to me for having succeeded in my mission. I am pleased to know that I have at least shown someone the uselessness and foolishness of trying to run some of the best judges in England down for bad judging when the fanciers in some cases admitted it was not the judge but the birds that were in fault. I am too shy to retire without once again thanking him for his congratulations. Re "Novice's" letter, I would advise him to cut it out, have it framed, hang it on his wall, look well at the part that reads "fat head," then scratch his chin; but "say nowt."



Alex. Donnelly.

Sir,—I notice in your valuable paper that the young fanciers generally are craving—yea, begging and thirsting—for some greater knowledge than has ever been printed or revealed to the Lancashire Fancy before from the great fancier and almost judge, E. Fuller, Esq., of Glossop. This is he, the coming Goliath, to whom the novice is looking forward to sweep the "mongrels," as he calls them, from the show bench, and place in their stead the ideal Lancashire (which he never has, nor ever will, possess). When I read his letters and notice the company he has kept in the Feather Fancy (which I notice he does not forget to tell with his capital "I"), I wonder at him being so dense as to make light of Mr. House, and also to give the cynical smile at the advice of so able a fancier as Mr. R. Barrass, whose experience is greater—yea, the comparison between the two (Mr. Fuller and Mr. B.) is as that of a farthing candle and an electric light. His letter to Mr. Dewsnap shows to all the inconsistency of the man—once a gentleman, once a demon. As far as my knowledge goes of Mr. Jno. Dewsnap, this fact must stand to his credit and appeal to all, i.e., Mr. Dewsnap never bought a bird to exhibit, and all his winners have been his own breeding, and to accomplish what he has done is far beyond the ability of our most learned friend Mr. Fuller. I have been in the Fancy twenty years, and I have yet to see our esteemed friend and coming judge stage his first winner. However, he warns us in his letter (like a great captain) to look out—for the Coronation? No; for the mule he exhibited at one of our leading shows? No; but for a specimen which, "when it comes," will stagger the Fancy world. Turning once again to this great orator, in his own language, "wait and see."

Truth.

Keeping Birds' Eggs.

Sir,—I think I am able to assist "British Bird" in his difficulty respecting the keeping of his collection of birds' eggs. The cause of their cracking after being blown is that they are not blown perfectly clean. I have some in my collection that I have had many years, and they are in quite as good condition as when first procured. As other readers of "C.B." may be interested in the subject, I will detail my method. In the first place it is impossible to blow eggs properly without the correct instruments to do the work. The accompanying illustration shows a blowpipe and twist bit, which, with a sharp darning needle, are all the tools required. Get your eggs as fresh as possible, and taking one in the left hand, proceed to make a prick in the side with the needle; then insert the "bit" and gently rotate it with the finger and thumb, being very careful not to press it in the hole. Take time, and let the "bit" do its work gradually. Having made the hole sufficiently large, hold the blow-pipe about an eighth of an inch away, and force air into the egg, which will expel the contents. If the egg is held up to the light one can see if the contents are all out. Then have some strong salt and water, and blow some of this in the empty shell; gently shake it, expel, and finish off with clean water. Lay the shell on clean blotting paper with the hole downwards, when it will drain and dry. Then pack away in a box or cabinet, where the light is effectually excluded, or the shells will soon lose their freshness and colour. I am inclined to think that the treatment with salt water also assists in the setting of the colour, and so I never hesitate to make the outside quite wet with this solution.

H. Norman.

Sir,—Having noticed in Cage Birds a letter asking a way to preserve birds' eggs, I send a way which I was told is a very good one, and simple; that is, to varnish the eggs with the very best clear varnish, using a good soft brush. The eggs take a fine gloss, and the varnish, being clear, does not in any way change the colour of the eggs. The spots and markings can be distinctly seen. Altogether, I think it makes a decided improvement. A very small soft brush is required to make this tender task correct.

A Reader.

Sir,—To prevent birds' eggs cracking or crumbling after they are blown, well rinse them out with corrosive sublimate dissolved in spirits of wine (a few grains to the ounce); this is a deadly poison. Insert a small quantity into the egg by means of a glass egg blower with a bulb. Then shake the egg so that the solution comes into contact with all the inside skin. Now draw the solution out of the egg by the blower, and return it to the bottle. Place the egg with the hole resting upon blotting paper, so that the last drop or two may be drawn out. Finally, cover the hole with a small piece of gummed paper. Water containing a few drops of oil of cloves may be used in place of sublimate if desired. If anyone would like to know how to make egg-blowers, here is an idea: Take a nice long piece of glass tube; hold the middle in a gas flame and rotate it with the fingers. When the tube is hot draw the two ends gently apart until they separate. Break off the sharp points of the glass to obtain two blowpipes. Of course, you will want rubber bulbs to put on the thick ends.

The North Yorkshire & South Durham Federation of C.B.S.

Sir,—Following my letter that appeared in your columns re a federation of North Yorks and South Durham C.B. societies, I may say that all the replies received up to time of writing are in favour of such a scheme being adopted. It is suggested that Wednesday evening, May 19th, at 8 p.m., be fixed for a meeting of representatives of societies concerned, at the headquarters of the Stockton C.B.S., viz., the Leeds Hotel, Bishopston Lane (one minute from station). Will societies who have not replied kindly do so before that date, either for or against, and where representatives cannot attend, I shall be pleased to receive suggestions.

The Annual Ramble of the National British Bird and M.C.

Sir,—The annual ramble of the National British Bird and Mule Club takes place on Saturday, May 27th. It has been decided to go to Effingham, Surrey. The morning party leave by the 9.20 train and the afternoon party by the 1.37 train from Waterloo. Hot luncheon will be provided, and a cold meat tea at the Station Hotel, Horsley. Will any fancier desirous of joining us kindly let me know by the 24th inst. which party they would like to join, so that arrangements can be made for refreshments? Each person to take his own ticket.

Cinnamon Blood and the Norwich Plainhead.

Sir,—I have noticed in various lectures reported in Cage Birds that many of the lecturers advocate inbreeding the Norwich Plainhead to shun cinnamon blood when mating up. Why this is so I am at a loss to understand, as I have bred with pink-eyed and cinnamon ticked birds and have produced highly coloured birds, especially buffs, and these birds were free from any browing, and had plenty of size for the show bench. I know one Widnes fancier, a well-known exhibitor, who has cinnamon blood in plenty running through his strain, and few can beat some of his birds for colour and other points. Last winter I was in a big breeder's room and mentioned cinnamon blood; he held up his hands in horror—"Wouldn't let one into the room," etc. Now I got birds from two prominent London exhibitors, who win a lot on the show bench. I found, on holding up the birds to the light, one out of each pair had pink eyes, proving that these breeders have this blood. Say what lecturers will, my advice to any novice is, if you want to produce colour, get Norwich with pink eyes, or cinnamon ticked birds, and you will produce the "real wheat." Could anyone explain why Yorkshire breeders produce so many cinnamon marks, and why there should be any difference in the Norwich?

The Clashing of Shows in Ireland

Sir,—Referring to letter from "Show Supporter" in your last issue, I would point out that the Larne Show was arranged for the same days as last year's show, and if, as he suggests, an alteration should be made, I should think that in all fairness the Dublin P.B. and C.B.S. should change their date, so as not to clash with our society's show. As to the dates he suggests for my committee to hold their show, these would be impossible, as, owing to train arrangements here, the birds despatched by the train from Larne on Saturday evening could not reach a number of places from which we receive exhibits until Monday, and it would be a rather long time for the birds to be in cases, and the only alternative would be to keep the birds until Monday morning. I think your readers will admit that the Dublin Committee are to blame for arranging their show on dates on which our show was held last year, without at least asking what arrangements we had made.

Thomas Mayne,

Secretary, Larne and Dist. C.B.A.

Sir,—Your correspondent has hit on a very important matter at this season of the year, and I am sure he will draw opinions from many quarters in Ireland on the subject. Now, I cannot see why he should suggest that Sligo should change their dates to suit the Y.C.B.S., as from what I know the latter encroached on the former's date. Is this not so? The Y.C.B.S. had their dates fixed for a week later, and why the change? Of course, first in the field, and get entries with great promises to outside exhibitors—send us a good entry, and we will support you—a promise which, I am sorry to say, has been broken. But, Y.C.B.S., look out this time, or there may be a rude awakening in store for you in the entry list. And we want breeders and show supporters on the "Council" and men more "generous" with specials, no matter how small.

The Missel Thrush for Cage, Aviary, or Show Bench.

Sir,—It is not every fancier who cares to keep such large birds as Missel Thrushes in cages; and their song is very poor indeed; in fact, they are never kept for this purpose, as they bear no comparison with the Song Thrush. But of late years Missel Thrushes have readily held their own on the show bench, for when you get a good marked specimen, it is certainly worth having. The best way to get these birds is to obtain them young, and hand-rear them, for very seldom can you get any good results from birds caught in an adult stage. These birds should be left in the nest as long as possible to save feeding them. They are afterwards easily brought up on barley meal moistened with newly boiled milk, and fed every two hours or oftener. I can assure my readers this mixture is the cheapest I know of, and no expense need be attached to hand-rearing the birds. But no one would think of so doing if he did not want them for show purposes, or a large aviary. Small pieces of raw scraped meat might also be given, and ground crissel mixed with the barley meal. The birds would have to be kept very clean indeed; the droppings should be removed after each feeding, or else they will soon foul the cage and bird. They should have a cage as large as a Magpie's, in order to give them plenty of room. When able to feed themselves, they will eat anything most readily, including various scraps from the table. I have generally found that if they have or get too much raw meat, it causes diarrhœa. A pair of these birds would do well in a large aviary, but for cages they should be caged singly, and given a bath daily—one which would hang upon the cage door, so as to keep the inside of the cage as dry as possible. Four or five years ago I raised a nest of five of these birds on the barley meal diet; and fine large birds they were too. Any-one wishing to try them would find the task not at all difficult; only, of course, time and patience are required.

How to Make a Dainty Egg Cabinet.

Sir,—I enclose a note (just as I got it) on "How to make a dainty egg cabinet." This consists of a miniature chest of drawers. You can make your cabinet any size you please. There are four long drawers, and at the top two short ones. The bottom drawer is the broadest one, meant for the largest eggs. They get smaller as they go up, to suit the different species. You give a coating of glue inside the drawers and line with bright green plush. You require partitions to suit the sizes of the eggs; these are glued and plush-covered before being put in, and are put longitudinal. Along the top of these partitions you put the printed names of the eggs you put opposite. Stain with a good stain, and mount with small brass handles. To make a still better finish, make a groove about half an inch from the side on the top of the little chest, to suit a glass shade, and any of your small birds that die, get them stuffed and put in here. Then you can say you have a very dainty piece of furniture. I am sure there are many of our Cage Birds readers who will be able to make this.

Clearing Mice Out of an Aviary.

Sir,—What is the best method of clearing mice out of an open-air aviary? My children have a flourishing aviary in the garden, built against an old stone wall. Mice have riddled the wall, and use up an immense quantity of seed, and foul more. Traps would probably kill more birds than mice. Mouse virus cannot be used, because to be efficacious other food has to be removed. Could any reader help me?

S. R. Williams.

What Canadian Bird was this?

Sir,—About nineteen years ago I was living out in the North-West Canada, Assa, near Medicine Hat. One evening I had just got outside the house when two birds rose off the ground. One had a yellow neck and head. Quick as thought I let go, and down came the yellow-headed one. It was a fine-looking bird. The yellow was as bright as the wing bars of the Goldfinch. The body was jet black. The other bird was just like a hen Blackbird. I called them "Canadian Blackbirds" myself. This was the only pair of that species I saw in eight years out there. Could any reader tell me their proper name?

The Cage Bird Union.

A Protest Against Dual Posts.

Sir,—The appeal from the secretary of the Cage Bird Union—published in your last issue—makes interesting reading. If this organisation really exists, who are the officers, and what steps are they taking to put matters on a businesslike footing? In the first place the secretary requests societies to forward him the initial subscription, viz., 5s. But is not the address he gives that of an empty house? As a secretary, Mr. Hadwin should be well fitted for the position, hut a combined office is another matter altogether, and as a question of business a financial secretary or treasurer should be appointed. One-man shows are never successful. What, for instance, has become of the English and Welsh Border Fancy Club? Has a balance-sheet been published? Have winners of season specials received them? There are quite a number of fanciers who would willingly act as treasurer to the Cage Bird Union if at the end of each financial year a full statement of accounts would be forthcoming. Liverpool and district fanciers (according to a certain writer) are supposed to have had the handling of the E. and W.B.F. Club's affairs. But such was not the case; otherwise they would have run it on somewhat different lines. I object, on principle, to officials holding dual positions, and, in my opinion, unless something is done the C.B.U. will sign its own death warrant. I think Mr. Hadwin must admit, if he will look at the matter in a broad light, that he is doing the Fancy an injustice in endeavouring to carry out other than the purely secretarial duties. Where business is business, sentiment is non-existent, and life is all too short to be looking for strife. A reply to the above is looked for hy

One Who is Interested.

To Save the Crystal Palace.

A Call to the People.

Sir,—The Crystal Palace is now definitely and irretrievably to be sold. The decision of the Judge ordering the sale was upheld by the Court of Appeal on April 25th. The question now is, Who shall purchase the Palace? My Council urges that scheme which has been spoken of with remarkable unanimity by writers from several parts of the world as "the finest project ever placed before the British public"; which has the active support of literally hundreds of British newspapers; and the support of thousands of the British and Colonial public, and a large and influential body of titled gentlemen—namely, the King Edward National Memorial. I now beg of all readers to consider the extreme urgency of the matter. Several hundred thousand pounds are needed at once as a minimum if the Palace is to be saved. Given this, we can purchase the Palace and secure it to the nation and Empire. All the more important banks throughout the country have undertaken to receive subscriptions, and have subscription lists. A great many newspapers are doing likewise; and I want every one who reads this paper to subscribe, and at once. The Palace cannot be purchased "by arrangement." It has to be a cash transaction. Let us obtain the Palace as the possession and meeting place of the nation and the Empire, and to the memory of the King beloved and for his people's good. We need gifts from £100,000 down to one shilling. All will be gratefully acknowledged in any daily or weekly paper selected by the donor. Contributions may be sent to any newspaper editor, or to any bank, or to the Earl of Kinnoull, the King Edward National Memorial Offices, 26, Shaftesbury Avenue, London, W., from which address all particulars can be obtained. Every subscriber of one guinea and upwards within the next month for England, and three months for American, and six months for Australian and New Zealand Dominions and Colonies, will receive a life free admission ticket to the Crystal Palace. The promotion is purely gratuitous by all parties, and in the event of our not being able to purchase the Palace all subscriptions will be returned.

(Signed) Tenterden.

The details of furnishing, etc., given above, apply, of course, equally to a wired off portion of a room, and need not be repeated. Overcrowding is the principal evil against which to guard; this must not be allowed if the fullest amount of pleasure to the owner and comfort to the inmates be always borne in mind, as the great desiderata; neither goes without the other, and the two together are indispensable conditions of the proper keeping of birds of any sort in captivity.

A Dangerous Beauty.

The Australian Fire-finch, beautiful as it is, must on no account be trusted in a mixed collection, and no cage is large enough to hold two cock birds of this magnificently coloured species. I once brought home late at night two cock birds of this species, and foolishly thought that they would be all right in their travelling cage until the morning. At seven o'clock the next morning one was dead and the other had had such a mauling in the battle that he was little better. A pair may generally be trusted to agree one with the other, but even this agreement is by no means certain to continue, and the cock may at any time severely maul or even murder his mate.

A Charming Exception.

The keeping of the rare and fragile fruit-eating or insectivorous birds does not come within the scope of our title. "First Steps in Foreign Bird Keeping," and among the lists already given (see March 25th), are enough to meet the wishes of any beginner for whom these lines are written, his choice being limited only by his purse or his accommodation. There is, however, one charming bird not hitherto mentioned, which may be especially recommended as a desirable member of any group of birds in an aviary. This is the so-called Pekin Robin, Leiothrix luteus. It does not come from Pekin, and it is not a Robin, but it is a very delightful bird; fairly cheap, beautiful in plumage, most engaging in its friendliness to its owner, full of life and vivacity, ond quite an accomplished songster. The soft-food above mentioned is a necessity to its well-being, although it eats a good deal of seed, and a ripe banana or other fruit in season, will also be very greatly appreciated. The sexes are easily distinguishable when together, but easily mistaken in separate birds, and hens are frequently sold as cocks. The cock bird is altogether more brilliant in plumage than the female; his bill is a bright red, his flight feathers are edged with vivid scarlet and yellow, and he has a golden throat and breast; any dulness in these colours may be taken to indicate a female.

In an aviary it will scarcely be possible to avoid fixing some perches to the walls, and a convenient method of doing this is to fix some fillets of wood in which a groove (or grooves) has been cut to receive one end of each perch, and if these perches are made just a little longer than the depth of the aviary the spring of the wire front will keep them in place, and they will be easily detachable. The more perches, the better for the birds, but they must be so placed that no one crosses another, or the birds will become soiled by each other's droppings.

A nice swinging perch may easily be made by boring through a piece of broom-handle a few holes of such diameter that small curtain rods will fit tightly into them, the whole to be hung from the ceiling. Two or three of these rods will be sufficient for each swing, and the birds will enjoy the motion continually set up.

The question of whether artificial heat is necessary or not for foreign birds in this country is rather an open one. If the birds have plenty of shelter in the way of nest boxes, or other retiring places, and plenty of room for exercise, it will be sufficient just to keep frost out of the bird-room: but if, in addition to the aviary birds others are kept in single cages, then the temperature of the room should not be allowed to get much below sixty degrees at any time. Foreign birds are much more hardy than is generally thought, and in an outdoor aviary, properly constructed, they will withstand our English winters. In cages, or in very confined spaces, they have not the same powers of resistance, and the conditions of temperature must bear a relation to the conditions under which the birds are being kept. One thing is certain, draught is more dangerous than cold, and an indoor aviary should never be placed in such a position that its occupants are exposed to a direct draught between the window and the door of the room.

Nesting of the Hawfinch.

Writing of the Hawfinch, Dixon says: The Hawfinch may pair in spring, hut not a twig is crossed in furtherance of a nest until the first faint signs of summer are spreading over the fields and woods. It is not until the orchard trees have lost much of their pink and white vernal glory, and the leaves are out full and dense, that the Hawfinch seeks a site for its nest. She must have plenty of shelter for it and for herself ere she dare venture to commence it.

The Young Naturalist.

*Likes a Cage Best.

One day I was having a walk when I saw a Sparrow in the road, which had hurt its wing, and could not fly. So I took it home and put it with my other birds for a day or two. When it had got right I let it go. One day when I went up in the room I saw the bird in a cage, a window having been left open.—Sent by Harry Swaine, 55, Cross Street, Sutton, Macclesfield.

Pussy Gets the Worst of it.

One day I saw a cat catch a young Thrush and proceed to carry it off, when he was stopped by the old birds, who flew at him, making a screaming noise. Once the birds fairly pitched on his back and began pecking at his head. The cat, however, did not drop the young one, but went into a coal-house. The birds went in after him and appeared to make him give up the young one.—Sent by Aline Lycett (age 10), Apedale View, Chesterton, Staffs.

*Goldie Finds a Friend.

A certain man had a cock Goldfinch which used to come out of its cage and go about the house. One day the window was left open in the kitchen, and Mr. Goldfinch got out of it, flew into the garden, and went up into a tree. A Thrush came to he its partner, and flew into the kitchen with it; and as the cage was rather a large one, tho Thrush went in with it. When the master came in the kitchen, he was surprised to see them both in the cage singing.—G. Jenkinson, 18, Julian Street, Grimsby.

No. 506.
To Correct Toe Deformities.

Sent by Mr. W. Liddell Tonkin, 7 Fore Street, Bodmin, Cornwall.

I have had Canaries hatched with something the matter with the hack toe, so that it gets forward as in sketch No. 1. By placing a small rubber band around the leg and over the hack claw, as in sketch No. 2, letting the bird wear this for a month or two, I have found the foot quite cured. I hope others may be able to help their birds in like manner.—W. Liddell Tonkin.

No. 507.
A Seed Drier.

Sent by Mr. J. R. Atkinson, 24, Fetters Road, Edinburgh.

I find this a very suitable way of drying rape seed. Get a piece of stout cotton cloth 3ft. in length and 6ins. in breadth. Fold this across the middle, and stitch up both sides, in the form of a long bag. Place the rape inside this, clasp each end with hands, and move backwards and forwards in a swaying movement. This dries the seed very quickly indeed.—J. R. Atkinson.

Wild-Bird Life.

Star Artistes Among Birds.

Daily the landscape becomes more beautiful as tree after tree commences its growth of leaves, some of the spring tints of the opening buds being almost autumnal in their golden hues. In the meadows, under the soaring Lark, the buttercups are as innumerable as ever, and as pleasant to look upon. The "minstrel of the sky" is now in full voice, and no birds of all the feathered choir are more pleasing to listen to. They are all good and glorious songsters, but occasionally one will hear a bird that surpasses all others, not so much in the duration of his song as in the changes and mellowness of the notes. Such a singer is to be heard in the open fields upon the uplands, near where the writer lives. There is no mistaking him, one can tell at once if he is on the wing. Larks in great numbers can be heard all around, but their notes are shrill, and lacking variety, compared with this grand performer. No doubt there are degrees of merit in all species. In this district Thrushes are plentiful, yet of all the grand birds singing in the early spring months, one stood out far above the others. His perch was in an ash tree at the corner of a wood. It was not far from the road, and the most casual passers-by could not but notice him, his changes were so varied, his voice so rich and full. It is such singers as these that are frequently mistaken for the Nightingale by the ordinary listener, and not infrequently the practical bird lover is deceived by a few choice notes. Of all the songsters of the gardens and wood, none vary so much in the quality of their song as the Blackbird. The reason is that this bird is such an admirable mimic, that not one in a hundred is content to sing his own simple lay. He is sure to mingle with it a bar or two from the Thrush, Linnet, or Robin, and sometimes a passage is more like the sound of the human voice than of any feathered performer. As frequently happens, this passage is repeated time after time until it becomes quite monotonous, and one feels bound to disturb the performer, and drive him away from the immediate vicinity, when his voice heard across the neighbouring fields loses much of its monotony. When we are fortunate enough to hear a bird near us whose rich wild notes are free from these imperfections, we listen with pleasure, and think at the moment that the "gold hill" is surely the most melodious singer of them all.

Black by Nature.

The Crow has a bad name in every land. Shakespeare speaks of him as "ribald," Prior "foreboding," Dyer "lurking," Churchill and Gay "strutting," and Dryden as "dastard." The Crow has certainly something of a swaggering air, and is thought by many to be as black by nature as he is in colour. He is fast disappearing in some districts

Books for Bird Lovers.

Brief particulars of some of "Cage Birds" SPECIAL PUBLICATIONS for keepers of birds, with post free prices.

THE NORWICH PLAINHEAD CANARY, 1½d.—By J. H. Payne. Pronounced by all experts to be a most valuable pamphlet concerning the breeding of the variety; written by one of our leading judges.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

MEATING-OFF AND FEEDING SOFTBILLS, 6½d.—By John Frostick. No fancier of Insectivorous Birds who wishes to succeed in his hobby can afford to be without a copy. It also contains notes on Bird Trapping, Cages, etc.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2. — By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives very full details upon how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

PET RABBITS, CAVIES, AND MICE, 1/1½.—By George Gardner. Full information on housing, feeding, breeding, exhibiting, and keeping for profit. A complete practical guide, with illustrations from photographs.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1½.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds. Replete with useful hints.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of Britisb Birds; full of extremely valuable hints.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy" No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorksbire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

THE STOCK BOOK.

"Cage Birds Breeding Room Register" is framed on novel lines, and contains many entirely new departures. Is absolutely indispensable to everyone interested in the hobby.

COMPILED BY G. E. WESTON.

MAKES BIRD BREEDING EASY.

Well-known fanciers have said of the "Stock Book":—"It makes bird breeding easy." This book no breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without. It simplifies the operations in the bird room, and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred.

NOW IS THE SEASON YOU NEED IT.

This "BREEDING ROOM REGISTER & BIRD-KEEPER'S ACCOUNT BOOK" (copyright) offers in a handy form a means of keeping—

The complete pedigree and description of every bird in one's room. A full record of the season's breeding experiences. An account of every young bird reared, and how it was disposed of. A register of one's doings at the shows (the most complete and useful yet devised). A cash account for the year. A profit and loss account of the season's proceedings, and a balance-sheet showing how much one has invested in the hobby.

A Series of Registers will thus furnish a concise record of the career of a fancier as a breeder and an exhibitor from year to year, or over any number of years.

Many useful Emergency and other Hints of great value during the Breeding Season will also be found in its pages.

Price 6d. from any Newsagent, of 7d. (postal order), post free.

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

SUPERIOR ALUMINIUM RINGS

METHODICAL BREEDERS aiming at success, must proceed on scientific lines by marking their birds with these first-grade rings, to enable them to identify the pedigree of all birds bred. Adopted and highly recommended by leading fanciers for years. CAGE BIRDS says:—"One of the best samples we have seen. Very light and beautifully made, with no rough edges." 100 for 2/9, 75 for 2/3, 50 for 1/6, 25 for 10d., post free. Consecutively numbered with or without year. Supplied with or without flanges.

Remember, these rings enjoy a reputation of many years' standing. They are the lightest, compatible with strength, and absolutely the neatest on the market. Plain numbers, which do not fill with dirt.

THE ONLY REAL COLOUR FOOD ON EARTH.

Read below for Proof.

Send your orders, or for new samples, at once. Sure to run short, and can't get any more this season. There's a great scarcity in new crop. Mr. J. E. Davies, Stockport, May, 1911.—"Sir, I have much pleasure in saying that your colour food has during the past year given me every satisfaction, having secured over 50 firsts, also seconds, etc., besides N.P.C. Challenge Cup. This is second year in succession. Two firsts, fourth, and champion diploma Crystal Palace, 1911, and my birds were as bright a colour at Crystal Palace after being washed eleven times as they were at commencement of season. At Crystal Palace six out of the eight champion first prize Norwich." Never saw any colour food, only my Royal Red. Every winner in champion Cinnamon section bar one third. Never saw any but my colour food. Another big winner in Yorkshires, who won two firsts, seconds, etc. Mr. Ambler, Morecambe, writes: "April, 1911.—Sir, I can say I got a better colour from your feed than any I have ever tried." Scotland's greatest winner this last season. Mr. G. Mitchell, Brechin, writes: April, 1911.—"I have used your colour feed for years, and have found it to be all that you claim." Wales' greatest winner, Mr. D. H. Tedstone, Brecon: "Sir, I am pleased to inform you that I not only won the Welsh Cage Bird Cup. I won the solid silver Norwich Cup, the Leach Challenge Cup scores of firsts and specials, etc." I could fill this paper with testimonials like above; which should prove you need not try any other. Prices: Royal Red, 2/- lb., 2 lbs. 3/6, 5 lbs. 7/6, 14 lbs. 17/-; Hot Natal, 2/- lb., 2 lbs. 3/8. Established 1879. SANDIFORD, Colour Food King, PRESTON, LANCS.

The British Bird Manual.

By H. NORMAN. The most thorough and practical work on British Birds ever produced. Published in two parts and complete bound in cloth.

Part I.—Hardbills,—Deals in the fullest manner with Linnets, Goldfinches, Bullfinches, and all other varieties of Finches. Part II.—Softbills.—With Blackbirds, Thrushes, Jackdaws, Larks, and most of the more commonly kept species of insectivorous birds.

This work, lucidly written by a noted specialist, contains fullest directions for Hand-rearing, Keeping, and Exhibiting the most popular of our British Birds. Each bird is dealt with separately, its nesting habits, etc., are fully explained, and these, together with a description of its general characteristics, will enable the novice to easily identify the various species. Each part contains a coloured plate and numerous black and white illustrations by the author.

Price complete, bound in cloth, 2/, post free 2/3; in parts 1/-, post free 1/1.

A Little Knowledge is a Dangerous Thing, and will certainly not bring you success if you are beginning the hobby of Canary breeding. It is ever so much more pleasing to turn your hobby to practical benefit to yourself than to aimlessly dabble with and make a hash of it. Do the latter and you might just as well have flung away the money you laid out. Get a sound knowledge of the branch of the bird Fancy you are about to adopt, and you will profit by it. You can do so for 6d. A book specially written for the beginner is Claude St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners." It has many helpful illustrations. Post free 7d., cloth bound 1/2, from the Publisher, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

EVERY BIRD A MODEL.

Good illustrations are an asset to every book. The illustrations in "House's Canary Manual," are by the famous bird artist, H. Norman. The matter in the book is as good as the illustrations. The Chapter on Roller Canaries is of exceptional interest to breeders. The illustrations show what to aim for, and the contents how to get it. "House's Canary Manual," post free 1/2, cloth bound 2/2, from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

WHO TOLD YOU?

Who told you I had sold out? Whoever it was made a mistake, for I always reserve a lot of extra good birds for this time of the year, just to make up my own breeding stock and the stocks of my many customers. Just you come over and inspect my stock, for I am sure to have the very birds you require, and what is most important, every bird is of sound, reliable quality. All cock birds are in full song, and hens in proud breeding condition. Every bird I guarantee untried, not a lot of breeder's wasters. If you want satisfaction, genuine, reliable birds, absolutely the best possible quality money can buy, you must send to the fountain head. It will save you such a lot of inconvenience and dissatisfaction, besides, look at the money you save. My customers do not know the meaning of the word dissatisfaction, for every bird I send out is well worth 25 per cent. more than the price paid for it. LEIGH AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

We had a very successful table show of H.M. Linnets at our headquarters, Railway Hotel, May 10, when some very good birds were put down to be judged by our vice-president, Mr. P. Hart, whose awards gave every satisfaction. 1, W. Budworth; 2, J. Carter; 3, W. Charnock. After Mr. Hart had made some remarks, we had a discussion on how to count the points for the cup. We decided to count from the bottom, each member to nominate four birds. We are intending to buy our cup on the meeting of June 7, so I should like to impress on all members and intending members to be present, then they will see what we are getting.—R. Charleson, Hon. FALKIRK GOOD INTENT C.B.A.

Meeting held April 29, Mr. J. Muir presiding. Ten new members were enrolled. The replies from the judges for annual show were read and adopted. They are: Mr. Buchan (Falkirk), Norwich Section; Mr. Reid (Shieldhill), Borders; Mr. McQuiston (Ayr), British and foreign birds. The judge for the first feather show was voted on. "Cage Birds League" was referred to by the members, but it was decided to get full particulars of same, the secretary to write for them.—W. Clubb, Sec.

CITY OF GLASGOW O.A.

Half-yearly general meeting will be held in the City Hall reception room, Glasgow, on May 20th, at 6 p.m. At this meeting the classification, judges, and other important business vital to the interests of the society, will be considered, and it is hoped fanciers will attend and take part in the deliberations. The annual subscription is only 2s. 6d. per annum, and fanciers should become members, and strengthen the funds, in order that we may still be able to retain the proud position of being the only society that pays full prize money, irrespective of the number of entries in the class.—Alex. Macdonald, Secretary.

FALKIRK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

A very successful social was held in the Oddfellows' Hall, on May 13, Mr. T. R. Wallace presiding over a large gathering. The chairman, in the course of a few remarks, referred to the work which Mr. Hamilton had done for the society, and the success it had been while he was secretary, and expressed his regret at his leaving us. At the same time he wished him every success in Canada. He would call on Mr. Hugh Morcland to present him with a travelling trunk and purse of gold. Mr. Hamilton suitably replied, thanking the members for their kindness and good wishes. During the evening songs were rendered by Messrs. J. Moreland, R. Kirkwood, jun., J. Morris, T. R. Wallace, Robert Hamilton, and Mrs. Hamilton, while some violin selections were given by Mr. R. Johnstone. A very pleasant evening was brought to a close by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne." Robert Rennie, Sec.

GATESHEAD AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held May 10th, Mr. R. Tindle in chair. Following gentlemen proposed and accepted as members:—Messrs. Appleby (Wallsend), J. Brown (Elswick), H. E. Carknell (Newcastle). Specialist Club patronage taken; secretary instructed to write for same. New cup for annual show discussed, the other cup having been won outright by Mr. R. Armstrong (Tyne Dock), with "King of Kings." Committee of six members were elected to try and arrange for one. Our next item was a lecture by Mr. J. Shepherd (Newcastle) on "Our British Finches." Some were shown on the sheet, with the lantern (kindly lent by Mr. J. Davidson). Mr. Shepherd has made Finches his study for years. His lecture was listened to by a good number, it being very instructive. He spoke principally on the habits of the birds, the feed to give them in captivity, etc. He has had a few of them in his time. One bird in particular he would like to see more on the show benches to-day was the Siskin. He strongly advised fanciers to give one a try. A good many questions were put, which he answered in a straightforward manner. Some fanciers believe in keeping a little bit up their sleeve, but from Mr. Shepherd we get all—nothing is kept back. After a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Shepherd and Mr. Davidson one of the most enjoyable meetings connected with the Gateshead Society was brought to a close, with a hearty vote of thanks to our chairman for presiding.—A. Holden, Sec. and Treas.

YORK C.B.S.

Breeding and Management of the Norwich Canary.

A lecture was given by Mr. T. Wright (of Messrs. Pickering and Wright) before the members on May 8th. Mr. Wright said: I must apologise for not having had time to prepare the necessary paper for such an interesting subject, but as Mr. Shorney was down to give this paper and found at the last moment that he was unable to do so, I will try and do my best to get you out of the difficulty. In the first place, I am a firm believer in having good cages for our pets. I myself use the double breeder, which has its many good points. It is useful for running one cock with two hens; for shutting the cock off to feed the young; and for a nursery cage to finish the young off in.

In pairing up, I always have colour fixed in my mind, and I do not pay so much attention to marked birds as a lot of breeders do. If the birds are a good colour, I would as soon pair two clears together as one marked, providing the other points are equally as good. Whilst the hen is sitting the eggs, I always make a practice of giving her a little egg food about twice a week, so that when the young are hatched her system is full of digested foods so necessary in producing big, fine youngsters; this method always prevents diarrhœa in the young. I boil my eggs for twenty minutes, first thing in a morning for use at noon, and mix with four Osborne biscuits to one egg; also a little maw seed for preference. I like eggs about three days old, as I find that fresh laid eggs will not set properly. I feed my birds four times per day, at 6 a.m., 8 a.m., noon, and 6 p.m., and I never give green food until the young are three days old; if given before, I find it sets up inflammation.

In regard to green food I like chickweed. I have found that dandelion brings the hens too forward.

I always keep the young with the parents as long as possible. When the hen lays again, take the young also the cock away, and he feeds the young, and teaches them to feed also. Never take the young off egg food until they can crack seed, which is generally when they are about eight weeks old. I have found that the cause of a lot of youngsters dying is hunger; their egg food is stopped and they are unable to crack their seed.

Commence giving a little colour food in their egg food when they are about six weeks old, and then gradually increase the strength to one egg and four Osborne biscuits. Put four teaspoonfuls of colour food to four of tasteless pepper. I put a quarter of a pound of hot in, and as cold weather approaches I use a little more hot. Once a week I mix half a teaspoonful of flowers of sulphur with the egg food; this I have found very beneficial.

I keep my hens in winter on a good plain diet, not getting them too fat, but in just a nice condition. In March I cut their tails and nails. The hens which have swollen vents—i.e., those which appear full and fat behind—I put in a separate flight. The backward hens I feed up, so as to get them all to start together. Then, if I have any bad feeders I can transfer the young to the good feeders.

It does not prove that when a cock bird is singing hard he is in breeding condition, because he may be too fat and unable to fertilize. Such a bird as this I put in a flight with two or three other cocks; and I give him a dose of glauber salts. This generally has the desired effect. I am also a firm believer in the one-cock-one-hen principle. If anything I have stated above assists our novice members I shall feel amply repaid for appearing before you to-night.

Mr. Wright then asked for questions, which were showered upon him rather unmercifully by Messrs. Zimmerman, Richardson, Hunter, O'Reilly, Thompson, Siesons, Sayles, Campling, and several others. The questions were all answered only as an expert could be expected to do it. Mr. Sayles proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Wright, which was seconded by Mr. Thompson, and carried unanimously. The lecturer having suitably replied, a very enjoyable evening was brought to a close.—H. Thompson, Sec.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Meeting held May 10th, by a very excellent gathering of the members. Mr. Willmott, on taking the chair, announced that the total membership that night was 30, and with so many putting in an appearance at the meetings it proved that the interest in the society was keen, and that all were doing their best to make it the success it deserved to be. Nest feather shows were the chief business. The members soon had all special rules, along with the various classes, passed and dealt with in a quick, businesslike way. The chairman read out the splendid list of specials, including two very choice engraved medals and some useful money prizes, which will soon make all anxious to pay the strictest attention to their young stock. The splendid showroom adjoining the hotel is already at our service. The treasurer, Mr. T. Leckie, presented 5s. for competition in the novice section—a section that has never had better attention in the Midlands. By the way the novices are going along with their breeding we should have a grand entry. There is yet time for the intending member to join and take part in the first show on June 28th: all names should be sent to the secretary before next meeting, June 14th, and on the same night a most chatty and instructive impromptu debate will be held. It will interest all to know that Mr. Russell will judge at the first show. The last day for entering will be June 26th. Please note: We have included a novel selling class. —J. Sheppard, Sec., 9, St. Oswalds-road, Small Heath.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting held May 4th, Wentworth Cafe, Pinstone Street, Mr. T. Flemming (president) in chair. The business of the nest feather show, to be held Wycliffe Hall, July 8th, was proceeded with. Members will see we are having an extended classification, and by doing so we are giving everyone a chance. The following are the number of classes: Canary, champion classes, Yorks. 6, Nor. 6, Crests 3, novice classes the same as champion; Mule, any variety, selling classes 2, British Harbill 10, Softbills 2, for. 2. Members will receive schedules with full classification at June meeting. Also decided to have points specials as in previous years, to be won by the three highest birds at next feather and December shows, the society to add £4 to same, £1 each to the four sections, viz., Yorks., Nor., Crest, and British. Mr. J. C. Farrar has kindly promised two medals for most points novice Yorks. and Nor. over both shows. Messrs. Flemming, Kelley, Tomlinson, Bradshaw, Crooke and Fletcher also promised specials for next feather show. The ramble has been fixed for June 17th to Cordwell Valley. Time of starting and other arrangements to be made next meeting. The secretary was instructed to send a message of condolence to Mrs. Bradwell on the death of her husband, a late member of our society. Messrs. Wilkinson and Elliott, F. Bainbridge, and W. Gatick were elected new members. Next meeting, "Breeding-room Difficulties: Questions by ballot and talks on same."—J. Woolhouse, Assist. Sec.

GLASGOW WEST END C.B.S.

Meeting held Clarendon Hall, May 12, Mr. H. Jamieson presiding over a fair attendance. Two new members were enrolled, Messrs. G. Young and J. White. The classification for the F.F. show and annual members' show recommended by the Committee came up for consideration and approval. The F.F. show classes were adopted as recommended. Classes for annual members' show were also gone over, and a large number added to those recommended. The meeting being now over, the members were entertained to a most interesting and instructive lecture by Mr. J. Young (Rutherglen), whose abilities as a judge, breeder, and exhibitor, are well known all over Scotland. In his opening remarks he dwelt on what had been said and written to advance the breeding of these fascinating and valuable birds—the Crest and Crest-bred. He advised anyone taking up this branch of the Fancy to be sure and procure the best blood they could afford, and also to carefully study their birds, seeing that they were properly matched. He also advocates line breeding, but not too close, however, as this has a tendency to weaken the young from such pairing; but the one and all-important point was to know the stock one was working with—Crest to Crest-bred and vice versa; after large and small Crests and those with fine, leafy texture extending well over the beak; also the causes of blindness in Crests, which was so discouraging to young recruits in this branch of the Fancy. After several questions had been asked and very ably answered, Mr. Young was accorded a very hearty vote of thanks for his kindness; and a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman brought a very pleasant hour to a close.—W. Proudfoot, Sec. and Treasurer.

PENDLETON AND SALFORD O.S.

Meeting held May 22nd. After the usual business, final arrangements were made for the ramble. It was decided to go by the 9.48 train from London Road (G.C.) to Glossop, where we hope to meet a few friends to show us round the district. We hope to have a good muster of members and friends. All wishing to come will be heartily welcome.—J. Critchley, Sec.

SOUTHEND AND S.C.O.S.

At the general meeting held May 10, we engaged Mr. W. Mundell to decide our awards at the open show. The society's book of rules is now in the printer's hands. It can be had shortly post free for 2½d. from the secretary. Will members please bear in mind that the society cannot be run by the faithful half-dozen? A new secretary requires all the encouragement you can afford him. If you will support him well during the summer season (a sacrifice these light evenings), he will not be found wanting when the work comes round at show time.—Wm. C. Lockwood, Hon. Sec.

ILKESTON AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held May 13th, at Durham Ox Inn, Mr. Mitchell in chair. There was a good attendance. The following resolutions was carried: That we hold our first feather show on June 24th, and that we have 24 classes for same. Mr. E. Fox to officiate. The following members were elected as officers: Mr. J. H. Booth (chairman), Mr. C. H. Martin (vice-chairman), Mr. M. Marriott (treasurer); committee, Messrs. G. E. Shaw, R. Smith, S. Prince, W. Henshaw, J. Martin, S. Keightley, J. H. Mitchell, and Mr. Sittdown. Our committee meeting will be held at 7 o'clock, May 27th, Great Northern Inn.—H. Smith, Hon. Sec.

SOUTH WEST LONDON C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held May 11th, Plough Hotel, Clapham Junction, when Mr. Bray (the secretary of the London Federation of C.B.S.) addressed the meeting on the benefits of belonging to the Federation. A lengthy discussion ensued, several legal points being raised. After Mr. Bray's reply it was proposed by Mr. Gibbons, and seconded by J. Jeffrey, that the society should apply for membership. A vote of thanks to Mr. Bray was proposed and carried. After business, an egg-food making competition took place. Several different ways of making egg-food were shown, one way being quite novel. Mr. Jeffrey was elected judge, and after explaining his reasons, awarded 1st prize to Mr. Gibbons, who had an Osborne biscuit mixture. Mr. McLaughlan took 2nd with a bread (not standard) mixture. Young bird show July 13th. All new members joining next meeting will be entitled to show. Annual sub. only 2s. 6d.—John Jeffrey, Hon. Sec.

LEYTON AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Meeting held Lion and Key Hotel, High Road, May 1, Mr. J. A. Bartlett in chair. Chairman announced that the committee had arranged for new headquarters at the Grange Park Hall, Grange Park Road, and that all future meetings would be held there. The hall is a much better place for shows than at our old headquarters, and taking all things into consideration there is every prospect of the change being very much for the better. Over 30 names were given in for the annual ramble on May 27. Owing to unforeseen circumstances, Mr. C. R. Carr was unable to be present to lecture on Norwich, therefore the chairman called on Mr. A. B. Forse to give us a paper on "Canary Management." This dealt particularly with the breeding season, and was the means of raising a very keen discussion. Many interesting questions were dealt with. The usual vote of thanks to the chairman brought the pleasant evening to a close.—Forse and Son, Hon. Secs.

BANKFOOT AND DIST. C.B.S.

At a special general meeting held May 9th, Mr. J. Taylor (president) in chair, it was decided that the headquarters be transferred to the Red Lion Hotel. Mr. H. B. Wood (the proprietor) has already acted in a most generous manner, and at our first young bird show on June 10th he is giving a very heavy silver and gold medal for the best bird; he has also given us splendid support financially. A really fine room is at our disposal for shows, and a private room will also be set apart for the members on show days and meeting nights. Refreshments will be supplied to members at meetings and shows in private room at lowest prices. With the removal of the headquarters to the very heart of the district a move has been made in the right direction. The society's ramble to Hardcastle Craggs on Sunday, May 21st, promises to be well attended. Fanciers from all societies will receive a hearty welcome to join us. A start will be made from the Red Lion Hotel, at 1 o'clock.—F. Gelder, Sec.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting at headquarters, 60, Paddington Street, on May 8th. In the unavoidable absence of the secretary, Mr. A. W. Curtis filled his place, whilst Mr. W. Shepherd took the chair. Letters were read from Mr. H. E. Tringham, and the secretaries of the London Federation, and N.B.B. and M.C. A schedule of classes numbering fifty-two was drawn up for young bird show on July 1st. The following members gave specials: W. Shepherd, F. Knight, T. Kelly, T. Sayer. The announcement was made that a cricket match would take place against the "Early Birds" C.C. on Saturday next, May 20th, at the Paddington Recreation Ground (off Elgin Avenue, Edgware Road), several members intimating their intention of taking part (two fanciers, a batsman and a bowler, would be gladly welcomed to assist us). A "Cage Bird Staging" competition then took place. The following exhibited: Messrs. W. Francis, W. Page, W. Sanders, S. Turner, W. Cottey, H. W. Dickinson, W. Styles, and H. Brumbridge. The judging was entrusted to that keen and enthusiastic fancier, Mr John Frostick, who placed them as follows: 1st, W. Francis (Whitethroat); 2nd, W. Page (Linnet); 3rd, H. Brumbridge (Yorkshire); vhc, W. Styles (Bullfinch); hc, H. W. Dickinson (Crest); c, S. Turner (Yorkshire). Preceding the final judging, a judging competition took place, when three champions, six amateurs, and nine novices from amongst those present participated. Working the points out under the "Curtis" system, the result was: Champion, J. Pooley, 15 pts.; amateur, E. C. Offord, 14 pts.; Novice, W. Cobb, 15 pts. The above winners, and the first, second, and third in the class, will be presented with medals at next meeting. At the close questions were asked by Messrs. J. Pooley, G. Bryant, W. Page, and J. Chard, which were answered to the great satisfaction of all. A vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Frostick for his judging, and for the masterly exposition of the correct staging of show birds. Mr. Frostick returned thanks, adding that his future services would always be at the members' disposal. A hearty vote of thanks was also accorded the chairman.—V. Wynn, Hon. Sec. (From Notes by A. W. Curtis.)

OPEN NORWICH C.B.A.

Meeting of Committee held May 13th, Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, Mr. R. Halliday in chair. Business transacted: Result of ballot for Committee read, and decided to include all three members who tied for last place. Decided, to have same number of shows (10) and similar competitions as last year. Secretary instructed to notify all defaulting members (from 1910-11) whose arrears are not paid by the end of June, 1911, that they be struck off membership. That the correct Norwich show cage (as adopted) be used at all shows. This rule to be strictly enforced. Tenders for year book invited. Decided, to elect two delegates to represent the O.N.P.C. on Cinderella Club Committee, and that same be Messrs. Simonett and Mitchell. Decided, to hold next meeting July 1st.—O. Mitchell, Hon. Sec.

NATIONAL BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Committee meeting at headquarters, the "Feathers," Great Chapel-street, Westminster, on April 27th. Present: Messrs. J. Rohson (chairman), T. R. Trower, G. Crabb, W. A. Shepherd, G. Mortlock, C. Cooper, W. Page, A. Silver, C. T. Maxwell, C. R. Tyson, A. C. Askew, J. Dewhurst, and J. P. Carr. Minutes of previous meeting read and adopted. Letters were read from Messrs. A. F. Lydon, A. J. Simpson, A. Lickley, A. Morris, W. H. Pyke, G. H. Acton, C. W. Law, also several from medal winners.

Re the club's annual outing, it was decided that the morning party should go by the 9.20 train, and the afternoon party by the 1.37 train from Waterloo to Effingham Junction, and that a hot luncheon and cold meat tea be provided, and that the usual invitation be sent to all London societies. It was thought advisable to postpone the decision of the diploma until the next meeting to give the artists more time to send in their sketches. A vacancy having occurred on the committee, it was proposed and carried that Mr. C. Botting should be elected to fill the vacancy. The new clasification was again discussed and adjourned until next meeting. The following new members were elected: Mr. A. Morris a vice-president; the Hon. Mrs. Bourke, the Rev. A. H. Soames, W. H. Raven, and T. Holmes. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the meeting.—Plumbridge and Carr, Hon. Secs.

ADMIRAL DUNCAN O.S. (Notts.)

We had a fairly good representative meeting of fanciers on May 13. Good business was done. Mr. R. Holmes, who is a most enthusiastic fancier, was elected to the presidency. Mr. J. Wood still remains vice-chairman. Mr. H. Cowpertwait was elected treasurer, and myself as secretary. Only a portion of the committee was elected, as those present were desirous of getting a good sound body of fanciers, the matter being left over till our next meeting (May 27). Mr. J. Cowpertwait is giving a guinea special for most points gained in the Crest and Crestbred section throughout the year (not to include selling classes). Two other valuable specials contributed by several fanciers will be given to the 2nd, and 3rd runners-up. These are independent of the specials given by the society, which run from 30s. downwards. These specials should be an incentive to the Crest fanciers of Nottingham to come to the front and make this season's shows a success. We have two good staunch Crest fanciers in Nottingham in Messrs. R. Rhodes and G. C. Ley, who are doing real good service in supporting the Crest classes throughout the country. And we local Crest fanciers (and there are many in Nottingham) should do our best to help them in their endeavours to place this noble bird in the proud position it once held. This society is open to a ten-mile radius. Our next meeting night is May 27, at 8.30 p.m. Shall be pleased to give any particulars asked for.—J. Cowpertwait, Sec., 22, Edwin Street, Nottingham.

EAST HAM C.B.S.

Our country ramble took place on Sunday, May 14th, when, unfortunately, the rain poured in torrents all day. The secretary appeared at Stratford Station early with the idea of cancelling the arrangements, but the members enthusiastically defied the weather, and the party, numbering fourteen, started for Loughton. There we were met by our guide, Mr. Morris, who very quickly escorted the party to the forest. In spite of the rain an eager search for rare birds and nests was soon made. Thrushes' nests with eggs and young were found in abundance, and some pretty sights were seen that will be long stamped on the memories of the party. Owing to the weather we were unable to use the cameras, otherwise we should have liked to have seen a reproduction of these sights in CAGE BIRDS. About mid-day it was decided to abandon the ramble and make for the "Owl Hotel," the party being very wet outside but very dry inside. Our hostess, Mrs. Langdon, had prepared a good spread, and after a most enjoyable dinner the tables were cleared and songs and speeches were the order of the hour. Miss Langdon and Mr. Adams kindly presided at the piano, and songs were given by members of the party. Great reluctance was shown when the time arrived to commence the return journey. Stratford Station was reached at 7 p.m., everyone having thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The members are asked to turn up in good numbers at our next meeting on May 25th, when our secretary will have a big and very special surprise in store for them.—C. H. Paxman (chairman).

SWANSEA C.B.A.

Meeting held May 9th, Market Coffee Tavern, Mr. J. W. Ford presiding. It was gratifying to see such a large attendance, and the interest taken by members in the business. Fixing date and place for F.F. Show. Several dates were mentioned, and after discussing the pros. and cons., July 1st was fixed on as being most convenient. The selection of hall was left in Secretary's hands. Final arrangements for cup were proceeded with, and after having such a grand response for subscriptions, it was decided to obtain two cups for F.F. Show. One cup will be for best young bird bred by a member, and the other for most points gained by four nominated birds in the British bird section. The two cups cannot be won by the same member at the show. With this splendid inducement it is certain entries will be a record. Election of judge for show: A unanimous vote in favour of Mr. D. A. S. Longden, who kindly accepted. (I am certain all fanciers will be pleased to know that Mr. Longden has been selected as one of the judges for one of the largest shows in London next season). Final table show of the season caused some excitement owing to the small number of points separating the three who were leading, and as there were only two gold-centre medals to be awarded to the two highest in points, the three members brought down as many birds as possible. The judge (Mr. J. H. Ford) having made his awards, the Chairman announced Mr. Phil Jenkins highest with 92 points; Mr. D. Williams second with 50; and Mr. F. Heal third with 40. We made Mr. D. Jeremy (Morriston) a member. Next meeting will be devoted to the classification for next open show, and every member should be present.—S. H. GEORGE, Sec.

The Shows.

STRATFORD & E. LONDON F.S.

April evening show proved a splendid success, entries in all sections totalling 155. Mr. C. H. Cooper judged the cage birds. Mr. J. Reed was awarded certificate for best bird in show for a beautiful Glossy Starling.

PORTMADOC.

Portmadoc annual show held May 15th, in grand weather. The attendance was really good as usual at this event. The cage birds were very few in numbers this time. Some well-known winners were staged. We are sorry to find a decrease in the entries and classes; but not one special was provided for this section. The Norwich, Yorkshires, and Mules were good in quality. The acting chairman is Mr. W. Morris Jones, J.P.; treasurer, Mr. W. Jones, Mr. R. G. Humphreys held the secretarial reins, which he ably handled once more. Mr. J. F. Entwistle (Wakefield) made the awards.

Singing Contests.

CASTLEFORD.

Weekly Linnet contest held headquarters, George and Dragon Hotel, Bridge-street, before a fair company. We had 52 birds to sing for four good prizes. After some good singing the winners were: 1st, W. Dobson; 2nd, J. Kirk; 3rd, T. Piper; 4th, H. Morley. Next week we have an open to all England sing, first pair of birds in the window at 3 o'clock. Anyone desirous of bringing a bird should be at headquarters before 2.45, as we draw then for the hang.—Walter Dobson, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS.

Leeds Linnet F.A. usual quality Linnet singing contest held King's Head, Shannon-street, May 13th, when 27 birds faced the judges, Messrs. T. Summers, W. Naylor, and S. Hardcastle. After very good singing the result was: 1st, D. Clegg; 2nd, T. Stead; 3rd, A. Butler; 4th, W. Bisby. Also May 14th, when 17 birds entered. 1st and 2nd, Stead; 3rd, H. Wigfield. Judges, Messrs. W. Naylor, S. Hardcastle, and J. Naylor. Next week's is the last day to pay up for our Whit Sunday sing.—W. Sissons, Hon. Sec.

Weekly contest held Springhill Tavern, Buslingthorpe Lane, May 13th. Twelve birds were entered. 1st, C. Ward; 2nd and 3rd shared between Thirkell and Sellers. Judges, Messrs. Simmonds and Skidall. These contests are held every Saturday at 3 o'clock. Weekly contest held Skinners Arm, Buslingthorpe Lane, May 14th, when 17 birds were entered. 1, Green; 2, 3, shared between C. Ward and Clegg. Judges, Messrs. C. Biss and J. Simmonds.—J. Lunn, Sec.

DARLINGTON.

Linnet singing contest held Rising Star Inn, May 13, when 32 birds competed. Some very good singing was heard. Result: 1, 2, 3, Pitman; 4, Labourn. Judge, Mr. T. Brown; timekeeper, Mr. J. Cuthbert. We hope Linnet fanciers will attend meeting, May 25, 8 o'c., at above house.—Todd, Sec.

BLACKBURN.

Blackburn quality Linnet S.A. contest for quality held May 13th, at club headquarters, Old Red Lion, Snig Brook. There were 16 birds which competed for three good prizes given by Mr. and Mrs. Morris. 1st, E. Ashton; 2nd, G. Hayhurst; 3rd, J. Astley. Judge, Mr. W. H. Topping; timekeeper, Mr. T. Lomax.—T. Slater, Sec.

LEIGH.

The Globe Inn Linnet Club held an open-to-all-England contest, Victoria Inn, Westleigh, May 13th, when we had a very good entry of 40 birds. The singing for quality was very good indeed, but the time singing was poor. We gave the usual four prizes for each class. Winners—Quality: R. Howcroft 1st, F. Gibbins 2nd, E. Page 3rd, J. Whittle 4th; for time: J. Hampson, 96, 1st; J. W. Jones, 46, 2nd; W. Hampson, 37, 3rd; W. Budsworth, 32, 4th. Judges for quality, Messrs. J. W. Jones, P. O'Neil, F. Gibbins; for time, Messrs. R. Stathan, J. Murphy; timekeeper, Mr. J. Yates; birdman, Mr. J. Whittle. I may say the landlord was so pleased with the result of the contest that he has given us another date, and another after that, if we can make it convenient. I also wish all fanciers to note that we are holding an open-to-all-England Linnet contest for quality and time at headquarters May 27th, when I am hoping to see some fresh faces in Leigh.—J. McAllister, Sec.

GLASSHOUGHTON.

Rock Inn Linnet singing contest held May 14th when 24 of the best bird in the district sang for three good prizes, and some very good singing was heard by a good company. Kirk, 1st; Dobson, 2nd; Piper, 3rd. We are having an open sing at West Riding Hotel, May 21st, when there will be three or four prizes, including a special. I hope all Linnet fanciers will give us a visit.—B. Nelson, Assist. Sec.

WIGAN.

Wigan Linnet Club are holding an open Linnet contest at Weavers' Arms, Scholes, on June 3rd, for time and quality, when prizes to the value of £2 will be given. There will be a special meeting for members at the Weavers' Arms on May 20th, members to meet at 7.30; business important.—A. Parker, Sec.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Quality Linnet singing contest, held Prince Albert Hotel, May 14th, when 27 birds competed for 5 good prizes. Result: 1, Bland; 2, Sellars; 3, shared by Butler and Chippendale. Judges: Messrs. Harry Allen and C. Lorriman.—J. Smith, Hon. Sec.

YORK.

Weekly Linnet singing contest, held St. Lawrence's Working Men's Club, Lawrence Street, May 13th, when 22 birds competed. Some very good singing was heard, with the following results: 1st prize, W. Weaver; 2nd, J. Gurden; 3rd, W. Wilson; 4th, F. Gibson; 5th, F. Littlewood. Mr. Jackson kindly officiated as judge and Mr. Kirby as timekeeper.—J. W. Smith, Sec.

HULL.

Hull L.F.A. held weekly contest headquarters Cartman's Arms, Canning Street, off Brook Street for quality. Three good prizes were given:—1st (tea service), Broadbent; 2nd (copper kettle), Thundercliffe; 3rd (mirror and brushes), Norton. Judges, Messrs. Allen and Thundercliffe. Also contest May 13th, when 26 birds competed. 1st prize, Mr. Fred Allen's champion, simply ran away with the contest; it is indeed a marvellous "musical box"; 2nd prize, Thundercliffe; 3rd, Dearlove; 1st prize "Novice," James. Judges, Messrs Gant and James. It is pleasing to see old fanciers attending this new club once more.—Thundercliffe, Assist. Sec.

SHEFFIELD.

Weekly Linnet singing contest held headquarters Fitzwilliam Hotel, Milford Street, Attercliffe Common, May 13th, when 14 birds entered for 3 special prizes (3 minutes singing), and some good singing was heard. 1, Bisby, 103sec.; 2, Watson, 91sec.; 3, Thompson, 86sec.; Thompson 64sec. and 63sec.; Thorpe 50sec., Cole 40sec. May 14th, 16 birds entered for 3 special prizes (3 minutes' singing): 1, Watson, 79sec.; 2, Robinson, 77sec.; 3, Thompson, 51sec.; Watson, Thompson, 43sec. each. Contests every week. All club members must be financially straight on club books by May 21st, or they will be excluded from all benefits; no money returned.—A. Brown, Sec.

IVESTON,

Fortnightly sing, held on May 13th, when 26 birds faced the judge, Mr. T. Settrey. Barras 1, 2, 3. Next sing May 27th, when £1 will be added to 9d. per bird; 3d. back. Meet at Masons Arms.—W. Atkinson.

DURHAM.

A Linnet contest was held at Mr. J. Todd's, Green Tree Inn, Withington, Durham, when 61 of the best birds in Durham sang. Five divided: Franks, Bill Sunmers (Sunny Brook), D. Martin (Spennymoor), M. Clark (Withington), A. Bayliss (Brandon). Next contest, Mr. J. Todd's, Green Tree Inn, Willington, May 27th, when £2 will be given in prizes.—C. Franks, Sec.

GREAT HOUGHTON.

Gt. Houghton and Dis. Linnet Assoc. contest held Old Hall Inn. Last week in our notes we stated that our next open contest time singing for Linnets would be held Whit Monday. We are now unable, owing to later developments, to have it on that date. So it will be held on Whit Sunday; birds hung 12.45 prompt for special prize, and entry fees at 1s. per bird. After the contest the same day Mr. B. Midgely will give an address, in which he will point out the views held by our club in connection with the purchasing of a cup, etc. We hope to have many visitors, at 7 o'clock p.m., Sunday, June 5. Also on Sunday, May 28, we are having an open-to-all-England contest for Larks, as we want to give all fanciers a chance. Particulars can be had from —Jas. Halpine, Sec.

MANCHESTER.

Manchester and Salford Linnet Club first open contest held Boat House Hotel, Oldfield Road, Salford, when 45 birds sang for good prizes, contest singers coming from all parts; and some splendid singing was heard by a large number of visitors. The judge's decision gave every satisfaction. Winners: For quality: 1, W. Barnes (Wigan); 2, W. Topping (Blackburn); 3, C. Randles (Warrington); 4, J. W. Jones (Leigh); 5, B. Jones (Leigh). For time: 1, R. Leyland (Wigan), 155; 2, 3, P. Owen (Tyldesley), 134, 134; 4, F. Hughes (Warrington), 126; 5, W. Ashcroft (Pemberton), 75. Judges for quality were Messrs. W. Barnes, W. Topping, and T. Statham; timekeepers, Messrs. Mawdsley, W. Peat, and R. McFarlane; birdkeeper, Mr. J. McAlister. The special prizes given by Messrs. Kremner, Tib Street, and Mr. Bird, Moss Lane, Hulme, were won by Messrs. B. Jones and W. Ashcroft. The contest was a great surprise, it being the means of bringing fanciers from all the surrounding districts, who intend to make this club a success. Great praise must be given to the officers from the Wigan, Leigh, Blackburn, and Warrington Clubs who did their best to make contest a success. Anyone wishing to join this club kindly send names to me—B. Wharton, 18, Mitton Street, Stanley Grove, Longsight, Manchester.

We are holding our annual nest feather show on July 22 and 23 at our headquarters, Railway Hotel, writes Mr. R. Charleson, Hon. Sec of the Leigh and Dist. C.B.S. We have engaged Mr. Chas. Houlton, of St. Helens, to judge. We are also having an open Linnet class, house-moulted or field-moulted. I hope we shall have a good entry.

Having so many applications through your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, for cage lists, I am compelled to get 20,000 new illustrated lists, which are now in the hands of the printers, writes Mr. R. Hogg (Middlesbrough). Would fanciers who have applied for same lately note that these will be forwarded in the course of about fourteen days?

I call fanciers' attention to the musical treat our assistant secretary, Mr. H. W. Tomsett, has arranged to take place at the Reindeer Hotel on May 22nd, at 8 p.m., on behalf of the funds of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S., writes Mr. W. Hodson, sec. of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. A whole host of first-class artistes have been engaged. Members and friends intending to be there are asked to be early. The room only holds about 150, and last year at the concert was crowded right out. Particulars can be had from Mr. Tomsett, 34, Endwell-road, Brockley, or from myself at 39, Friern Road, East Dulwich.

Mr. F. Bate (Stoke) will judge our F.F. show on June 24, and Mr. J. H. Roe our open show on October 7, 1911, write Messrs. Hallam and Lovatt, the hon. secs. of the Longton and Dis. C.B.S.

We are holding our first feather show on June 17, and have engaged Mr. T. Harrison (Altrincham) to judge, writes Mr. J. Spencer, Hon. Sec. of the Ardwick and Dist. C.B.S. The members have arranged to have their annual ramble to Knutsford on May 21 (Sunday). We invite any local fancier to join us to meet the 2 o'c. train, Central Station (Manchester).

We have been successful in securing the following gentlemen to judge at our annual show on October 14, writes Mr. R. Whitton, Sec. of the Broughty Ferry C.B.S.: For Scotch Fancies, Messrs. D. Black (Govan) and W. Rodger (Colinton); for Cresis and Norwich, Mr W. Griffiths (Glasgow); for Border Fancies, Mr. J. Smillie (Ricarton); and for British and Foreign birds, Mr. R. V. Raine (Cathcart).

Mr. T. Smith, writing on the 15th inst., states:—The return of membership tickets of the National Scotch Fancy Canary O.A. up to date is satisfactory: but a large number of gentlemen to whom tickets were sent have yet to account for them. The executive highly appreciate the support accorded so heartily, and remind your wide circle of readers that the membership closes on Wednesday, May 31.

All members and friends of the Brighton C.B.A., writes Mr. W. H. Gibb, the Hon. Sec., are invited to join the party for a ramble on Sunday, May 21. Train leaves Brighton (Central) for Newick at 8.35 a.m. We ramble from Newick through Charley and district to Lewes, returning at about 5.30 from Lewes. The total fare is 1s. 11½d. We meet under the clock at 8.20 a.m. sharp.

OBITUARY.

I am very sorry to have to inform you, writes Mr. W. Proodfoot, Secy. and Treas. of the Glasgow West End C.B.C., of a death in the family of one of our esteemed and respected members, Mr. C. Campbell. His little boy died on May 10 after a long and very serious illness. The sympathy of the office bearers and members of the club goes out to Mr. and Mrs. Campbell.

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. Fred Fox, Secretary East Ham C.B.S., that I inform you of the sad loss sustained by our worthy member Mr. C. H. Gibbs, of Forest Gate, whose wife passed away after giving birth to their first child on May 12. I conveyed the sad news to our members present at the ramble on Saturday, and in a few moments enough money was subscribed to enable a wreath to be sent from the society. I am sure all fanciers will join us in sympathy with Mr. Gibbs in his terrible loss, and himself only just recovered from a severe illness.

Will exhibitors and all concerned kindly note, writes Mr. W. C. Lockwood, Hon. Sec. Southend and Southern Counties O.S., that we have engaged Mr. W. Mundell (Bradford) to judge the Canaries, and Mr. J. Dewhurst (London) for the British and Foreign birds at our open show on November 8 and 9. With these noted judges we look for a bumping entry, and are confident of the support of all fanciers.

We have received from Messrs. Jas. Dean and Son, (Aviary Glass Works, 24, 34, Hook Street, Liverpool), an illustrated price list of the glass aviary and bird cage furniture (drinkers, egg drawers, etc.), aquariums, fish globes, and the like, supplied by them. The goods retailed by this firm are most reliable, and represent the best workmanship. A speciality to which they draw attention are illumination candle lamps for the Coronation, garden parties, etc. Readers should write for one of these price lists.

The annual ramble of the Hull C.B.S. is fixed for Saturday, May 27, writes Mr. Ernest R. Ridley, the Hon. Sec. The place to be visited is Barton-on-Humber and district. Members and friends, of whom it is hoped we shall see a goodly number, are requested to meet at the Corporation Pier at 1.20 p.m., to proceed by the 1.30 boat. Special arrangements have been made with the Great Central Railway Co. for members and friends to travel at the reduced fare of 1s. return, each person to take his own ticket. Tea will be provided at the Red Lion Hotel, Barton, at 6.30 p.m. I hope every member will make a special effort to go.

Fanciers at the Coronation.

Those fanciers who are desirous of viewing the CORONATION PROCESSIONS will find that a splendid view can be obtained from the windows of "Cage Birds" Offices.

Seats are offered at from 1½ guineas.

Apply to The Manager, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

The Leyton C.B.A. extend a hearty welcome to any fanciers who care to join them on their ramble on May 27. We shall be going over entirely new ground this year, with Mr. J. S. Clarke, as usual, acting as guide. The party will assemble at Theydon Bois Station. The train leaves Liverpool Street at 2.8. Stratford 2.23, Leyton 2.26, Leytonstone 2.30: change at Woodford for train from Fenchurch Street 2.12, Stratford 2.30, Leyton 2.33, Leytonstone 2.37, Woodford 2.48, arriving at Theydon Bois 3.7. A start will be made directly after the arrival of the 3.7 at Theydon Bois. The party will then make their way to the Owl (studying bird life, of course, on the way), where a substantial meat tea will be served.—FORSE AND SON, Hon. Secs.

London Federation of C.B.S.

The next meeting of the council of the London Federation of C.B. Societies will be held at the Feathers Hotel, Westminster, May 26, at 7.45 p.m., writes Mr. James Bray, the Hon. Sec.

Petition re Bird Laws.

Kindly ask your readers, writes Mr. T. R. Trower, to return to me, at 442, Caledonian Road, London, N., all signatures to the "petition to the Home Secretary re Wild Bird Laws" not later than first post Monday, May 22 next.

Green Canary Association.

Societies are requested to make application for the Green Canary Association's patronage as early as possible. The classification is four Yorkshires, four Norwich, and four Borders (greens), and either all or part can be applied for, same as last year.—Geo. Green, hon. sec., 39, Lord Nelson Street, Liverpool.

Open Norwich P.C.

The committee of the Open Norwich Plainhead Club invites applications from societies desirous of their patronage for season 1911-12. All applications to be handed in to Secretary not later than June 30, 1911.—Mr. O. MITCHELL, Hon. Sec., 13, Lodge Terrace, Bowling, Bradford.

Fanciers at Cricket.

Given fine weather, metropolitan fanciers have the opportunity of spending an enjoyable afternoon this Saturday, May 20, watching the City and Suburban A.C.B. play the Early Birds C.C. at cricket. This is always a pleasant and thoroughly sporting match, and is fought out on the Paddington Recreation Ground, Maida Vale, W. (just off Elgin Avenue, Edgware Road). Motor buses pass the avenue. Commence at three o'clock; teas can be obtained in the pavilion on the ground.

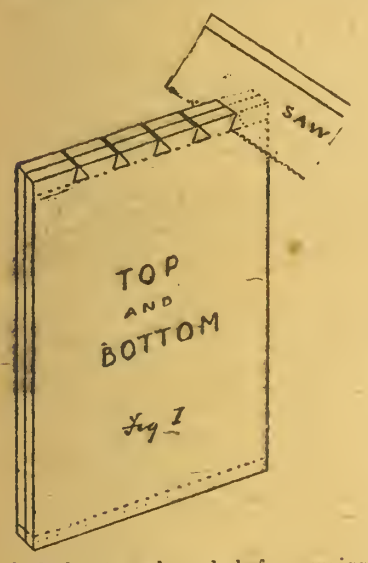
Midland Counties Y.C.C.

The annual general meeting of the Midland Counties Yorkshire Canary Club will be held at the Crown Hotel, Station Street, Birmingham, on May 25, at 8 p.m. sharp, when we hope to see a good muster of members. A few of the items on the agenda are: Patronage for 1911; balance-sheet; and purchase of challenge cups. Will any member not being able to attend, and wishing any matter brought before the meeting, please let us know at once?—BECK AND ANDREWS, School House, Rookery Road, Handsworth, Staffs.

A New South American Thrush.

I hear, writes Mr. W. E. Teschemaker, B.A., that a well-known member of the Foreign Bird Club has imported a pair of Thrushes from South America, one of which has been examined by experts at the Museum, and is believed to be new not only to aviculture, but also to ornithology. Another skin is required to finally settle the matter. I sincerely hope the identification will prove correct, for the importer is an aviculturist of the right sort, and will well deserve the distinction, if only for his many plucky attempts to introduce new and interesting species.

A Presentation at Whitburn.



The members and friends of the Whitburn Society met in the Baillie Institute on May 5, and spent a most enjoyable evening, writes Mr. T. Duncan, Secretary, Whitburn C.B.S. A presentation was made to one of our esteemed members, Mr. Robert Calder, who is about to leave this country and take up his abode in South Africa. We are sorry to lose such a valued member, as his services were always freely rendered. Our president, Mr. R. Lambie, made some well-chosen complimentary remarks when handing over to Mr. Calder a beautiful silver cigarette case, fountain pen, and pocket-book, subscribed for by the members and a few friends. Mr. Calder, in a neat little speech, thanked the subscribers for such beautiful gifts. Afterwards songs were rendered by many of the company present, and a most enjoyable evening was brought to a close by singing, "For he's a jolly good fellow." We wish Mr. Calder the best of good fortune.

How to Dovetail a Cage:

A method which ensures perfect joints and the maximum of strength.

. . By . .
J. FREEMAN
(Hull).

I trust this hint on dovetailing will prove of value to readers of CAGE BIRDS. First of all cut the two pieces intended for the top and bottom of the cage exactly one length. Supposing the wood is ⅜-in. thick, mark a gauge line ⅜-in. from each end right round each piece. Put these face to face, and knock two small sprigs in about 2-in. from each end, not to go through. This keeps them from slipping when sawing. See they are both placed flush at each end before sprigging. By this method you can saw the top and bottom together, saving time.

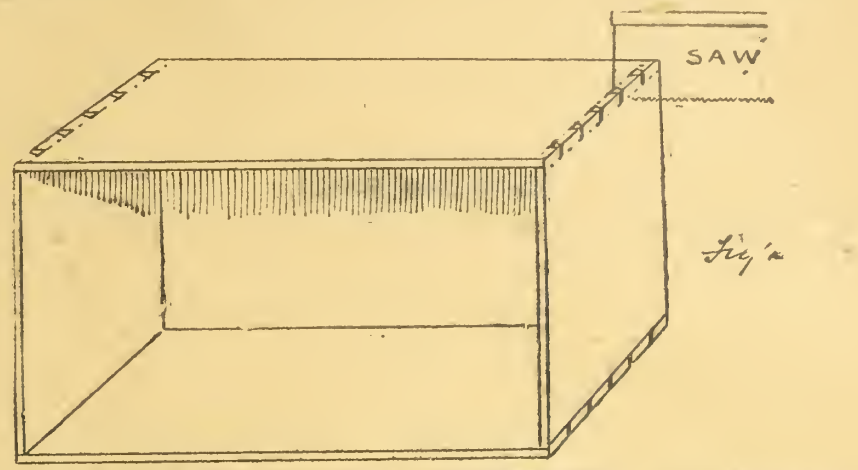
Set the first dovetail ½-in. from each corner, top and bottom the same. Then space the rest out equally between, say, 2-in. apart; also square the lines across the end of the grain as illustrated. You only need mark one of these pieces. By sawing to pencil lines down to gauge line the other one will not be far out. (See Fig. 1.)



The next thing is to make the two pieces intended for the ends of cage. Let these be one length exactly, and put the gauge line round ⅜-in. from each end, the same as before. Now separate the top and bottom pieces and put the four pieces in position. See that one piece does not project beyond the others when marking; see also that they are flush on the front side. You can always take a shaving off the back edges when the cage is glued up. Put a little weight on the top. Then put the saw through the saw calves of same, very steady, just enough to scratch the end pieces, and turn bodily over and do likewise. (See Fig. 2.)

It is best to mark the corners you intend fitting as in sketch to avoid mistakes; mark the vertical lines down to the gauge line; this will be a guide for you to saw straight. It is best to saw these separately, just leaving your marks on the least shade; this allows the cage to knock together nice and tight.

The only tools that are absolutely essential are a tenon saw, a ¼-in. wood chisel, and a hammer. Chisel out the parts that are minus in Figs. 1 and 3, as illustrated. It is now ready for fitting together. The best way is to lay a piece of lath across just clear of the dovetail. This keeps the hammer face from marking the wood. Knock evenly right across until it is down. Make a little thin glue and just glue the pins on the two ends of the cage. This will be sufficient before fixing permanently. Cages made this way are well worth the trouble, and it becomes quite easy with a little practice. I think readers will see in my illustration, Fig. 1, which pieces require cutting out—the 5 small pieces out of the top and bottom, and the 6 spaces in Fig. 3. Do the same with the remaining corners

5: My New Zealand Parrakeets.

No man will ascribe to luck what can with any plausibility be attributed to his own merits. When, therefore, one fine morning I got a wire from an old friend to say that he had five New Zealand Parrakeets to arrive on a given date, I decided at once that the telegram was a fine tribute to my merit. No one can tell how anxiously the days passed before the New Zealanders arrived. I read everything I could about them in books, and I studied their appearance for hours in Green's "Parrots in Captivity," for that is the best picture to the living reality. I was asked several times during the next few days why I was looking so serious? Had anything gone wrong in the parish, or had I lost something? Of course, I couldn't say what I was really studying, because it was the price of the Parrakeets. How was I to raise £7 10s. when I only had got £5? This, as some of my readers will understand, was a very nasty bit of "mental" arithmetic, and would make the most lighthearted person look serious—for a time at any rate.

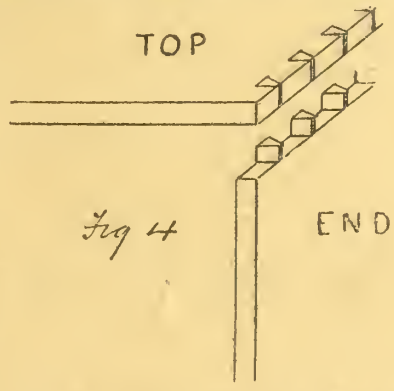
I am not going to tell my readers how the odd fifty shillings was got together; suffice it to say that it arrived somehow before the day it was required.

By the way, when any new and expensive birds are likely to arrive, it is always well to offer a "hush box"; and it is properly offered not by children to their parents, but by husbands to their wives. It is a real box, which you can sit upon or drop without any chance of damage, and contains a guinea's worth of the most lovely mixed sweets. Everyone who goes to a City dinner gets one of these delightful boxes to take home to his wife. Should she begin to scold the poor fellow for sitting upon the box, shall we say, or stumbling upstairs, he has only to say, "Hush, my dear," as he gives her the box. "Hush" is an easy word to pronounce, and madam, as she takes the box, finds it easier to obey her husband's commands, as she promised she would do. By giving a little present before a new arrival, I generally manage to get them safely landed without any unpleasant and too searching enquiries as to what I have paid for them. In getting a new pair of birds you should never talk too loudly about their rareness, as after a time people put two and two together and connect rarity and high prices together. This is distinctly unpleasant.

Jumping and Scratching.

A few days later I got another wire saying that the steamer was in, and that I might expect the Parrakeets the following morning. They came about 10 o'clock in a box with a gauze front, through which they could see and be seen, but could get no draught, but at the same time an abundance of fresh air. It struck me as a very natural and useful combination, what the conventionally unconventional Yankee of the last generation would have called "darned neat and appropriate."

What struck me at once was their peculiar gait. It was quite unlike that of any other Parrakeet I was familiar with. They moved about the floor in a series of short jumps, and they turned over the sand in search of titbits very much like the common or garden hen.



On examining them carefully I was delighted to find that I had three cocks and two hens. The hens were easy to tell by their smaller size, finer look and more sober colouring. I was sitting reading on a box in the aviary next day, as I often do, when I looked up in sudden astonishment, as I heard a very small but distinct bleat. It might have been a fairy goat. As I am not Mr. Holmes Pegler, I do not keep goats, and I did not see how a goat could have got into the aviary unknown to me. I looked about and listened carefully, and all at once I understood that the bleat had come from one of my New Zealanders and then I tumbled to it that this was their call note.

The plumage is very soft and of a rather dark shade of green, while the forehead and cheeks are bright crimson. On each side of the rump there is a little patch of red. The flights are blue, and the beak is horn-coloured inclining to white at the tip. The eyes are a beautiful ruby, which gives the birds a rather evil look, but completely belies their nature, as they are the most sweet tempered things and would not hurt a healthy bluebottle.

A Horrid Fact.

New Zealanders are very very rare. It is I should say, fifteen years since I had mine, so that my readers are not at all likely to get any. I do not say this by way of discouragement, but simply state it as a "demmd horrid fact,' as Mr. Mantalini would have said.

I put my new arrivals into two separate compartments of one of my Parrakeet aviaries

—a pair in each—and caged the odd gentleman as a reserve in case of any casualties, and then awaited developments. I had some hollow logs rigged up near the roof, and away from mice, which I felt would appeal to the heart of any self-respecting New Zealand Parrakeet. They soon began to explore their new home, running over the wire like mice. They spent a lot of time on the floor, passing about with queer little jumps, and scratching up the soil continually.

For all Australian Parrakeets it is necessary to provide either a small lawn or a daily supply of grass. Lawns are not very successful, as wire netting and grass is not compatible, as the constant drips kill the grass and the Parrakeets complete the work of destruction, and the mice loyally help them. I have accordingly abandoned the attempt to keep a small grass plot. It is all right in theory or pictures, but not in actuality and I feed on a bundle of flowering grass each morning, or, failing this, a bunch of groundsel.

If there are young about, green food is absolutely essential, as all Parrakeets feed almost entirely on it; at any rate, for the first part of the time.

For food, I supplied them with white millet and the best Spanish canary seed, so that they are very simple feeders. New Zealand Parrakeets are very free breeders, and I should say that almost all who have been lucky enough to obtain them have been successful in rearing. I should say that they come next to Budgerigars as free breeders.

The eggs, like those of all Parrakeets, are white and rather big for the size of the birds, and very round in shape, and the clutch often runs to six, so that if only anyone can get a healthy pair to breed, they are a very profitable investment, as they will readily sell at £5 a pair like hot cakes, as we say up in Galashiels. They are the best of feeders, and generally bring up every bird hatched.

I find it best to cage up the youngsters as soon as you see they are able to feed themselves, as otherwise they worry the old birds, follow them into the log, and spoil the second brood. They are perfectly harmless, and may be trusted freely with small Finches; but I should never put them with other Parrakeets, as they would put up with any amount of bullying without trying to retaliate.

Not Exactly Musical.

I should not say that New Zealand Parrakeets are musical. They have pleasant voices, but when I hear several of them tuning up together, it always sets me thinking of a passage in Dickens, which speaks of a chorus "in which every man put in the tune he knew best and sang it to his own satisfaction." Everybody has a big fault—a sort of standing characteristic, a piece de resistance for their friends to cut at—and in general they cut and come again. Indiscretion is mine. I thought that seven New Zealand Parrakeets would live for ever, or, at any rate, another season I could, I argued, well afford to part with one pair and the odd cock, and besides, I was so hard up and I wanted money for other sorts. I let them go, therefore.

What happened I will tell you a little later on. I got a very nice little cheque, which I soon melted into other sorts, and, like the poor grasshopper, I felt quite merry, as I thought it would always be summer.

As I look back, I am persuaded it is better to remember time in the same light as the Queen of Spain's legs, facts which certainly existed, but the less said about them the better. It causes me, as Bishop Wilberforce once said, to want to lie down on my stomach and howl.

Seeing Both Sides.

Before another spring came round the man with the scythe had cut short the life of my poor little New Zealand hen, and the cock had to remain a disconsolate widower, for, try as I could, and advertise as I might, I got no offers of a hen. If there were any (I hope there were not) they were not offered to me. I like to try to see both sides of the question like my chimney sweep, who, when a Primrose Dame came to see him on behalf of the Conservative candidate, sometimes agreed with the 'Onse of Commons and sometimes with the 'Onse of Lords. His birth and sympathies naturally inclined him towards his own class, the Commons, but then he knew and respected and swept the chimneys of the local Backwoodsman, a worthy Norman and regular Churchgoer, who went red and swore at you on the smallest provocation, but was the best of good fellows and never bore malice.

Well, as I was saying, I like to try and see both sides of a question. I did in this case, only somehow there didn't seem to be two sides. If a man had a hen New Zealander he ought not to want to keep it. I wanted it, therefore I ought to have it. I was willing to pay a good price, what more could a reasonable man want? I suppose there was another side. At any rate, I got no offers, and so I had to give up. Still, one can always find a use for superfluities. Master Mobbs' double-bladed knife with a corkscrew in it was sent by his stepmother to the Missionaries; so an inconvenient or superfluous article can always be utilised as a wedding present or a Christmas gift. Master New Zealander was so employed. I gave him away and thereby gained to myself much credit for generosity. It ought to have reminded the recipient of the story told of Bishop Wilberforce, who said, after meeting with a brother bishop, that he had often heard of the milk of human kindness, but never hither to had he met the cow!

- The Linnet: -

Its preparation, legitimate and otherwise, for the Show Bench.

. . By . .
J. NICHOLSON
(Skipton).

How the Linnet is stained and faked for the Show Bench was exposed by Mr. J. Nicholson, of Skipton, before the Leeds C.B.S. on May 6th. Amongst the visitors present were Mr. H. W. Battye (Huddersfield), Mr. H. J. Chittenden (Bradford), and Mr. J. Overend ("Old Jim") (Ravensthorpe), one of the oldest exhibitors in England.—W. A. Wilson, Hon. Sec.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: The Linnet has been my favourite cage bird since I was a boy, and I may say I have never been without some specimens.

Where to Find the Linnets.

Where there are any whin bushes in waste land or moor there are sure to be some Linnets' nests. If you go out in the country in the latter part of April or even in May, and you see any of these bushes, get nicely out of sight and you will not have long to wait before you will see the male bird come on to the highest branch: and if ever you heard a lovely song it would be then. After they get their young ones up they invariably go to the cornfields, and as the Linnet is a bird that is drawn by the call of another the birds naturally collect in large flocks.

Little do they think they are called Sparrows by the farmers, who shoot them down in scores. There is no doubt about it; they go to the corn when it is in stacks to get the wild seeds, and the farmer, who knows nothing about these lovely birds, thinks they are eating his corn, and shoots them down, and the worst part of it is that a number of the birds are not killed outright, their wings being broken, so they are left to die. I often wonder why the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is not on the look-out for things of this kind, instead of watching a poor working man, who goes out to catch the birds in winter to sell in order to get some bread for his children.

Mind you, this is no fairy tale. I have a man in my mind's eye who three winters ago, being in the building trade, could get no work owing to the weather; he went out for the purpose of catching a few Linnets. He was caught in the act, and summoned, and although he pleaded poverty (which was quite true), he was fined £1, all his birds let go, and his nets burnt. Gentlemen, my opinion is that there is more cruelty in leaving birds with their wings broken than in keeping them in cages.

To get back, now, to our subject. After the corn is gathered up the Linnets will stay for some weeks in the same fields, and their move will be to the lowest land where there are some seed fields, and you will find them there right away into the winter. And this is the place to go to if you want to catch them.

Catching and Caging.

My method of catching is this: First get leave of the farmer to catch them and to cut the long twigs of the hedge-top, thorn hedge preferred. I get some hard rushes six inches long, and dry them well; then I lime them half way. You can stick the other end on the thorns just slanting. You will get as many Linnets as you want in about an hour if you take with you two good Linnets, and if possible a Linnet Mule having a Linnet's song. If your birds are fit, you will catch plenty. By catching them yourself you have the pick, and a better chance of getting a good bird.

The next thing is the caging. I put mine in a large flat cage, several together, and put them in a very quiet place. I give them plenty of seed everywhere, and water where they can see it. It is a very good plan to have a large bottle of water wrong side up and a little hole in the cork so that it will drop into their drinking glasses. The birds are then more likely to see the water. This is a very important item, as several birds will die otherwise through not being able to see and find the water.

After I have had them in a large cage I pick out the best and put them in a small hop cage. Do I hear someone say this is cruel? I think it is not cruel, as they cannot knock themselves about the same as in a large cage. I always keep them in a nice quiet corner, where they can see people passing them, and I spray them twice a week if possible, as spraying helps to tame them, and you want to get them nice and tame before they commence moulting.

When my Linnets start in the moult I transfer them to a stock cage.

We come now to the time when we will have to look around to see which is the likely show bird. For a start you want the largest one, with a large head and bold eye, good position and carriage, with plenty of markings. I like the markings or pencillings to be small and plentiful — not those thick streaks straight down which some have. Then there is the colour, which must be a good nutty brown. But how often do we see it stated in the reports, "beaten in colour to-day," and the last time the same birds met the colour was not there?

The "Colouring Business."

You may think I'm a bit sore on this colour business, but I can assure you I am not. But I have seen birds, yes, and good specimens of Linnets, which have had to stand down for this colour trick. They will tell you, "You do not know how to feed your birds." Others will say, "I colour feed my Linnets." I have known them to be colour fed in one week. Another fancier will say, "You want to get the wild seeds." I have come here this evening to give you an insight into this colour business.

You will have to go to the chemist's shop and buy 3d. worth of brown seal dye, which is enough to stain all the show Linnets in Yorkshire. Some fanciers cover the white of the wings with a shield; others put vaseline on. This dye cannot possibly be got out of the feathers by any vegetable or chemical acid. The unnatural colour that I have seen on some of the birds on the show bench has been put on with this brown seal dye.

My method of feeding is the ordinary mixed seed, always with plenty of plantain (rats' tails), and shepherd's purse; and if you will give your Linnets plenty of these with good hemp seed you will get plenty of colour; that is, if you select a good coloured bird to start with. It is very gratifying to a fancier when he has spent his spare hours in the country gathering these wild seeds to be rewarded by getting a prize card for his bird. He never once thinks of the labour and expense he has been put to. No; his bird has secured a prize card, and that is sufficient for him. Then in perhaps two weeks' time he sends his bird out to the show again, where he meets the same birds as before, but behold! to his great surprise his bird is cardless—beaten in colour. You can complain to the show officials, but they are helpless in the matter. You next go to the owner of the birds, and he will tell you to get the dye off when he knows full well such a thing is impossible, as up to the present no chemical is known that will take it off.

This colour-"faking" is a great drawback to the Fancy, as not only do we find Linnets "faked," but several others are got up. How often do we find on reading the show reports such expressions as "wonderful bib"? Yes; you can get a bib half an inch long by cutting the top of the throat feathers with a pair of scissors. Then the report on the Yellowhammer — grand "V" on his head. How gentle must the hand be when it shaves the top feathers of the bird's head which leaves the grand "V"! I daresay some of you will have wondered many a time how these birds have been got up, and I hope in the future you will be able to try and stamp this "faking" business out of existence.

Goldfinches and How to Feed Them.

Now just a few remarks on the Goldfinch and Bullfinch. It is a most remarkable thing to me where all these lovely Goldfinches come from that one sees advertised, and how few are to be seen in the fields, especially in Yorkshire. The only place where I have ever seen any great number was in Borrowby, near Thirsk. I know a gentleman who caught 40 one morning in one field, and it was in the last week in October. I would strongly advise everyone of you not to buy any young Goldfinches before that time, and if fanciers would only keep off buying until October or later they would save hundreds of them, because we all know that the Goldfinch is a very late breeder. I have seen them in the nest in August, and you can see them advertised the same month; the result is that you can get them sent you straight from the field where they are caught—some of the poor little things only four or five weeks old.

I feed my Goldfinches on hemp, niger, linseed, canary and teazle. To get them in breeding condition give them plenty of dandelion heads; there is nothing better that I know of. When the dandelion is out of season get hardheads, then the large thistle, best known by the name of Scotch thistle. I gather a quantity of these for the winter, and if you have plenty of these by you there will be no fear of your losing any newly caught birds.

Some Experiences of Thirty Years' Breeding.

By W. HAYSOM (Southampton).

I have been a breeder of Crests and Crestbreds for over thirty years, and have been awarded hundreds of prizes at many leading shows, including medals and cups, etc., for best bird in show. As far as I can gather there are not many breeders of Crests in the South. I visited a room of a lady fancier; she has a few nice Plainheads, also a few promising Crests and Crest-breds, and if they go on well, with a good moult, they should be heard of later on.

A Remarkably Good Feeder.

Crests and Crest-breds are my particular fancy, although I breed a few Norwich plainheads, and a few Goldfinch and Canary Mules, and oftentimes have had to sacrifice the latter for the hens to bring off the young of the Crests, for I find very often they are rather lazy feeders, and any young left to them are almost sure to die. But sometimes I find they rear the young well. I have a fine Crest-bred hen that is a remarkably good feeder, and will sit and feed as you look at her, and brings them up beautifully clean, till they are about four weeks old; then she will start to pluck them, and nothing will stop her but giving her some white, frayed-out swansdown and putting the young ones in a nursery cage and hanging them outside. But the bars of the cage must be close, so that she cannot get her head in between to get at them.

I breed my birds in cages in a room facing south, all the cages facing one way, so that the birds cannot see each other, as I find that if they do they are over-anxious about their young, and often leave their nests, and worry about the cage. Always let the hen's mate remain in sight of her should you separate them when sitting, having a wire partition in the breeding cage.

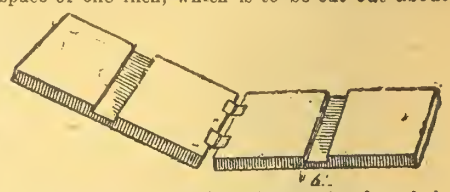
When the young are hatched feed them on hard boiled egg, white and yolk chopped fine, mixed with Osborne biscuit; a little green-food such as dandelion leaves or watercress and scalded German rape.

A Clear body dark Crest preferred.

Now, with regard to Crests, I like a clear body dark Crest. I think they are very pretty, and so are the even-marked wings. But I do not despise the all-green birds; as a rule they are larger and produce a larger crest, especially if bred from two greens. I have found best results from a Crested cock with a big heavy crest, and a good round-headed Crest-bred hen with not too much lash, but good length and thick feather on head. I find that a hen with plenty of lashing is likely to breed birds with splits and twists in crest, and oftentimes some of the feathers will grow twisted in the stubs, so that the birds will not make show specimens, but they make good birds for the breeding cage.

If a fancier should be going in for Crests, the best way would be to purchase a pair of birds from some reliable breeder. There is no need to give a fancy price if the blood is there, but you must have a good strain, or you will never breed a show specimen, and only disappointment follows. Place yourself in a good breeder's hands, or go to shows and see for yourself, and should you see a decent bird at a reasonable price, and can find out that the breeder is reliable, have it. Do not trouble about shapely crests, if plenty of broad long feather is on the skull. I like a nice round daisy-shape crest, not put on as if pasted on, but to be a lively Crest that you can see move when you are looking at it, long in feather and broad, well down to end of beak, and all to find its position without any grooming, with a nice neat little centre.

I also like a Crest-bred with small beak, round head, broad feather, thick body, and good length of feather all over, to feel silky in your hand, not harsh. I think that if you commence with such a pair, with a bit of good luck in bringing up the young, there will be no doubt about breeding a good bird or two, but do not expect all show birds. Some are sure to turn out wasters. But don't part with any until after the moult; then you can see what they are—they alter so much.



Keep them warm when moulting, and free from draught, but do not coddle them in heated rooms; you will then have them much stronger, healthier, and in better condition for show. Feed on plain Canary seed (best Spanish) every day, a little crushed hemp and scalded German rape twice a week, with a little crushed Osborne biscuit just damped with milk to make it crumbly moist, every other day. Then I have no doubt they will go on satisfactorily.

No. 508.
A Handy Perch Cleaner.

Sent by Mr. W. Dawes, 65, Rhoda Street Nelson, Lancs.

Enclosed is a diagram of a perch cleaner, which will be found to be a very handy thing for those keeping a lot of birds. Get two pieces of wood six inches long; measure two and a half inches from each end, thus leaving the space of one inch, which is to be cut out about one quarter of an inch. Then cover the whole surface with sand paper. Make both pieces of wood alike. Then fasten together at one end with a small pair of hinges, having at the other end a small catch so as to grip the two together. This is my own idea, and I find it a very useful thing which can be made for about threepence.—Walter Dawes.

No. 509.
A Bottle-filling Device.

Sent by Mr. A. Porter, 18, Brazil Street Hull.

It is frequently necessary to pour liquids from a shallow vessel into a bottle, and if there is no funnel handy this proves a tedious and messy job. To overcome the difficulty, a small piece of cane or wire can be placed in the bottle, and the liquid poured down, when it will enter the bottle without a single drop being spilt.—A. Porter.

The Young Naturalist.

*A Friendly Canary.

We have a Canary and a Goldfinch. We put them in a cage. One day the Goldfinch broke its leg and could not get at the seed. The Canary, seeing its mate was hungry, took it some seed in its beak, and has continued to do so.—Percy Arnold Thackray (age 8 years), 82, St. Augustine's Terrace, Halifax, Yorkshire.

*Goldie Prefers His Cage.

My father has a Goldfinch which is very tame. Recently it was hung outside about half-past six in the morning, and was singing well for about an hour, when it became very quiet. My father went to the door, and found the cage door wide open and the bird gone. He saw it in a hedge and went to it; it flew across the fields about half a mile away. So he gave it up as lost. He left the cage hanging outside, however, and went for a walk. When he came back about four in the afternoon the bird had come back and had gone in the cage.—George Stone, age 8, Gorsty Bank, Knutton, Staffs.

The "Dead" Owl.

A short time ago a friend of mine caught a fine barn Owl and gave it to me. For three days he was very sulky, sitting in the darkest corner of the cage, and only eating the pieces of meat at night-time. Upon the fourth morning of his imprisonment, on going to look at him, I was very sorry to find him lying apparently dead. Taking, as I thought, his lifeless body from the cage, I commenced to dig his grave, when all of a sudden, and like a shot, the "dead" Owl rose into the air, and with a merry "tee-whit," which seemed to mean, "Ever been had?" my artful pet disappeared.—J. F. Huckvale, age 15, 12, Henley Stret, Stratford-on-Avon.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red also.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE

Support from all Quarters. A Fine Start. Keep it Going, Readers.

Notes by the Secretary.

One of the Old Brigade.

It is with very great pleasure that I announce that my old friend, Mr. S. Cook, has joined our ranks. To some of the younger generation his name will scarcely be known, but those who, like myself, are of an older growth, will be glad to hear that our esteemed fellow-fancier is well and hearty, and still takes a keen interest in the delightful hobby of bird-keeping. A quarter of a century ago, when bird lovers had to find out for themselves, without the aid of such a paper as CAGE BIRDS, the proper way to feed and keep their birds, friend "Sam," as he has for many years been called by those of the older school, was well to the front as an exhibitor of British birds. I believe he was the first ever to exhibit a Tree-creeper, and the doings of his famous hand-reared Redstart of that long ago period are recorded on a silver cup which is one of the most cherished ornaments of his sideboard to-day. When he was appointed for the first time a judge of the British bird section at the Crystal Palace, he gave up exhibiting, and, in association with his life-time friend, Mr. Jos. Hills, of Sudbury, his appointment became a yearly institution at the "Great Glass House," until the two of them retired together, their last appearance as judges being at the "Jubilee" Show of 1909. I am sure that Mr. Cook will be welcomed by young and old as a member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

A Fine Suggestion.

The suggestion of Mr. A. Hollingshead, in his letter published below, that members should get into touch with the keepers of, maybe, only one bird, is one of the best, indeed, the very best which has been made during the first weeks of the existence of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. It is just these bird-keepers we wish to reach. Many of them, although anxious to afford their pets every possible attention with a view to their comfort and happiness, are doing with them things they should not do, keeping them in unsuitable cages, in unsuitable positions, and feeding them on unsuitable food, and they would be grateful for the knowledge which would enable them to obviate all this. Every one of our readers could do something in this direction with a minimum of trouble, and the accumulated advantage would be enormous. I can foresee having my labours multiplied, but this does not dismay me. I can get such help as I wish, and if I have to get a dozen Assistant Secretaries, so much the better. In reply to his second suggestion, something of this kind is already having consideration, and will doubtless be put into effect in due course. It is of course much too early yet to take active steps in the direction indicated, as before CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE is a year old, its present membership list, gratifying as this is, will be many times multiplied, and we shall be devising some means of dividing the country into districts, in order that the many thousands of small bird-keepers who are not members of any association may be properly represented, according to the proportion of their numbers in any locality.

I have again remittances from several correspondents who have sent for badges only and have failed to notice that these are only supplied to members. Will they please send on, in addition, the one shilling membership fee, when the badges applied for, together with membership receipts shall at once be forwarded.

The League Competitions.

I am pleased to see that many members have entered with spirit in the race for our prize of £5 for most introductions before March 11 next, and £3 for second most. These prizes are well worth winning, and the competition promises to be correspondingly keen.

Mr. Peck, of Bexley, whose name I regret was last week incorrectly spelt as Peek, in sending a further list of introductions, says that he soon hopes to introduce a member from Canada. This is showing a proper spirit. It certainly appears very probable that I shall soon be looking out for the Assistant Secretaries mentioned above. I regret there is not space to publish Mr. Peck's letter in full, and scores of other correspondents will please accept the same explanation of the non-appearance of their letters. It is only possible to make a selection, and short extracts. Those whose letters do not appear, must not think their kind wishes and promises of support are not fully appreciated. I should require the whole of the paper to do them proper justice.

Needed 30 Years Ago.

Several correspondents welcome CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE as an organisation that has long been wanted, and one heads his letter "Thirty Years Behind." We shall soon fill up the gap. In many respects the "good old days" do not compare favourably with the times in which we are now living, and, now that the LEAGUE has come to stay, it will not be long before bird-keepers will find that they are able to pursue their hobby free from the unwarranted interference of fanatics with an axe to grind—people who know nothing whatever of the subject against which they are inveighing.

If every individual reader of CAGE BIRDS will follow the lead of the many hundreds who have already become members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE we shall in a very few weeks become an organisation that will give pause to those who would put an end to our hobby. It is the small man who is most helpless, but 50,000 small men, banded together for mutual defence, are "different goods," and our opponents will not be slow to appreciate the fact, and leave us alone. We shall then be free to devote ourselves to the many objects which demand our attention for the betterment of our Fancy. Even though we are left undisturbed, which we shall be, there will be plenty of work, and it will be tackled. First of all, I want to count our members by the many thousands. You can enable me to do this in a week if you choose. The sooner I am able to do so the sooner I shall be free to devote my energies to the carrying-out of the general objects of the LEAGUE, many of which have already been outlined to you.

Don't Delay.

Hasten, therefore, to send along your applications for membership. I need scarcely repeat that the membership fee is the very small sum of one shilling per year, and that the badges are sixpence each. The purchase of the badges is, of course, optional, or may be deferred; but I think no member would like to be without one, so send along your eighteenpence, and you will receive by return post a badge for coat or watchchain, or one in brooch form, if preferred.

MORE VIEWS OF MEMBERS.

Sir,—The LEAGUE will be as valuable to the novice as your paper CAGE BIRDS.

S. F. STONE (Porth, S. Wales).

Sir,—I think we have been in need of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE for many years.

B. TIDY, Hon. Sec., Sittingbourne C.B.S.

Sir,—Thanks for the beautiful badges. We are both very pleased with them.

JEFFRIES and HUSBAND (Richmond, Yorks).

Sir,—I think that in a very short time all CAGE BIRDS readers will be in CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

E. B. FIELD (Bradford).

Sir,—My wife is very pleased to see that she has the honour of being the first lady member enrolled, and joins me in wishing every success to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

C LOCKETT (Dover).

Another Family Party.

Sir,—I am proud to become one of the early members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. I also wish you to enrol my two sons, Clifford (aged 13) and Norman (aged 11). They are true bird-fanciers, and help me a great deal.

W. J. SINGLETON (Wolverhampton).

A Cert 'a'

Sir,—I was pleased to read in Mr. Fulljames's notes in CAGE BIRDS on Saturday that he gave a thought to the ladies. I am now laid aside with two fractured ribs, and I do not know what my birds would have done if I had not had a wife who is a bird-fancier. One very big bird man said to me last week that CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE was a "nap hand."

BERNARD GABBITASS (Mansfield).

The Word "Royal."

Sir,—Am glad we are to have a society powerful enough to thwart the powerful aristocratic and autocratic R.S.P.C.A.

By the way, could we not ultimately get the "R" (Royal) attached to our LEAGUE? Best wishes for the LEAGUE and for its wonderful organ, CAGE BIRDS.

W. P. FINN (Bexhill-on-Sea).

REPLY: All in good time. We are young as yet.

"Catching Pals."

SIR,—I think it would be a good idea if each member wherever he saw a bird in the window of a house called to try to get the owner to become a member of the LEAGUE. By this means it would make the LEAGUE a very powerful association, as they could hardly refuse to join the association for such a modest sum as 1s.; I think that if each member did this in the town where he lives it would be a great success. I also think it would not be a bad idea to publish a list of members' names and addresses each year, in book form, making a charge of 2d. per copy. The profits of the sale could go to increasing the funds of the LEAGUE. Of course, these are only a few suggestions by a modest member, and they can be taken for what they are worth. I wish CAGE BIRDS and CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE every success.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A. PLENTELL.—Glad to enrol you a member, and to hear of your success with your birds. CAGE BIRDS will always be pleased to help you in any difficulty which you may experience.

D. FLOCKHART.—Quite correct. Although not the first member from Midlothian, you are the first from Bonnyrigg. Pleased to welcome you to the League, and to hear of your determination to "catch more than one pal." The more the merrier.

R. HODSON.—The question of establishing local centres is having consideration, and there is no doubt that the idea is good one. Up to the present I have had nearly all my time occupied in the pleasant duty of enrolling members, and sending out badges.

G. STRACHAN.—Thanks for good wishes. CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE has no intention of becoming a governing body, or of investigating alleged cases of borrowing and lending. There is a CAGE BIRD UNION in existence, and the dealing with such cases falls within the province of that body. If the offenders are members of a Cage Bird Association, the committee of that Association would also know how to deal with them. CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE is simply a body of bird-lovers bound together in defence of their hobby of bird-keeping against the mischievous and misguided attacks of shrieking sentimentalists, to enlighten the small bird-keeper as to the proper keeping of his or her pets, and to see that an end is put to a campaign which would not only abolish bird-keeping in its entirety, but would, incidentally, throw out of employment many thousands of workers engaged in allied trades, which trades owe their existence to the universal popularity of our fascinating hobby. There is a very wide scope for our labours without taking over duties which belong to previously existing organisations.

J. FISHER.—Of course your local hon. sec. could send up in one lot the names of all those who wished to become members of the LEAGUE, and could allocate half of the membership fee to a special fund to be spent in prizes for your show. Please see last week's answer to "Hon. Sec."

A. D. WELCH and many others. Thanks for good wishes and promises of support. Sorry it is quite impossible to reply to all individually. See my note, above, as to space.

A. H. C. LEGG.—Sorry, letter crowded out this week.

BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1911 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others. The communications must in every case be accompanied by the sender's name and address.

Around Frome.

Breeding operations around Frome have not been very encouraging up to now, with one exception. This is Mr. W. Dodge, who started with four hens and reared three fives and one three, all of which are on the perches. The three first mentioned are now on six eggs each, the other on four. They are Borders. How is this for a record? C. J. Young, secretary, Frome F.A.

A Grand Start.

I bought two Linnets, and my wife said, Why not get a Canary? Near where I live a dealer had newly opened a shop; so I bought a good Yorkshire Canary off him, and a hen. I got the cock one day and the hen the next, giving 9s. for the former and 2s. 6d. for the hen. I put them both together right away, and fed them on the best Spanish inga seed, cuttlefish, green food (mainly water cress), and hemp crushed. They were together for nearly three weeks, when the hen laid her first egg. I took the egg away and replaced a pot one, when she laid three I put them back again, but was surprised to find that the hen laid two more eggs, making five in all. She hatched all five, which are doing well up to now. The first egg was laid on April 26. She hatched five out on May 12. My birds came off a good stock, from a man who sends birds all over the country. The dealer bought this breeder's stock right out. I have a Goldfinch, two Larks, two Linnets, and a Chaffinch, and all doing well. I gained a great deal of knowledge from your "Nutshell" series of booklets, and I take CAGE BIRDS every week; this has helped me wonderfully.—William Dorrington (Manchester).

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of poper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as spoce permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stomped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so cleorly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned

CANARY QUERIES.

Young Dying.

Lucky Jim.—If you strictly adhere to the system laid down in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and the hens feed well up to the last, and do not "sweat" the young, there is, in my opinion, only one cause of your young dying, which will be found in the quality of the food supplied. And as the losses begin to occur at the time when you will be starting to add hemp to the dict, I strongly suspect this is the cause of the mischief. Examine this seed, and break it open and see the kernel, and if it is not quite sweet and fresh, reject it, and either get a good quality or use none at all, and if there is a large brood of young give a little soaked and well-drained rape instead. But, remember, the latter turns sour very quickly indeed in warm weather. With due attention to this one point, I think your losses will cease. See that the cages are perfectly sweet and clean, the egg-food ditto, and given fresh at least twice a day, and not in too large quantities; and from the fourth day give green food, crisp and fresh, also at least twice a day. As regards your other questions, you should certainly store your seed so that mice cannot get at it. In their visits they frequently contaminate the seed with voidure which is apt to convey very serious disease to birds eating the seed afterwards. The apparently swollen condition of the hen was probably nothing more than her forward condition. You could get pyrethrum powder from any large chemists.

Hen Flagging Feeding.

J. Ivy.—To take your samples of food first, the canary is extremely small, thin, and of poor quality; the rape is a good sample of summer rape; the hemp is stale and rancid, not fit for feeding birds with young, and is probably the chief cause of the trouble with the hen. The egg-food is a spicy condiment containing fenugreek, which may be useful enough for helping hens into condition, but I should not care about it for rearing young. As regards the hen, see that all foods and food vessels are perfectly sweet and pure and fresh, and give moist foods in moderately small quantities at least twice a day. Discard the hemp altogether if you cannot get a better sample; also try to get a better sample of canary, and use fresh eggs and bread crumbs or crushed Osborne biscuits with a little maw seed added, in preference to the food you are using. Do not make it too moist. Be careful that the soaked rape does not become sour. If you have to discontinue giving hemp, give a small piece of bread and milk sprinkled with maw once a day for a time. Give this at mid-day. If you can get freshly-gathered chickweed, groundsel, or lettuce, give this in reasonable quantities fresh three times a day. Keep the cage quite clear of all stale or withered portions of food of all kinds. In the drinking water give a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea for one half of the day for two days. Empty the drinker last thing at night, re-fill, and add the soda, and throw this out next mid-day, and re-fill with fresh, pure water.

A Disappointment.

Amateur.—You do not appear to be feeding correctly, which may account for your losses so far. Try the following method: When the hen begins to sit, give a diet of plain Canary seed only, with a pinch of summer rape about every second day, and once a week just a crumb of sponge cake or a little crushed plain biscuit, given dry. Offer the hen a bath for a few minutes daily from the twelfth day of incubation, and if she appears to flag in feeding any time after the young are hatched, dissolve a little common salt in the bathing water for a few days, and also add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea to the drinking water for one-half of each day for a day or two. When young are hatched, give a little yolk of egg quite fresh for the first few hours. Next day give half egg and half powdered biscuit or stale bread crumbs, and gradually increase the proportion of the latter to two parts to one part of egg, and add a sprinkling of maw seed to it. Do not make food very moist. There is sufficient moisture in the egg to bring the whole to the proper consisteucy when well stirred together. Give this in small quantities, fresh at least twice a day—three times would be better in hot weather—and wash out vessel each time. On the second or third day begin to give a little fresh, crisp chickweed, lettuce, groundsel, or watercress fresh twice or three times daily. Remove all stale portions when giving fresh. In about a week you may add a little soaked rape in a separate vessel, but see that it does not become sour, and a few days later begin to give a little cracked hemp, and see that this is quite sound and sweet. Keep the water supply pure and fresh.

Management of Young.

Query.—(1) At three weeks old the young will be quite old enough to go into a nursery for a short time before being placed quite "on their own." This you should hang on the open doorway of the breeder so that the cock may still go on feeding the young if necessary, as will probably be the case for some days. But you must also give a little of the ordinary egg food supplied to the parents in a vessel in the nursery cage and sprinkle it with a little maw. In another vessel, or the seed box, if one is in cage, give a supply of Canary seed and sprinkle a little summer rape on top, and each day give a little cracked hemp—see that this is quite sound. When you find the young cracking the Canary fairly freely, you may remove them to a cage by themselves for a few days and continue the same feeding, but also give water on the cage at this stage. A more liberal supply of food will also be necessary. Keep the egg food rather on the dry side, and limit the greenstuff for a few days. When they seem quite strong on the perches and are cracking seed well, you may transfer them to a flight. Then give a staple of plain Canary seed, gradually withdraw the egg food, and give a little two or three times a week only. On two other days give a little of a mixture of summer rape, hemp, broken groats, and crushed dry biscuit, occasionally substituting a little bread and milk sprinkled with maw for the egg food. Stop cracking the bemp as soon as you find the birds able to manage it themselves. (2) You would probably do much better to remove the cock whilst the hen is sitting as before, as the hen may not go to nest again by the time the next brood are out of the nest, and if you decide to do this you should place him and the young in a cage by themselves. He would feed them as long as is necessary, when they could go direct into the flight and be treated as above.

Not Mating (J. S.).—See reply to "Mac." in this issue, and follow advice therein given, which should quite meet your case. See that all your seeds and foods are sound and sweet, and that the birds are kept under healthy conditions generally. Two mealworms each per day for a time would do good if you have them handy.

Accommodation (E. S. M.).—On strict hygienic principles, four birds the size of a Norwich Canary are all the aviary will accommodate. But by paying very close attention to cleanliness, and keeping the floor well sanded or covered with sawdust, and gritty sand supplied in a tin, you might keep six or eight in it during the winter. The general rule is to allow one square foot of floor space for each bird the size of a Canary. In small aviaries height is of little moment: floor space is everything, so to speak.

Vanishing Hopes (Rather Crest-fallen).—Yes, there is a fair chance still of getting another brood out this season if you re-mated the pair within a few days of the hen leaving the clutch of clear eggs. If you did not do so, mate them at once. Give a crystal of sulphate of soda in the drinking water for one day, and add a teaspoonful of egg-food in which you have mixed half a teaspoonful of a mixture equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure to the dietary every second day, and on the alternate days a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, and millet. Give a little green food daily. Continue this treatment until the hen has gone to nest again, then feed plainly, and go on as advised in "Canary Breeding for Beginners."

Sore Foot (Corinium).—The absence of the one claw is probably owing to the bird getting it fast in the wires or round a perch and tearing it out in its struggles to escape. Dissolve a small teaspoonful of boracic acid in a tea-saucerful of hot water, and, whilst still quite warm, bathe the foot, or feet, in it for a few minutes, dry gently, and anoint sparingly with a little zinc ointment. Repeat this daily for a few days. You did right to cut the overgrown claw back. You should do the same with all that are overgrown, if you have not already done so. After bathing foot clean, hold up in front of a good light, and you will see a fine pink line running part of the way down the centre of the claw. This is the blood vessel. Cut a little short of the end of this line, and no harm will be done.

Watery Eye (Troubled, C'hurst).—You should first of all see whether the bird roosts in a position where it is exposed to a little draught through a chink in the aviary, or whether it is caused by mechanical means, such as friction with some part of the wire or rough woodwork, or by little bickerings with the other youngster. If none of these causes are apparent, catch the bird and see if there is a small recurved plumelet ("feather") growing on the eye-lid, which turns into and irritates the eye. If there is, remove it carefully, and also in any case bathe the eye with a luke-warm solution of boracic acid—a small teaspoonful of acid dissolved in a tea-saucerful of hot water. Repeat the bathing each day as necessary. If the aviary is a large one, so that there is much trouble in catching the bird, keep it in a cage during treatment. Do not give egg-food freely every day except when young are being reared. A mixture of crushed dry plain biscuit, broken groats, millet, black rape, and cracked sunflower would be much better.

A Trio (St. Elmo).—(1) There is no hard and fast rule for ceasing to supply green food to the young. Many of the most successful breeders do not stop it at all, but those who do, drop it when the young are taken away from their parents and placed "on their own." Should they show signs of looseness, it is as well to withhold very succulent green stuff or even drop it altogether for a few days. It is only in such cases that I drop it myself, and then as half ripe plantain stalks are coming in I begin to give these in place of more juicy stuff. (2) Pay no heed to faddists who tell you it is best not to give young Canaries water. Those who cannot rear Canaries and keep them healthy and strong without depriving them of one of the prime necessaries of life, have yet something to learn. Keep the water supply pure and fresh, and there will not be the slightest necessity to deprive the bird of it. (3) I have never used ground almonds in the egg-food, so cannot pass an opinion upon it. Fine oatmeal is apt to cause constipation, if used in excess, and some birds do not appear to relish food containing it. If a slight dusting of sugar is added, they like it better, and then, in limited quantities, it would be very useful for large-framed birds—Lancashires, Crests, Belgians, or Scotch Fancies, for example. A few broken groats, mixed with the seed supply, would serve the same purpose just as well.

Seed and Damaged Egg (P.K.).—(1) No. 1 canary is an excellent all-round sample of first-rate quality. No. 2 is of fair average quality, quite good enough for ordinary use, but decidedly inferior to No. 1. No. 1 rape is also an excellent sample of high quality. No. 2 is a very fair sample of summer rape, but a trifle strong in flavour, probably for want of a little longer storage. It is quite safe to use in an ordinary way, but No. 1 is quite the best, and specially suitable for high-class songsters. For the latter purpose it is worth the extra penny per lb. (2) It is quite possible for the cracked egg you have patched with stamp paper to hatch out. But if the patch is anywhere near the part where the egg should "chip," you should test the egg in warm water on the fourteenth day, and if the movements show that it contains a live chick soak off the paper, otherwise the chick may not be able to break its way out. By the way, the gummed margin of a cigarette paper is far better than stamp paper for patching birds' eggs, being so much thinner, and quite strong enough for all purposes.

Not Nesting (J. D. B.).—Put the birds on a staple diet of plain canary seed only for a week. Give three or four dandelion leaves to each pair daily. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda as large as a small pea every second day. Limit them solely to this for a week. After that add a fourth part of summer rape to the staple diet. Give a small teaspoonful of egg-food in which you have mixed half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure seeds, every second day, and on the alternate days a small teaspoonful of a mixture of hemp, inga, millet, and a half part teazle, linseed, and yellow mustard, and continue the green food as before. If you have them handy, give each 2 mealworms a day. If they do not appreciate these larvæ whole, mince them and make into a soft paste with a little crushed spongecake, and stick on the end of a perch for the birds to peck at. In the drinking water add six drops of tincture of gentian, and three of tincture of steel, every second day in the second week. Sesame is a small, flat, whitish seed, very useful for helping to bring hens into condition. You can get it from almost any large seed dealer—certainly from all the large dealers who advertise in our columns.

Loss of Feathers (F. A. Phillips).—It may possibly be due to advancing age, in which case a perfect cure is rather hopeless; or it may be due to insect pests, in which case the remedy is obvious. Examine the cage and bird well for traces of these pests, and if any are found, eradicate them at once. Keep cage floor strewn with clean, gritty sand. Allow bird to bathe freely, and once or twice a week add a few quassia chips to the bathing water. Feed on a staple mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Twice a week give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with maw seed. On two other days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts millet, teazle, black rape, and linseed. Give a little green food—chickweed preferably—daily. In the drinking water give ten drops of lemon juice, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash, every second day for a week, and afterwards twenty drops of chemical food every second day for a fortnight. Continue this treatment for a month, then cease treatment for a month. By that time the moult will be about commencing, when it will be very opportune to repeat the same treatment for another month, to help the bird to get through a healthy and quick moult.

Feeding Rollers, etc. (Rita).—(1) As a staple diet a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape. Twice a week half a teaspoonful of egg-food sprinkled with maw seed, or an equivalent quantity of bread and milk or crushed spongecake, or, again, you may use all these in rotation for the sake of change. On two other days each week give half a teaspoonful of a mixture two parts each hemp, millet, and black rape, and one part each of inga, teazle, gold of pleasure, and linseed. Give a spray of green food daily from now onwards, until late autumn, then give it once or twice a week in suitable weather. (2) A Hartz Mountain and a Roller are practically one and the same breed, but the latter has a more cultivated type of song, and is more highly trained in vocal abilities. You should get the nutshell booklet on the Roller Canary, 2½d., post free. (3) An uncomfortable perch might make a bird restless at night, but it certainly would not make it wheezy. The probability is that the wheezing disappeared spontaneously with the advent of milder weather, and coincided with the exchange of the perches. But it would be the former and not the latter that was responsible for the disappearance of the wheeziness.

Young Dying (Yorkshire).—Sorry I did not clearly understand your last query. Still, the reply given last week will fully meet your difficulties, and you cannot do better than follow the advice given in the queries to which I referred you. It is not at all likely that the egg-food is too rich if you gradually lower it from the first day to about equal parts egg and bread crumb or biscuit, and gradually bring it by the end of a week to a third part egg to two-thirds biscuit or bread, or, better still, you will find equal parts egg, bread crumb, and crushed spongecake an excellent food. It is far more likely to be the quality of your hemp that it at fault. Look carefully into this. When next young are hatched be careful not to give green food in a wet condition, but see that it is quite clean, and has all stale or decaying portions removed, and keep the water supply pure and fresh. Keep an eye on the young, and if they show signs of diarrhœa add a teaspoonful of lime water to the drinking water for a few days. You may, of course, try puppy biscuits if you wish, in which case use a good brand with no meat in them, and scald until quite soft rather less than the quantity required for use. Drain well, and bring to a crumbly consistency with a little dry biscuit powder or bread crumbs.

Two on Mating (No nom-de-plume).—(1) I do not remember receiving the previous query you refer to, but anyway, all received up to date have been replied to, so perhaps your reply has already appeared. If the Linnet is tractable and steady, you may, of course, leave him with the hen. If he molests the hen on the nest, or tries to pull nest to pieces, remove him. (2) The hen that has not come in breeding condition is far better remaining as she is in this respect. I would not, in any case, breed with her. Still, if you wish to try, treat as advised to "Mac," but on the alternating days in the second week give 20 drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills, and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, in the drinking water. Also see that it is kept in a fairly equable place, well ventilated, but quite out of the way of cold draughts, and not near nor over burning lights in the evening.

Sweating Young (J. W. O.). — Read reply to "Amateur" in this issue, and if your general treatment does not coincide with that advised there adopt that treatment with the future brood. If the young show signs of diarrhœa add a teaspoonful of lime water to the drinking water of the parent, enough of which will find its way to the stomachs of the youngsters. Also see that all your foods and seeds, especially the hemp, is quite sound and sweet. Keep water supply sweet and fresh, and do not give wet greenstuff, but see that it is crisp and dry, and free from withered or decaying portions. Offer the hen a bath daily and dissolve a little common salt in it for a day or two. Add a little maw seed to the egg food. You would do well to get the parts of "Our Canaries," which deal with feeding and "sweating."

Not Nesting (Novice, S. G.).—I'm afraid there must be something wrong with your general management and the place where you keep the birds. See that the cages are kept in a bright, healthy place, well ventilated, but quite free from draughts, and impure air, and well strewn with clean, gritty sand. Then follow advice given to "Mac," and if you have them handy, also give two or three mealworms a day for a time. If the birds do not take readily to these larvae, mince them, make into a soft paste with a little crushed sweet biscuit and sprinkle with maw, and stick on the end of a perch for the birds to peck off. You would do well to get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. post free, from our Manager for details of general management.

Bare-Neck Pairing (2nd Query).—If the hen is in good general health and active, you may, of course, mate her and there is no reason at all why she should not breed successfully. The only risk is that if this bareness is anything but of a temporary and passing nature the young may be born with a predisposition to become similarly affected at an early age. The trouble may not show itself in such case for the first season or two, but would in all probability put in an appearance and spoil the birds long before they had got well into the prime of life. If you mate her you must suspend the treatment advised last week until she has done breeding, when you should resume it for a few weeks before the natural moult sets in. You may, however, still smear the bare place with the ointment a few times before she settles down to nesting in earnest.

Trouble with Hen (Doubleyou).—Something has probably gone wrong with the normal process of egg-production, and without knowing what this is you can do little beyond waiting the course of events. It is useless treating her for egg-binding, as this is not in evidence. Try the following treatment and report progress at end of the second week, referring to this reply. Mix together a small quantity of sherry and syrup of buckthorn in equal parts, and give two drops of this direct in the beak morning and evening for one day only, and then treat as advised to "Mac," except that you should use chickweed or watercress as green food, and not dandelion. Stop all other foods and dainties, except those advised in reply. Handle bird gently, and do not flutter her about any more than is quite unavoidable.

In Doubt (H. H.).—(1) I take it you mean is there any hope of a successful alliance having occurred between the common green cock and Norwich hen. In such a case one can only follow the advice of a famous politician, and "wait and see." If the sex of the green cock is really undoubted, I should certainly not despair because I had not witnessed any contact. You can never tell in these cases, and it is frequently the unexpected that happens. Therefore, by all means let the hen sit her full time If the eggs prove clear, and the hen starts nesting again, with the cock in no better condition, why not endeavour to get that "very quick" Yorkshire at liberty to mate with her next time. As regards "sweating," see reply to "J. W. O. (2). If the five years old Cinnamon hen is quite healthy and active, she is certainly not too old to breed successfully. In this case also you should give the eggs every chance, and see what result is forthcoming.

Not Nesting (Mac.).—Put the birds that do not come into condition on a staple diet of plain Canary for a week. Give a liberal supply of young, crisp dandelion daily. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda, the size of a small pea every second day. After this add a fourth part of summer rape to the staple. Give a small teaspoonful of egg food, with half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts parts maw, sesame and gold of pleasure mixed in it every second day, and on the alternate days a small teaspoonful of a mixture of hemp, inga, black rape, millet, and yellow mustard, in equal parts. Continue the daily supply of dandelion. In the drinking water give six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel every second day for a week. Allow them to bathe freely. Could you not have arranged to put a suitable cock that was more forward with the hen that has made a start? This would have been best. Anyway you should leave the pair together now, and let matters take their course. Things may come right in the end.

Signs of Vermin (B. F.).—The insects you found when you first noticed these symptoms were the grey louse which often troubles Canaries. Your treatment was very nearly the correct thing, hence its success. This time, however, it is quite probable the cause of the symptoms may be red mites, which will not be found on the birds, but hidden away in cracks, joints or corners, or under the ends of the perches of the cages. Examine them well with this object in view, and if any mites are found, clear out all you can from the hiding places, and then flush them with Izal or some similar carbolic disinfectant by means of a small camel hair pencil or chip of wood. Also dip the extreme ends of the perches in the fluid. Repeat this three or four times at intervals of a week. Allow the birds to bathe daily now, and add a few drops of quassia extract to the water twice a week. For the rest, as soon as the birds have done breeding—it would not be wise to begin before—adopt the treatment given in reply to "1st Query, Yorks," in last issue.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Leadbeater Cockatoo.

S.A.D.—The Leadbeater cannot be accounted a talking species, nevertheless, I have come across one that talked, and your bird should respond to patient tuition. An old bird of any species takes much more teaching than a young one, but no species of Parrot or Cockatoo is hopeless. Diet: seed mixture—canary, white millet, oats, paddyrice, hemp, maize, and sunflower seeds, the whole to be well mixed together; nuts, ripe fruit, plain biscuit, grit, cuttlebone, and greenfood. Value, 40s. to 60s. according to condition.

Not Talking.

Constant Reader.—It frequently happens that a change of home throws a Parrot off talking, but as soon as it settles down, it should take it up again. Also, if kept where it will hear plenty of conversation and is talked to continually, it will ultimately respond and increase its vocabulary. While the bird continues thin, in addition to the diet you are giving, supply a little boiled maize daily, boil till soft, drain off all water, and then soak into it half a teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food. Keep a small bottle of Dinneford's Magnesia by you, and when the bowels are out of order put one teaspoonful in the drinking water. I should also supply a few nuts at intervals (shelled walnuts are good), and keep a piece of clean cuttlebone in its cage. Re Grey Parrot, I can only refer you to our advert. columns. The Blue-front is dealt with in "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit"; write our Manager.

What Parrot?

S. Stephens.—It is a Pennant Parrakeet. For diet give a seed mixture consisting chiefly of canary and white millet, with a small quantity of oats and hemp. A few sunflower seeds may be given occasionally as a treat. Continue to use the quassia solution. Give once a week one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water. If you could get it, put into some outdoor aviary for the summer months; this would be the best cure for the feather picking, but the changed mixture and other treatment should soon bring about an improvement in its condition. In addition to seed, it must have ripe fruit (apple is very good), greenfood (lettuce and flowering grass), also a piece of plain biscuit, and a piece of clean cuttlebone kept hanging in the cage. It is good practice to add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed mixture. About 30s.

Siskin and Parasites.

M. B. Walter.—Keep the Siskin's bowels moving freely by occasional doses (one teaspoonful to one ounce of water) of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water. This will also prove cooling if there should be any skin irritation. Take the bird in the hand and bathe it gently. Use a mop camel-hair brush, with quassia solution every other day. You can procure the quassia solution from our advertisers; it will only need diluting for use. You must also give attention to the cage, or you will never get the bird free from mites if it is troubled with these pests. First paint it (inside and out) with neat paraffin, and then after an hour or two's interval, scald it out with boiling water, finally swilling with cold water, and then leave in the open air to dry. A little chemical food in the drinking-water will prove a good tonic at this juncture. Also keep up a liberal supply of green food, such as tender lettuce, flowering grass, groundsel, etc. If you have an outdoor aviary, turning it in there for the summer months would prove the simplest course.

An Ailing Parrot.

F.G.S.—Your bird was evidently quite a weakling when it came into your possession, but now it has got the turn, it should soon improve, but as it gains strength the leg will materially improve, but I fear there will always be a slight deformity; however, I should certainly advise you to fasten one "claw" up as in the illustration, and after about three of four weeks release it and fasten up the other one. You must stop the sop, but it can have a little boiled corn if it is very partial to it, but if it is eating heartily of the seed mxture and putting on flesh, it will be better without it. Continue to treat as already advised and continue the Parrish's Chemical Food in the drinking-water till the bird is fairly fit, and if there should be any signs of constipation, an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia will suffice to keep them well regulated. In case of any relapse, write again at once will full details. From your description it appears to be a case of rickets, which I fear cannot be entirely cured, though it may be partially so.

What Bird is it?

Queenie.—It is not an Indian Parrakeet, but an Australian Rose-breated Cockatoo, which, though it holds its reputation as a talker in its native country, very few of the large numbers imported to this country become at all loquacious, nevertheless, I have known several really talented birds of this species, but it was the result of much patient teaching. Most individuals are accomplished acrobats and make clumsy and grotesque pets. Keep your bird where it will hear plenty of conversation. When offering it tit-bits, give them with some regular remark—such as "Something nice for Polly"—and talk to it when it is in a restful mood, and to a greater or lesser degree, sooner or later it should prove responsive. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops; table scraps, nor any kind of animal food.

Young Grey Parrots.

A.B.—Fuller details than space will permit me to give here will be found in our nutshell booklet, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our Manager. The box-cage should give them privacy and shelter from draught and be better than an all wire one for them. Note, It is possible, nay, very probable that the birds died from some infection contracted during the voyage to this country, which developes and becomes acute after a few weeks' stay here—the trouble becoming active usually after a chill and soon terminates fatally. Your cages should be well disinfected and scalded out with boiling water before being used for other birds. On arrival keep the birds warm and an addition to boiled maize and ripe fruit, supply a seed mixture of canary, white millet and hemp seeds, also a piece of cuttlebone and a little moistened "Osborne" or some similar biscuit—moisten with Parrish's Chemical Food and water—keep the bowels well regulated (not really loose) with occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia.

Love Birds (Nenagh).—We thank you for courteous acknowledgement.

Budgerigars not Breeding (J. Hague).—Your birds are in the moult and will not breed till this is over, but after that they should soon settle down, and, as the season in this country runs to the end of October at least, there should be ample time for several broods to be successfully reared. The same applies to the Cockatoels, you can only leave them to themselves and wait with patience their settling; again, if these are youngish birds, this may mean a little delay, as they do not breed till they are two years' old. Add to your dietary, spray millet, and give lettuce and flowering (seeding) grass in lieu of the dandelion. These birds enjoy a wet piece of turf to roll about on, this being their natural way of taking a bath. Our Nutshell Booklet, "The Budgerigar," 2½d. post free from our Manager, would help you.

What Bird is this? (A. Sinclair).—Your bird is undoubtedly the Australian Rose-breasted (Roseate) Cockatoo, newly imported specimens of which are often obtainable at 7s. 6d. each, which I should say is about the value of your bird.

Again, what Bird? (E. Thornton).—Will reply to this query in next issue, as I don't recognise the bird at sight, and I am just now out of reach of my works of reference.

Parrot with Fits (Pickford).—Dissolve three grains of Bromide of Potassium in a little syrup, and administer to the bird in some form direct to the beak. Give three doses with a day's interval between each dose. Also keep the bowels well regulated, but not watery-loose with occasional doses of Dinneford's Magnesia. Diet: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, and greenfood. The seed mixture would be better if half its bulk consisted of canary and white millet—a pinch of grit should be added to the daily supply of seed. Report progress in a fortnight.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Small Softbills.

American.—(1) I think the Blackcap Warbler would be the best you could make a start with. This species is fairly easy to keep in health all the year round, as it feeds a good deal on ripe, soft fruit, and this can in most cases be conveniently supplied at any time. (2) Any good cage-maker (apply to one of the well-known men advertising in our columns) will supply the correct type of cage. Tell him the bird you want it for; the same type of cage is used for Nightingales, Redstarts, and the like. A really good one, enamelled inside, will cost 6s. 6d. to 10s., according to size. Take my advice and have a large one. (3) The stock insectile food you name is very good, and suitable. I have used it in my own birdroom with every success. Mix amongst it a little (say about a third) of crumbled stale sponge cake. Give (as intimated above) plenty of very ripe fruit—banana, pear, pecled grapes, sweet orange, soft figs and dates, scalded and cut up sultanas and grocer's currants, raspberries, etc., etc. Offer some live foods of various kinds, as available. (4) The conditions mentioned would suit admirably. (5) These birds seldom require any "steadying." They soon settle down, though always more or less lively seldom acquiring that stolid tameness which distinguishes most Nightingales. It is a matter of disposition. I recommend you to read Mr. Norman's book on "Softbills" (post free 1/1).

Greenfinch-Hawfinch Hybrids.

H. Beddy, jun.—Yours questiou are a hot lot, and would need a column to answer in full. However, here goes. I see no reason why Hybrids should not be bred between the Greenfinch and the Hawfinch. They are close relatives—much more closely related, in fact, than the Greenfinch and Bullfinch. I should favour mating a very small cock Hawfinch (they are often to be got), and a very big hen Greenfinch. But I should certainly try also with the sexes reversed. No need to worry about the colour of the Greenic (yellow-green or grass-green) the size being the most important point. They should both be steady birds, well used to cage life. Use, of course, the best coloured small Hawfinch obtainable. Have never heard of "Canary-reared" Hawfinch. I should imagine that baby Hawfinches would send any respectable hen Canary into hysterics. An aviary would be all right if only the pair occupied it; if otherwise, then a very large cage would be best. I do not know anything about fertile eggs from any cock Bullfinch, Chaffinch, or Yellowhammer (whether wild-caught or Canary-reared) and hen Canaries, never having had the luck to obtain them. I have inspected said-to-be Yellowhammer-Canary, and Chaffinch Canary Hybrids; but my mind has never got beyond the said-to be stage as yet. I hope you will be able to convince me, and other Hybrid breeders. I can see that the meaning you read into the word "call" is not the same as that I myself put upon it. "Call" in this connection does not indicate a vocal effort, but the act of the hen when inviting her mate to the crowning joy of connubial bliss. Hence our previous misunderstanding. Give nest-bag in addition to the lining. Mix in the canary-seed, as suggested. Cock Goldies do not help to build the nest. Your bird apparently wishes to breed. Are you sure it is a cock? And I think this ends your little dozen fourteen questions!

Young Thrushes (G. Bailey).—You would have to depend on the ordinary soft food mainly, but, in addition, should provide worms from the garden, mealworms, gentles, blackbeetles (cockroaches), and snails. The time of incubation is fourteen days. I wish you good fortune; the live-foods will bring it, if anything.

Bullfinches in Aviary (J. Hague).—You should send 2½d. to CAGE BIRDS for the "Nutshell" handbook upon the Bullfinch. It will tell you all about the best foods—shepherd's purse, groundsel, chickweed, hawthorn and fruit bush and tree buds, etc. for your purposes. I have no doubt the hen would relish a small dish of a good insectile food, with which you should mix a good proportion of live ants' eggs.

Canary Eggs in a Chaffinch's Nest (J. W.).—If you take away the eggs of the Chaffinch and substitute Canary eggs, any young Canaries hatched would be reared by the Chaffinches. I know that this has been successfully done. The same, too, in the case of Linnets and Greenfinches.

A Crested Goldfinch Mule (H. Boddy).—A Goldfinch Mule with a crest has no special value so far as the fancier is concerned. Some people might give a shilling or two extra for it, as it is a bit of a novelty. But crested Mules are uncommon only because Mule-breeders do not as a rule use crested hen Canaries for muling purposes.

Yellow Hammer Canary Mules (Well Wisher).—The fact of the hen Canary going to nest does not by any means prove that you will get young from her and the cock Yellowhammer. The eggs are the chief things, and I expect you will find they are all clear. I have had hens pair freely with both cock Chaffinches, Bramble-finches, and Yellowhammers, but all their eggs have proved unfertile. I have a cock Chaffinch now which feeds a hen Canary and fusses round her far more than any cock Canary would; her first nest of four eggs are all unfertile, though. Of course, I still live in hopes. The hen will feed the young on the foods usually given; personally, I should mix some live ants eggs amongst the egg-food if ever I got any young from such a mating. The latter are so rare as to be unknown up to the present.

Leaving the Linnet in the Cage (W. H. K.).—It is invariably quite safe to leave the cock Linnet with the hen Canary while she is incubating the eggs and rearing the young. It is the same with many Goldfinches. It is well to know the dispositions of one's birds, of course. But if the Linnet does not pull the nest about while the hen is building and sitting, then he can be accounted safe. I have only had one Linnet for several years past, which was so "hot-headed" as to be unable to let the housekeeping duties take their usual course.

Greenfinch-Canary Cross (F. J. F.)—The Greenfinch-Canary cross is certainly worth trying, and young not at all difficult to obtain. You are not feeding at all correctly. Consult the "Nutshell" booklet on the Greenfinch, published by CAGE BIRDS; it is only 2½d., post free. Let him have some sunflower seed, above all things. Pleased to hear you are joining "Cage Birds League"; evidently you know a good thing when you see it. The League is worthy of the support of every fancier the British bird men in particular.

Choosing a Linnet (Anxious). You should send 2½d. to CAGE BIRDS for the "Nutshell" booklet on the Linnet, which will tell you all about the sexing and also the feeding; etc. However did you get it into your head that the "best singers" were caught at some particular place in some particular shire? That is all bunkum. Wherever Linnets are found, there also will be found both good singers and bad singers (from the song fancier's point of view). The selection of the good singers has to be done after the birds have been caught, and have "opened out." Young Linnets, of course, can be caged near a good noted old bird, and will pick up much of his 'pleasant song." The only way is to get a number of Linnets and afterwards sell those which do a bad song. The hen is a greyish bird, with heavily streaked breast (the breast of the cock is red at this time of the year, a certain guide to the sex). The breast feathers of the cock have a "mooned" appearance at the tips; he is very brown (nutty) on the back and wing butts (the hen is greyish). Sure sex signs, these.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

A. Locke. — Meningitis, or inflammation of the covering of the brain, was responsible for death of Yellow Bunting. This is often part of a specific disease, but in this case it resulted from digestive trouble. This is not a common complaint, nor are hand-reared birds more susceptible. An occasional aperient given in the drinking water will obviate this trouble. Try a more restricted diet as your bird was much too fat.

Sparrow.—The growths were of parasitic origin, due to a vegetable organism, a fungus which is sometimes found in seed. Treatment should be early attempted, and by a skilled person, to be safe and effective. Occasional applications of dilute solutions of Formalin will render the parasite inocuous, and will dispel the growths. This should be very carefully applied, as it has a very destructive action, and must be used with great discretion. Tincture of Iodine is another very useful agent, but not so effective.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A Smoker (W. Morement).—We shall be pleased to publish the items you mention; thanks for your promise.

Photographs (G. Bailey). Many thanks for the two photographs, which we will try to reproduce in one of our special illustrated supplements.

Distributing Specimens (R. Wharton).—We are much indebted to you for your kindness. Hope the society may continue to flourish.

A Breeding Cage (A. Herbert).—We are extremely sorry to hear of your misfortune, and trust you will soon have news of the missing model cage.

Gold of Pleasure Seed (Miss K. Lewis-Barnard).—There should be no difficulty whatever in obtaining gold of pleasure seed. It is advertised by many seed dealers using our columns, and is sold in many London shops. Apply direct to one of our metropolitan advertisers if the stores you mention fail you.

A Question of Status (Amateur and Novice).—(1) No difference at open shows unless classes for amateurs or novices are provided, in which, of course, a champion cannot enter birds. If an amateur or novice wins a first prize in the open classes of an open show, he becomes a champion. (2) The general rule at members' shows is that when a fancier has won three firsts in amateur classes (or novice, where no amateur section is provided), he becomes a champion. But only firsts won at annual members' shows count, as a rule—not young bird shows, table shows, and the like. (3) Practically every society has at least champion and novice sections at its members' fixtures, and many have an amateur (i.e., intermediate) section as well. That some such division is beneficial to a society and its members cannot be questioned, we should imagine.

Fixed Prize Money at Sheffield Shows.

Sir,—I see by the report of the Sheffield O.S. that they are giving fixed prize money at their Nest Feather Show, which they claim is out of the ordinary in the Sheffield district. I should like to point out that this is not so, as the Walkley C.B.S. has given fixed prize money for several years at their Nest Feather Show, and at their Annual Members' Show since the formation of the society.

J. Woolhouse.

The National British Bird and M.C. Country Ramble.

Sir,—Respecting the N.B.B. and M. Club's ramble on Saturday, the 27th inst, both morning and afternoon parties will meet at the booking office, new South Station, Waterloo. The morning party go by the 9.20 train from No. 2 platform, and the afternoon party by the 1.37 train from No. 5 platform, each person to take his own ticket. I should be obliged if those who intend going would communicate with me at 45, Overdale Road, South Ealing, stating which party they would like to join.

J. P. Carr, Jt. Hon. Sec.

A Scottish Presentation.

Sir,—I have much pleasure in complying with the request of Mr. George Marlin in his letter to Cage Birds of 13th inst., to keep the list open until 15th June, and I trust that by so doing the amount already subscribed, viz., 24s. 6d., will be greatly augmented. I am sorry I cannot attend the half-yearly meeting of the City of Glasgow O.A., but Mr. Frank Taylor will be pleased to accept any subscriptions towards the marriage present to such a worthy fancier as Mr. Chalmers. Will all friends wishing to assist kindly send on their contributions, large or small?

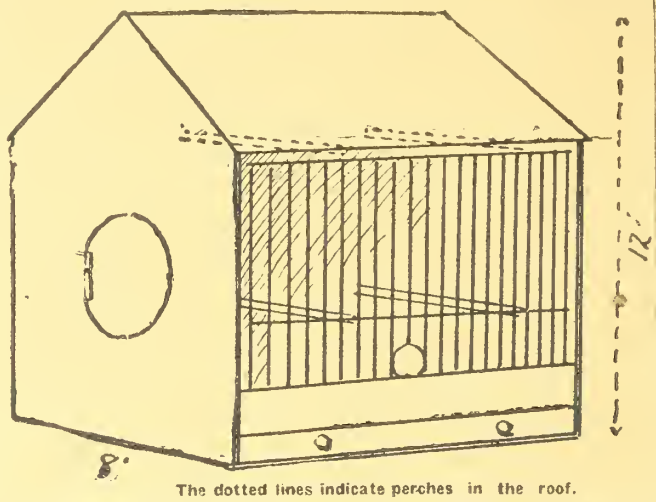
How I Got the Youngsters' Crops Filled.



Sir,—I have often received valuable information from Cage Birds, and maybe the following will be of assistance to fellow-readers. I had a hen with two young ones a few days old, but their crops always empty. I then put in the cock; first day full crop, second and third (as usual), empty. On the third day I watched the birds, and the hen would not let the cock go anywhere near the young ones. She kept hopping from one perch to the other, then would drop down to the water hole, put her head out and chirp to any bird she could see, or that would reply to her call. I then took the cock away and got a piece of zinc two inches square and fixed it round the water hole. The hen could then do nothing but drink. I then fixed a piece of cardboard in front of the cage, with a little space top and bottom for light. Result: Young nine days old and with full crops.

The Bradford Cinderella Club Show.

Sir,—The Bradford Cinderella Club Committee met May 10th at the Market Tavern, Bradford, to consider the advisability of running an open show on a large scale for the benefit of the poor children in the city. At the outset Mr. H. H. Towers was elected as chairman of the Committee, with Mr. H. Hill as secretary, and Mr. F. Hammond as assistant secretary, the two last-named officiating as treasurers to the fund. After a few opening remarks with regard to the object of calling the meeting, a resolution was unanimously carried that the Committee run an open show, and that they accept the date which the Bradford East Society had freely offered them on which to hold the show, viz., December 9th. It was left to a future meeting to decide as to whether it shall be a two-days' show or not, and also where the show shall be held. The following working committee of seven was appointed: Messrs. R. Halliday, S. Dean, W. H. Shackleton, H. J. Chittenden, D. Sunderland, W. Crabtree, and W. A. Cowgill. Further decided, to invite two representatives from each Society connected with the Yorkshire Union and Bradford Societies who are not connected with the Union, along with representatives from each specialist club, and two from the Cinderella Club proper. The Sub-committee of seven, which the Bradford East Society had appointed to help to run the show was appointed en bloc, in addition to the above, thus making a very strong committee. Mr. D. Sunderland handed over to the secretaries the sum of £2 11s. as surplus funds left over from the last show, held at Allerton, and it is hoped to be able to hand over a substantial balance to the Cinderella Fund as a result of the present endeavour. The Bradford East O.S. Rose-Bowl will be competed for, for the best unflighted bird bred by the exhibitor, and it is also desired to "unearth" one or two trophies in addition. Anyone who is in a position to lend assistance to the Committee, either in working for same or soliciting specials, or who feels a desire to give financial assistance to this most deserving charity, should communicate with the secretaries, who will be only too pleased to accept same. If cage bird fanciers will rally round and support this scheme, success is assured, and it will undoubtedly be the greatest event in Yorkshire. It will be a show full of variety, and as it appears likely at present that nearly all the specialist societies' patronage in Yorkshire will be granted, both fanciers and visitors can rely on seeing some of the finest exhibits that ever graced the show bench in their respective varieties. The services of some prominent persons in the city will be requisitioned for the opening ceremonies, and as much financial assistance is needed for carrying a show like this to a successful issue, it is hoped the funds will materially benefit by this arrangement. Every little help will be gratefully acknowledged. Kindly remember that all help given in a charitable cause of this kind, is given for the benefit of those who have not been so freely endowed with this world's blessings as we ourselves: it is for the children, who are not responsible for their precarious position, that this show is being held. Let us all put our shoulders to the wheel manfully, and make it a magnificent success. The next meeting will be held at the Market Tavern on May 24th, at 8 o'clock, when all the representatives from the different societies are invited to attend.

H. Hill, Secretary.

Training of Chaffinches.

Sir,—Considering it my duty to help any readers of Cage Birds, my friend, Mr. E. Grantham, should keep his Chaffinches in small cages. He should take two cracker biscuits, put them on the stove for five minutes, and then crush them up. Give a biscuit daily. I think that is the only thing that will help them to sing. I hope Cage Birds will publish this sketch of a Chaffinch's cage: it will be useful to some reader. I think Mr. A. Woodruff is cruel to cover up his birds; I hope this will help him, and I trust he will try it.

O. E. Blake.

A Young Linnet Problem.

Sir,—Will some kind reader advise me on the following points: There are several Linnets' nests in my field, and I have not had time to hand-rear any young. If I put them into a cage when about ten days' old, will the parent birds continue to feed them until I can cage them off? Are there any points to be observed when doing this?

H. Metcalfe.

Bold Behaviuor of Thrushes.

Sir,—On Saturday last the Surrey Territorials Association held their sports on the Sports Ground, Redhill. I noticed that a Thrush had built her nest in a creeper on the pavilion about 6ft. from the ground, and quite a lot of hammering had been done in order to secure the decorations which hung about a foot below the nest; while from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. crowds of people were standing and passing close by; also a brass band played, and guns were fired. In spite of it all I noticed the parents busy passing between the people, nearly touching their faces, in order to feed their three young. I thought it very good, and worthy of mentioning.

A Goldfinch Slaughters Its Canary Mate.

Sir,—Will you kindly allow me to answer Mr. T. Henly re Goldfinch slaughtering its mate? I have had the same experience. I have a four-year-old Goldfinch and a four-year-old hen Canary, a mottled one, which he is paired to. He will nest and feed her as well as any cock Canary. But, thinking of trying my luck with another hen or two, I bought two, and having got them into breeding condition, I put him up with one of them—a ticked yellow—on the Sunday night. On going round on the Monday dinner-time I was surprised to see the floor strewn with feathers, and on looking into the cage I saw the poor hen all but dead. I would not give it up at this, so I tried the other hen—a yellow with a cap on the back of head. He served her the same, only I got her round again. He will not pair to any other hen but the old one. I can always do better when I let them loose in an aviary four yards square. I find he cannot hurt the hens then.

A. Linch.

Lancashires and Lizards of To-day and Yesterday.

Sir,—I see a letter from one who signs himself "Truth." Well, "Truth," the first part of your letter I pass over as twaddle. I may be a little dense, but not so dense as to think a mongrel is better than a clear-bred Lancashire show-bird. The mongrel may be all right in Rochdale, but a lot of exhibitors are getting tired of sending well-bred Lancashires out to fill classes up and be beaten by mongrels that ought to be at home, or in a crest breeder's room. You say I make light of Mr. House; nothing of the sort, for Mr. House can judge if he has the right stuff put before him. What can he or anyone else do when two sorts are in a class? If he goes for a bird answering to the standard, he is wrong, and if he goes for a bird showing crest or "fat-head," he is wrong again. So what is he to do? If he puts a big, coarse bird down he is also wrong. So I for one don't envy the judge his job at Rochdale. Re my smile at Mr. Barrass when I read his lecture, I could not help it on reading his reply to a member as to what effect a Crest had on a Lancashire. He said he did not know, as he never put it in. If that is so, how is it he gets disqualified so often? The Rev. Hudson did it the first time at Manchester. Mr. House has done it again since, also put his birds down for being blind. Lancashires that have a lot of Crest in them will go blind, like a lot of Crests do. What I cannot understand is why we cannot have birds as near the standard as we can get them. We have the standard show cage, why not the bird? No one has had a better chance to breed mongrel winners in the past than I have, and who has a better chance to-day, seeing that I have three good clear Crest-bred cocks, all with good big heads? I was asked by a well-known Oldham exhibitor why I did not put Crest in and take my place with them, and "come amongst them." My reply was: "No, Teddy, I shall never do it." This was at Rochdale Show. I have 15 pairs of Lancashires breeding, and I know now before the show season I shall have no chance of winning, as I don't care to show a fatheaded one. You say, Mr. "Truth" you have not seen me stage a winner. I suppose you mean in all-England shows. Now I have not won, but I have been very near, and you have not seen me show many losers. You may have seen me at a good many shows criticising the mongrels that have been shown. In your twenty years as a fancier, do you remember me staging and winning with a ticked Yellow Plainhead (not a "fat head") at Oldham? Mr. House judged. It was an Oldham Cage Show, a "borrowed bird" show, and all the best in Lancashire were there—that sort of show was harder to win at than an all-England show is to-day. Did you know I won special for most points at Manchester Show? I don't often show, but in what bit I have done I have been in front of your "shining lights." It must be a great feat to win 10s. or 12s. first prize on the show bench, after winning and losing hundreds of pounds on the cinder path and the racecourse as I have done. Before I finish, I may say I don't think it is a pleasure to Mr. House or any other judge to disqualify any man's birds, but I think if a man is so foolish to send such birds out to a show after breeding and showing and winning for twenty or thirty years, it is his own fault. He ought to know better than throw a chance away and risk getting disqualified. I am pleased to know Mr. Dewsnap breeds all his own birds. I breed my own, too, and have no one coming to my rooms to keep me straight or tell me what I must do to win, as I keep birds for pleasure, not for what I can make out of them.

Edward Fuller.

Sir,—Mr. Fuller has had every chance of coming forward to give "his" views on the "Lancashires of to-day." Personally I am extremely sorry that he has not come up to the scratch and expounded himself from the fountain head—Rochdale or Oldham—of the variety. I am given to understand that the 33 years' "novice"—a long apprenticeship—was approached by the Oldham Society stating that their headquarters were at liberty for him, seeing that he desired Oldham and not Rochdale to answer the "questions" that would arise from somebody else's paper—Mr. Sam Fitton's. A very funny order. Well, I believe he's not going to fulfil that self-made arrangement. Why? I fancy someone has whispered into his ears, "Don't be foolish, Ted; stop at Glossop." I should think that all who have read the trashy, insinuating abuse that has been produced by his—or should I say somebody else's?—pen have done nothing but laugh, as not one of the gentlemen whom he tried to hit have taken the least notice of him—treated him with contempt. I think it is the proper way, too. Poor Ted! If he has not been cut to the quick by ignorance, let him come forward with a lecture and debate the question like a man and bring the list of "his winners" in open competition to the front as a kind of footing. I have been looking up some old catalogues, but cannot find his name prominent amongst the good, honest, stalwart fanciers whom he has quoted in his cynical remarks. Honour to whom honour is due. It's no use of pointing out facts to Mr. Fuller through the Press, as it is "so easy" to get someone to write for him. I hope that the "Lancashires" will still keep progressing by the aid of the gentlemen whom Mr. Fuller has so often tried to "hit below the belt," but missed every time. Poor Ted! Pass the nuts round, please.

What Canadian Bird was this?

Sir,—In answer to the question in this week's Cage Birds, "What Canadian bird was this?" I might mention that last year, whilst on a tour through the South-Western States of America (on looking up my diary, I find it was the 8th April, 1910) I saw a large flock of the birds your correspondent describes—bright yellow head and neck and jet black body. We had camped on the banks of the Bluey River, near to the Choctaw Indian Camp, Johnson County, Oklahoma. On my remarking about the similarity to our English Blackbird, one of my American friends immediately fired and brought down two for my inspection. On asking the name, I was told "Blackbirds." They seemed quite a familiar bird to my friends. So I think Mr. Deaken has named them pretty correctly, except that he saw his in Canada and I saw these in the State of Oklahoma.

A Ringed Swallow Caught.

Sir,—I had a Swallow brought me at the end of last week by a young blacksmith who lives close here, as he did not know what it was. He had caught it in his forge as it had got entangled on the brickwork. It was in splendid health, feather, and condition, and a cock bird. I caught sight of a metal ring on its left leg, which I examined with a powerful glass, and it had the number 13 on it. I advised letting the Swallow go, which the blacksmith did. If worth recording in Cage Birds, it may be seen by whoever rung the bird, and we may learn from whence it came.

Clearing Mice Out of an Aviary.

Sir,—Surely your correspondent, S. R. Williams can place his seed out of the reach of mice, on small stands or tables, with the legs fixed well under, away from the edges, so that the mice cannot possibly get on top? He can also fix his traps inside inverted boxes, or wire-work, or low cages of very small mesh with a narrow margin underneath for the mice to enter by. It is a pity to see the birds' food eaten or spoiled by these nasty little vermin when such simple means can be adapted to foil them.

J. Wadsworth.

Sir,—In reply to S. R. Williams' enquiry re mice in aviary, may I suggest the following method of getting rid of the pests? Soak some Canary seed in a strong solution of corrosive sublimate or strychina (both deadly poisons), and when the seed has become thoroughly saturated, dry it in the sun by spreading it out thinly on a sheet of paper weighted at the corners to keep it from blowing away (covering it with glass to keep strictly within legal bounds). When it is quite dry it should be put in a small cage, between the wires of which the vermin can creep, but the birds cannot. If the cage has been baited for a few nights with sound seed the mice will then partake without hesitation of the poisoned grain and be found in the morning stiff and stark in the cage or close outside it. Needless to remark, when all the mice have been caught the small cage should be at once thoroughly cleansed, or, better still, burned. This is copied from a book by the late Dr. Greene, and I trust the information will be of use to enquirer.

"Verb. Sap."

Sir,—One of the readers of your valuable paper, Cage Birds, is making enquiries re how to rid mice from his aviary. I think by trying the following method he will be successful; I have tried it with great success. Get some good lime, and stop every hole excepting one. Leave that one open always. Then get a box (a good deep cigar box will do)—one which you can set one or two nipper traps inside. Make a hole at one end of the box so that the mice can run in. Place the box inside the aviary on a level with the hole left open. Bait your traps, and scatter a few hemp seeds in the box. When the seed is done the mice will go for the bait on the traps. In this way you will be able to clear the lot. They will not make another hole as long as this one is left open. When I was in Bradford I went into a house that was simply swarmed with mice. I did not know how to get rid of them; but I studied this method out and tried it, and I caught close on a hundred in a few weeks. I think, if Mr. Williams will try this method, he will be satisfied. I wish your paper every success.

The Clashing of Shows in Ireland

Sir,—Your correspondent, "Southern," is correct in saying the Y.C.B.S. changed their date, but it was to avoid clashing with Banbridge, and I think, in the interests of the Fancy, some arrangement should be made to avoid both shows (that is, Sligo and the Y.C.B.S.) being failures. Re Larne and the Dublin P.B. and C.B.S. show clashing, I agree with Mr. Mayne, but if Larne could possibly change their date they would be well repaid with entries, as last year's catalogue will show that a large number of their entries came from exhibitors who will be supporting Dublin Show. I am informed the Belfast N.C. and Y.C.C. held their monthly meeting, May 6th, and I was surprised to learn there were no further proofs re the allegations made at the previous meeting with regard to the Yorkshire that won the cup. Evidently there is some mystery about this society, or their meetings would be reported. Perhaps the corresponding secretary has resigned his honorary position; or would it be on account of notice of motion being given that members writing letters to Cage Birds be expelled from the society? Had the letters re borrowed birds at Sligo Show the intended effect? Might I ask if the society's rules debar members from exposing unscrupulous exhibitors who have been admittedly guilty of lending and borrowing birds for exhibition some time ago at Larne and Lurgan Shows? As a fancier, I would like to see a report of every meeting published in Cage Birds. Having read a letter in a past issue from Mr. Stewart re the Norwich Plainhead C.C. of Ireland, there is no need for comment other than to express my sympathy with the officials who, I dare say, stick to the society for the love of the Fancy. Mr. Stewart, it does seem strange a club open to all Ireland should boast of eight members, when there are at least 80 breeders of the Norwich Canary in Belfast!

A New North of Ireland Show.

Sir,—We have just formed a Cage Bird Society in Newtownards, and purpose having a show in the latter part of this year, so to prevent clashing with other shows in the North of Ireland, we would esteem it a favour if secretaries of other societies would forward on to me the dates on which their shows will be held.

A Singing Bullfinch.

Sir,—In reply to a letter that appeared in Cage Birds a fortnight ago, over the name of J. Blessington, saying that a Bullfinch has no song, I beg to say that I have a Bullfinch, caged since about October last, that sings almost all the day long; in fact, it is singing as I write these lines, and more than one note, too. It is very much like the Linnet's song, yet I have no Linnets—the Bullie is the only bird. If some kind friend would present me with a Norwich type Canary hen (a dark bird) I would try for some Hybrids. Having been out of work, I cannot afford one myself yet. I may say that three years ago I bred a nest of Mules the first time of trying with a Goldfinch (that had been given up by an experienced breeder as too wild and no use) and an ordinary type of Canary hen.

Bullfinch Lover.

The Champion Scotch Fancy Canary of 1911.

Sir,—Who will breed the champion Scotch Fancy this summer is a problem which cannot be solved at the moment. Leith had the distinguished honour last year. The yellow cock was a thoroughly popular winner. He declared his success in September, and won the honours all over the show season. Being no new achievement with the owner to win, he carried his honours as a matter of course, but he was, all the same, proud of the high standard and quality of the bird. To produce a superior exhibit will be no easy task, but the Fancy is advancing, and there are gentlemen who will do their very best to surprise the world with a grander specimen than has ever been seen. It is that spirit which calls forth the best and highest that is in a fancier. A fancier never knows what he is rearing, but when he becomes the owner of a sure winner he has reason to be convinced that he has done something in his spare time. Admittedly the reward is small; indeed, the prize-money is miserable, and takes away all the glory. Just imagine breeding the champion, and only getting a paltry fourteen shillings as premier prize! With success at every exhibition, showing does not pay a fancier's railway fares, excess for boxes, membership, entrance fees, loss of work visiting shows, and other incidental outlays exhaust the income, tempting the winner to say: Is it worth while to do a bit of winning? Of course, wins help the sale of the other stock and forms an inducement for one to persevere. Another consideration not to be overlooked is the cheap class of special prizes awarded. It would be an eye-opener were the actual cost of some of the special prizes labelled on the articles. A generous donor could lift up the Fancy, but where will he come from? There are strong men in the Fancy, and they will continue to breed something worthy of their strength of character.

Scotch Fancy.

The Proposed Border Fancy Club for the North.

Sir,—Seeing an article under the above heading in last week's Cage Birds, I am prompted to ask the following question: Is there not a Specialist Club in existence, to wit, the Border Fancy Canary Club, with Mr. Jamieson, of Hawick, acting as secretary? This is an old-established society of some twenty years' standing, and I believe it has a roll of membership numbering over 300. Surely it would be better for fanciers to join the above rather than endeavour to form a separate society, especially seeing the one in existence is in a flourishing condition, and governed by a tip-top set of fanciers? I believe they are willing to grant their patronage to any show that will provide a classification covering each variety. But perhaps Mr. Jamieson will oblige fanciers in general by giving a few details of the working of the Border Fancy Canary Club. It seems to me we can have too many societies aiming at the one object, in which case it is like a house divided aganst itself, and sooner or later the said house falls. The Green Borders have been taken into the Green Canary Association, and, judging by the results of last show season, there should be some large classes in the near future. The undersigned will have pleasure in giving any information regarding the Green Section of the "wee gems," and there is no doubt a lot of good could be done in the shape of having a set of show regulations laid down, such as standard cages, etc. At present you have only to visit a show to see quite a number of sizes and patterns in the cages benched. If a specialist club grants its patronage to a show the first thing to stipulate is that every exhibit should be staged in similar cages. If this were done, it would do away with a lot of grumbling, and would enhance the appearance of the exhibits. What can be better than uniformity? It would be well-nigh impossible for fanciers to patronise, say, three societies in different parts of the country at the same time; consequently, if the exhibits were split up, the classes would suffer all round. If needs be, North and South Sections could be arranged, but unless the reins were held by a committee prepared to carry out the rules without fear or favour, it would result in disaster. I would like to hear the views of exhibitors. These are the men we want, not the stay-at-homes; one good exhibitor is worth a field full of the former. And what delights the genuine fancier more than to see his bird placed at the head of a large class? There is very little honour attached to a win in a class where every bird has a card.

Geo. Green,

Hon. Sec., Green Canary Association.

36, Lord Nelson Street, Liverpool.

Sir,—In reference to the above, we have been requested to call a meeting to consider same for eight o'clock on May 20, at the Lockhart's Monument, Granger Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne. So will fanciers of the Border Fancy Canary please attend, and let us have a full meeting?

Under the White Rose.

THE Bradford Cinderella Club Show Committee has, after a lapse of a few years, been resuscitated, and in fine style, too. It looks as if the Committee will be stronger and better than heretofore, and if all comes to a head that has been proposed, there is a goodly prospect before them. In the first place, three officials have only to be mentioned to show that all will be well. Mr. H. H. Towers (the Yorkshire Union President) has accepted the position of Chairman, and Mr. H. Hill, and Mr. F. Hammond (sec. and treasurer respectively of the Y.U.) have undertaken the combined duties of secretary and treasurer. They will be backed by a strong committee, a number of whom have already been chosen, and as the Bradford East O.S. have given up their show date, Dec. 9th, for the Cinderella Show, their committee have been co-opted to assist in the work. Along with these, each Society in the district, and also the Specialist Clubs, have been invited to send two representatives to the committee.

NOW there need be no fear but that we shall this year for certain have a big show, and there is every probability that a good surplus will be handed over to the Cinderella Club. Thus the fanciers of the district will be doing their share towards looking after the interests of the poor children of the city, and also much will be done to advance the interests of the Fancy amongst people who never see or hear of it in the way they should do. It is the intention of those interested to have a show on a large scale, in fact, on national lines, and therefore those that cannot be approached on the basis of the Cinderella Club, can probably be approached on the basis of a big show. It will be held in the most central place that can be obtained.

BRADFORD WEST had a good night last Saturday, when they made no fewer than fourteen new members. They are thus able to have full representation on the Council of the Union; quite like old times! They seem like to be "bucking up" and getting as strong as ever. They are working hard for it, and their secretary is tackling things in quite a business-like style, while he is ably assisted by many of the other officials.

THE Open Norwich Plainhead Club held their first committee meeting of the year on the 13th inst., to make the preliminary arrangements for next season's prizes and competitions. By all appearances the Club will go stronger than ever, and the competitions be keener than ever, and those societies who would like the patronage had better apply in good time. I can tell you there will be no "whip up" required to get the desired number of shows

Wild-Bird Life.

A Wagtail's Nesting Place.

The nesting of birds is now in full swing. The majority of the feathered tribe incubate in the "merrie month of May." Of course, the Warblers are somewhat backward, as they failed to find the shores of Britain until rather later than usual; but as the bulk of them are in high condition when commencing the journey they are, after a few days' rest, quite fit to pair and nest; and it is therefore no unusual sight to see the Martins and Swallows collecting materials from the puddles in the roadway for the repair of the old nests within a week of their first appearance. These birds undoubtedly return to their old homes year after year, and if one can only judge by the gay twittering talk that goes on when a pair just returned cling to the old home, it appears more than probable that in their own way they are pleased to find themselves back again to familiar haunts. In very dry weather these birds find a difficulty in securing the mud with which to build, and after the water cart has passed along the road it is not uncommon to see quite a crowd of them settle around a small pool, twittering and calling as though telling the laggards to come and share in the find. The work of repair and building is only carried on in the morning, and the portion done is allowed to harden during the day, so that it is strong enough to receive another layer upon the following day. A pair of Pied Wagtails occasionally visit the writer's garden, and although he suspected they had a nest somewhere in the vicinity, it was some time before it could be located. These birds as a rule select a site well protected from view, and this proved to be no exception. A hole in a wall about seven feet from the ground appeared to suit them, but as there was higher ground handy from which a full view of the nest could be obtained, a broken brick was placed in front of it, so as to screen it effectually, and yet leave room for the bird to enter. This she continues to do, as the nest and its contents were not in any way interfered with. While searching for the Wagtails' nest, no less than three Robins' homes containing eggs were found in old tins. If a suitable one is placed where these birds frequent, they cannot possibly resist such a tempting site, and in most cases take possession at once.

The Most Beautiful Nests.

The Long-tailed Tits' and the Chaffinches' nests are considered the most beautiful of any built by British birds. In the course of construction the Tits' nest closely resembles the Finches', especially when half-built; but when she proceeds to add the dome it quite alters the character of the whole affair.

The Artful Starling.

Starlings are common everywhere; which is not surprising, for in building their homes they are very careful to get well out of sight and out of reach. A reader knows of a dozen nests in old trees, but in not one case is he able to handle the eggs; they are either too deep or the entrance is too small.

Note on the Peregrine.

The Peregrine is now confined to the cliffs by the sea, where he builds in security. He does no harm, contenting himself with the ample booty the cliffs and shores afford. When a pair have once selected a nesting site, they and their descendants will occupy the eyrie year after year. When falconry was at its height these breeding places were well known and jealously guarded. The penalty for stealing the young was very heavy, and somewhat barbarous.

In the Courts.

A London Man Sentenced

Warwick Rayner, described as an agent and collector, 95, Maria Street, Kingsford Road, London, was charged on May 1st, at Macclesfield, on warrant, with stealing by false pretences four Lizard Canaries, value 18s., the property of Julia A. Brooks, on the 27th March. —Mr. H. G. Barclay defended.

For the prosecution several witnesses were called from Macclesfield, London, Salop, and Liverpool, who stated that they advertised birds and poultry for sale in various papers. They received a reply from the prisoner, asking them to send several birds on approval, with a promise of a good order if satisfactory. The birds were sent to the prisoner's address in London, but the people did not hear any further from him, nor did they receive payments for their birds. Prisoner was arrested by Detective-Sergeant Cox, of the Metropolitan Police. When arrested he became very violent, and was conveyed to the police station with the assistance of two other officers. At his room was found a mass of correspondence relating to bird dealing.

Mr. H. G. Barclay, for the defendant, argued that, although prisoner might have committed a moral offence, there was no offence in law, because the prosecutor was not induced to part with the birds in consequence of any statement from the prisoner of some pretending fact made for that purpose, and therefore there was no case against him.

The magistrates considered the case proved, and sentenced prisoner to three months' hard labour.

How a Bird Business was Built Up.

A Visit to Mr. J. Thomas (Ambler Thorn).

Our Correspondent "Straight 'Un" has sent us the appended account of a visit he recently paid to Mr. Joe Thomas, the widely-known bird specialist, of Ambler Thorn, near Halifax.

Mr. Thomas, in his advertisement, always says, "Remember, I invite you to come and see my birds at any time, except Sundays," and as "Joe" advertises that he has thousands still on his premises, anyone who goes must be prepared to spend a little time there. I can vouch for that, as on the occasion of my visit I found there were nine rooms to go through that are given up entirely to birds of various kinds. Anyone going through the lot in search of some particular bird will have to put "all on" to sort it out in reasonable time; there are so many of them.

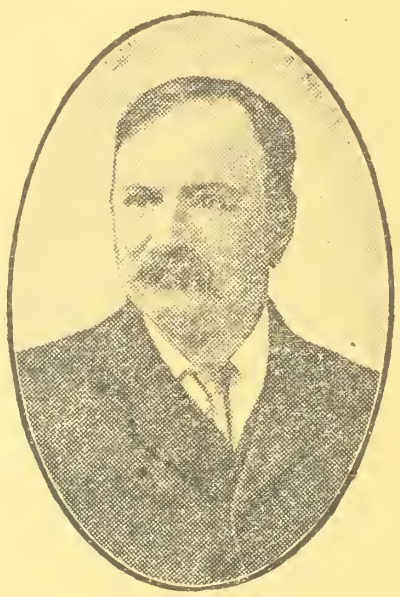
The System of Breeding.

Now I did not give Mr. Thomas much notice that I was going to pay him a visit; in fact, four hours after arranging with him I was there. We set out at once on a visit to the fifteen rooms where birds are being bred for him. All the birds are his property, and the breeders receive so much for every bird they get on to seed and deliver to him. They, of course, must not sell any birds, and I don't think they will; all are very decent fanciers, and are trusted with birds that are worth a little fortune. Just fancy going into a room where many of the birds have cost £10 or more each, and where a £6 bird is simply a stock bird! It is a great trust that "Joe" puts in his breeders, and they have their share of responsibility in the knowledge that their stocks are worth so much money; and each man is as eager to breed a winner as if the stock belonged to him.

The first place we looked in at is very pleasantly situated at the entrance to some large grounds. The birds will never be short of green-food here, no matter if the man breeds hundreds. And they will never be short of fresh air, either. I might say that all the breeders live around Queensbury and Ambler Thorn. All are within easy reach of one another, and situated on the heights between Bradford and Halifax; and if fresh air is to be had, it is to be found here—over 900 feet above sea-level. The first lots of birds I find consists of seventeen hens, and nearly as many cocks, part being Yorkshires, part Norwich; also three feeding hens. Some of the Yorkshire cocks, here have done well on the show bench during the past season, as also have a few of the Norwich; and with a bit of luck some winners should be turned out. All appeared to be going on nicely, and all were as clean as possible.

A little winding about through "ginnels" and "snickets" brought us to room No. 2, and here eight hens were up—all Norwich, and rattling good stuff; neatly built birds, cobby, brimful of colour. These cannot "miss," I think, though at the time of my visit they were not set going thoroughly. Several were, however, making signs that ere long housekeeping duties will be in full swing.

Our next place marked our only unfortunate time during the whole afternoon. Here, I understand, there are fifteen Norwich hens and some of the best cocks out, several having cost from £5 to £10. These could not be seen, as the gentleman in charge was out. He is an ardent cricketer, and was away playing with his team at the other side of the town. This, however, was our only miss.



Looking Forward.

Our next place was a delight. Here I found fifteen Yorkshire hens and the necessary cocks, nearly every bird a winner, and some big fine youngsters in nearly every cage. Crystal Palace winners are expected to be turned out here in numbers, and if the old ones are anything to go by, it should turn out so. The strange thing about it is that fanciers say good stuff takes some breeding Yet here, I think, we saw the best lot of birds of the afternoon, and they were going on the best of any. Of course, the breeder has had a lot of experience, and is evidently a "trier" of the first water. Moreover, I must not let the occasion pass without saying a word about the room. It was of grand size and light; and there was a splendid array of cages, all as clean as a new pin. There were, too, special sun blinds to regulate the light, and the ventilation was well looked after.

A few doors further away, and we went into another room containing from twelve to fifteen hens—a few nice Norwich and some Yorkshires. Here also a little crossing is going on. A neat buff Belgian cock had two bouncing buff Yorkshire hens to mate with, and a yellow Belgian hen was on the nest to a nice typical Yorkshire cock. These are put up to produce something to work on in the way of stock birds for next year. Half-bred Belgians are very useful in the breeding room; so the future is being well looked after. Things here were just beginning to move. A few hens were sitting, and others were just commencing housekeeping.

A walk round Queensbury cricket-field brought us to the next room. The fancier here is a new breeder, and he has up four pairs of smart Norwich that should turn out something good. Let us hope also that he has the beginner's luck, and is fortunate enough to top the average list.

Now across a field, and over a high wall (to cut a corner off), then across a hen run, and we found ourselves amongst the birds again. These were a mixed lot—some Norwich and some Yorkshires, about a dozen hens all told. Several of the Norwich pairs were exceedingly smart, and should, to all appearances, turn out some "clinkers"; whilst the Yorkshires were a nicely balanced lot. This room was peculiar, but a very good one. It is between two gable ends of houses that are about twelve feet apart. A floor has been fixed nearly level with the bedroom floors, and the top is like a greenhouse top—very lofty and well lighted. It was originally built for a joiner's shop. It makes an ideal bird room.

At our next place of call we found two rooms; each held nine or ten hens, all Yorkshires. In the first room several buff hens took my fancy. They were very neat and typical, and had good, long, raking mates. They were doing nicely. Here we saw the oldest youngsters; a few were already feathered, and looking very healthy. A few cages below some were already on the sticks—the first I had seen this season—and some others were just ready for "jumping." Both lots appeared as if they would do well, though a few youngsters had departed this life. But the man is lucky who can rear all.

The Fair Sex Scores.

Our next place I found was in charge of a lady. She had eleven hens, all Yorkshires, and is getting along nicely. Two young in one nest were nearly feathered, and looked like making fine long birds; others were growing fast, and the whole stock were good typical birds, that with luck should do well for both owner and breeder. This lady has also charge of three stock rooms, and is a valued servant of Mr. Thomas's. So we had a look through the stock rooms also. One room was all dismantled. The perches were all scrubbed, and seed boxes all cleaned, for the cages were being got ready for the youngsters as they came in from the breeders. In these they will be moulted. Some of the best of last season's birds were moulted here, nobody touching them except the lady in charge. The other two rooms were still occupied with stock, mostly Norwich, some real nice birds being amongst them, the noise they made testifying to the condition they were in. To keep birds in such a condition that have not been paired up is no easy matter. Cages in these rooms reach from floor to ceiling, and when full would easily hold from 500 to 600 birds. Now, however, many are getting empty, though some would be troubled at having so many birds on hand at this time of the year. Not so, Mr. Thomas; a few hundred more or less in stock do not make much difference to him.

Getting on to the Halifax Road we made a call, and this time found the birds were in a greenhouse. Nine hens here, all Yorkshires, except one pair (and a very nice pair too) of Norwich. This pair had a nest of three, just on the sticks. And likely looking birds they are, with plenty of timber in them even at this age; they will do doubt make up well. "Joe" thought them fine. Two good nests of Yorkshires were also on the sticks, and doing for themselves. One bird in particular looked promising, having plenty of leg; and it was of the "shooty" style.

We next visited three rooms, all in one fold. The first birds to be seen were a nice lot of seven hens; and several good stout pairs of Norwich, but these had hardly got going yet. Two good rounds are still possible, and I would like to hear of this breeder doing well. In a low-ceilinged house close by were a dozen or so Yorkshire pairs, and in an outbuilding opposite some twenty pairs of Norwich and Yorkshires; and amongst them were some "clinkers." One I noted specially: it was a big, slashing, uneven marked buff Yorkshire stock bird. It cannot help but breed some "rompers." Then there was an unflighted Norwich yellow cock, a noted winner, which had for mates two foul-marked buff hens—mother and daughter. The old hen bred sixteen young ones last year; so there should be something to show later on. There were many other noted birds in this room, but space forbids my saying more about them.

At Home.

Now, says Mr. Thomas, we will go home and see what is there. On arrival I found two other visitors waiting, one from Manchester and the other from somewhere t'other side of Todmorden; and they were straightaway taken into the two rooms adjoining the house, the one on the ground floor having a good supply of Norwich in it, and some feeding hens, perhaps 100 to 150; I didn't count them! Upstairs was a big lot of birds, Norwich and Yorkshires mostly; grand stock birds, and I was shown a few youngsters that were put "up at the top," out of the way. Mr. Thomas intended keeping them over to grow a bit. Several were very smart yellow Yorkshires, that may "do the trick" next year; and some were neat typical Norwich, just a bit on the small side. Across the road, a little further on, are two large rooms full of birds, Norwich and Yorkshires predominating, but with a good few Borders, Crests, and other varieties of Canarics. Then a room is given over below to Goldfinches—big Siberians, well on seed, singing away to their hearts' content. Also here a very smart Greenfinch, a Hawfinch, some Mules, etc., were to be seen. The Rollers are kept in a cosy little place. These, I was informed, were English bred; therefore the heating apparatus had been dispensed with, as they had been reared in a cold room. Another room here was in the throes of cleaning; and every year as the stock gets thinned down each room in turn goes through the same process. This cleaning down must be a big undertaking, quite on a par with the size of the business. Fancy! nine rooms to go through. One is more than enough for the average person. Here also is the washing room, where the show birds are put through the wash; and a special man is engaged for the purpose. There is also convenience for washing cages, etc.

A Welcome Interval.

The tea was ready for us on our return; in fact, I think it had been waiting quite a while! We were quite ready for it, too. The walk, though not a great distance, took up a considerable time, and one's appetite got a healthy edge. Naturally, during tea the conversation turned to birdy matters, and the time passed pleasantly, and all too quickly. Mrs. Thomas was a very kindly hostess, and if I had not had a good tea I could only have blamed myself.

We next paid attention to the office, which is fitted up with all conveniences—typewriter, desks, duplicator, files for letters, etc. The work herein is done by two lady clerks, one a shorthand writer and typist, under the direction of Mr. Thomas and one of his assistants.

Leaving here we wended our way to the last breeding room on the list, situated on the elevated part known locally as "The Mountain" (which is quite a fact, as it is over 1,000 feet above sea level, and in winter is as bleak as bleak can be). Here several pairs of grand Norwich are up, though they had not made great headway; still, it does not pay to start too early up here. We made another call to see if the gentleman we had missed had got home again; but they must have had a lot of scoring in the match, as he had not yet returned, and we had perforce to give it up as a bad job, though, considering no notice had been given, we were very fortunate to find fourteen out of the fifteen at home on such a splendid day—continual sunshine the whole time. If weeks had been taken up in making the arrangements it could not have been better.

Pure Air Provided.

Fresh pure air is found in all the stock rooms, and the system of ventilation adopted is a good one. Of course, there is one great advantage—all the property wherein these rooms are situated is Mr. Thomas's own, so he can do as he likes with it. Where there are fireplaces the chimneys are used as ventilators. The "breasts" are broken through so as to allow any quantity of fresh air into the rooms; the only precaution is to see that the draught does not blow direct on to the cages. Cold is not taken into consideration at all. No matter if the water freezes in winter the birds will not take any harm. Direct draughts are the only thing to be avoided. Then, in other rooms, ventilators are put into the windows; another idea in use is a system of pipes about five inches in diameter, which are brought from the outside, and allow the air to come through into the rooms. The air comes from the Ogden Moors (well known as the Bronte country).

The water glasses in some of the rooms took my fancy. They are very big, and the water will, of course, keep much sweeter, the larger the quantity. (though it must not be thought they do not get it fresh of'en). A big staff attend to the wants of the birds. This past winter eight people have had a hard task to keep up with the work entailed in looking after great numbers of birds like these—as many as 5,000 birds being in stock at one time. And the seed bill; well, it must be a big one, though, of course, all food stuff is bought direct, and in very large quantities. Even the "tit-bits" are bought in hundredweights at a time. Different this to "A pound of mixed seed, please"! Mr. Thomas has also a shop in Halifax. He can supply everything that is required by a fancier, whether he keeps Canaries, British, or any other birds. A glance through his catalogue is most instructive, and will assure anyone of this.

How to Get There.

Mr. Thomas lives in a road on the tram route between Bradford and Halifax, a little nearer Halifax than Bradford. Anyone from a distance must take the Queensbury car from either place, and get off at Ambler Thorn, and there you are. The trams pass the door. It is over thirty years since Mr. Thomas established himself in the Fancy, and words are a poor means of impressing upon anyone the magnitude of his business undertaking. But all bird-keepers, he assured me, are welcome to see it for themselves.

Although Mr. Thomas has been in the Fancy for so long a time, it is only during the last three or four years that he has been smitten with the "exhibiting fever." There is no doubt he has "got it bad," and he contracted it whilst exhibiting in the Yorkshire Union novice classes. Once having got into it, there is to be no backing out now. It will have been noticed that he has during the last season done well; and he is now working hard preparing for next season's fray. The birds he has out breeding (and there are about 150 pairs, at a rough guess) are some of the best to be had, and they have been sorted out by Mr. Thomas, assisted by two well-known fanciers, both of whom have great experience in matching pairs. It is now in the hands of the breeders to do the best they can, but, should they fail, there are numbers of the old ones that will take some stopping. I may say that it was his intention at the beginning to win some of the large trophies of the Yorkshire clubs, and he still adheres to this; and with a bit of good luck with the stock he has up he will take some stopping.

A Humble Beginning.

It is many years since Mr. Thomas gave up his occupation as a mechanic. He worked for a firm that unfortunately "went under." but that did not trouble him; he simply went in for the bird trade, and has never had any reason to regret the step he took. Things have gone well with him, for which he has to thank his business instincts, coupled with his capability for hard work, and his determination. He had to go to work at the age of eight, and at the age of ten he went into the pit as a hurrier lad. No education at all in those days was to be had. He had not even learned to read when he started work—what he knows he had to learn later in life, and even then he had not the chance of getting more than a meagre grounding of education. This reminds me of a picture I often see—a cartoon on education, where a stout, well-groomed gentleman, with a big, heavy watch chain and seal, is making the remark: "Eddication be blowed! I made my brass baht eddication at all." And it appears that it does not take education to succeed. Mr. Thomas has done well without it; and so have others.—"Straight 'Un."

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS. The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

ON VIEW—10 TONS ROYAL RED.

THE ONLY REAL COLOUR FOOD ON EARTH.

Read below for Proof.

Send your orders, or for new samples, at once. Sure to run short, and can't get any more this season. There's a great scarcity in new crop. Mr. J. E. Davies, Stockport, May, 1911.—"Sir, I have much pleasure in saying that your colour food has during the past year given me every satisfaction, having secured over 50 firsts, also seconds, etc., besides N.P.C. Challenge Cup. This is second year in succession. Two firsts, fourth, and champion diploma Crystal Palace, 1911, and my birds were as bright a colour at Crystal Palace after being washed eleven times as they were at commencement of season. At Crystal Palace six out of the eight champion first prize Norwich." Never saw any colour food, only my Royal Red. Every winner in champion Cinnamon section bar one third. Never saw any but my colour food. Another big winner in Yorkshires, who won two firsts, seconds, etc. Mr. Ambler, Morecambe, writes: "April, 1911.—Sir, I can say I got a better colour from your feed than any I have ever tried." Scotland's greatest winner this last season. Mr. G. Mitchell, Brechin, writes: April, 1911.—"I have used your colour feed for years, and have found it to be all that you claim." Wales' greatest winner, Mr. D. H. Tedstone, Brecon: "Sir, I am pleased to inform you that I not only won the Welsh Cage Bird Cup, I won the solid silver Norwich Cup, the Leach Challenge Cup scores of firsts and specials, etc." I could fill this paper with testimonials like above; which should prove you need not try any other. Prices: Royal Red, 2/- lb., 2 lbs. 3/6, 5 lbs. 7/6, 14 lbs. 17/-; Hot Natal, 2/- lb., 2 lbs. 3/8. Established 1879. SANDIFORD, Colour Food King, PRESTON, LANCS.

The British Bird Manual.

By H. NORMAN. The most thorough and practical work on British Birds ever produced. Published in two parts and complete bound in cloth.

Part I.—Hardbills,—Deals in the fullest manner with Linnets, Goldfinches, Bullfinches, and all other varieties of Finches. Part II.—Softbills.—With Blackbirds, Thrushes, Jackdaws, Larks, and most of the more commonly kept species of insectivorous birds.

This work, lucidly written by a noted specialist, contains fullest directions for Hand-rearing, Keeping, and Exhibiting the most popular of our British Birds. Each bird is dealt with separately, its nesting habits, etc., are fully explained, and these, together with a description of its general characteristics, will enable the novice to easily identify the various species. Each part contains a coloured plate and numerous black and white illustrations by the author.

Price complete, bound in cloth, 2/-, post free 2/3; in parts 1/-, post free 1/1, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

A Little Knowledge is a Dangerous Thing, and will certainly not bring you success if you are beginning the hobby of Canary breeding. It is ever so much more pleasing to turn your hobby to practical benefit to yourself than to aimlessly dabble with and make a hash of it. Do the latter and you might just as well have flung away the money you laid out. Get a sound knowledge of the branch of the bird Fancy you are about to adopt, and you will profit by it. You can do so for 6d. A book specially written for the beginner is Claude St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners." It has many helpful illustrations. BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or grecu Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks' trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle," now containing 168 pages. This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot owners. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead, and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds; full of extremely valuable hints.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3½d.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages, and many invaluable "Hints for Emergencies."

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1½. By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book many times over.

THE HYGIENE OF BIRD-KEEPING, 1/1.—By W. Geo Creswell, M.D. Thoroughly treats of modern hygiene (the science of health) in bird-keeping.

SEPTIC FEVER OR CANARY PLAGUE, 7d.—By R. H. Clarke, M.D. The only booklet published concerning this dread disease, which Dr. Clarke has given very special study.

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and illustrations from photographs. Another charming gift book.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and 12 words of description, 250 2/-. 500 carriage paid.

OBITUARY.

Mr. JOS. OSTLE (Great Broughton).

I am very sorry to have to inform you, writes Mr. J. Ellwood (Cockermouth), of the death of an old fancier here in Cumberland, namely, Mr. Jos. Ostle, who died at Great Broughton on May 9, aged 67 years. He was interred at Brigham on May 11, being laid by the side of his wife, who predeceased him by 9 years. It was a large funeral, a few old fancier friends turning up, some from a considerable distance, including Mr. Armstrong (Whitehaven), Messrs. Robertson and Templeton (Harrington), and others from Crostbwaite, Maryport, etc. He was well known as a lover of a good Norwich Canary (in which variety he held a strong hand, locally at any rate). You could always rely on seeing a good hen or two when visiting him. He was an enthusiastic Oddfellow, being secretary to the local club, for many years also a prominent member of the Broughton Working Men's Institute, and a member of the Cockermouth Board of Guardians up to the time of his death. Whatever Joe took in hand he put his heart into. Much sympathy is felt for his only daughter and other relations in their trouble.

Mr. JOHN TAIT (Jarrow-on-Tyne).

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. Robt. Blore, Sec. of the Jarrow and Hebburn C.B.F.S., that I have to inform you of the death of one of our oldest members—Mr. John Tait—after a very short illness. Mr. Tait had a paralytic stroke the week previous, and gradually became worse. Deceased leaves a widow and family to mourn his loss, to whom the members of the club tender their sympathy in their sad bereavement.

Mr. Wm. SAUNDERS (Felinfoel).

I deeply regret having to inform you, writes Mr. T. J. Davies, Hon. Sec. Felinfoel C.B. and P.S., of the death of one of our esteemed and oldest members, Mr. William Saunders, who died on May 15 in his 75th year. He has been in failing health for a long time, and for the last few days he was in very great pain, from which death released him. He was one of the founders of the society, and remained an active member up to the time of his death. He was widely known as a breeder and exhibitor of cage birds, etc., but devoted his last years mostly to cage birds. His presence will be sadly missed at many local shows, as he has attended almost every one locally for many years. At our meetings we shall feel our loss. He was an enthusiastic member, and was always listened to with utmost respect; and his words of counsel were always accepted with gratitude. He leaves two sons, to whom we extend a heartfelt sympathy.

Mr. A. SPENCER (Doncaster).

It is with the deepest regret, writes Mr. G. Bescoby, Sec. of the Doncaster and Dist. C.B.S., that I have to inform you of the death, on May 22, of our worthy and esteemed president, Mr. A. Spencer, after a serious operation. Mr. Spencer was widely known as a Yorkshire and Norwich Canary fancier, and much respected; and I am sure all fanciers will join us in sympathising with Mrs. Spencer and family.

Mr. S. E. TONKIN (Cardiff).

It is with deepest regret, writes Mr. J. W. Dummett, secretary of the Cardiff and Dis. C.B.S., I have to report the death of our treasurer, Mr. S. E. Tonkin, at the early age of 26. On Thursday last he was out in his garden, where he caught a chill. Pneumonia set in, and he passed away on May 22. His death came so suddenly to us members that we none of us even knew of his illness; and we know only too well the loss it will be to the society. A young fancier, and very keen in the welfare of the society, his heart was always in his work. He has been a clerk to the London and North-Western Railway Co. for some few years, and was highly respected by all who knew him. The burial took place on May 23 at Abergavenny. I am sure all fanciers will join with me in extending sympathy towards the wife and family.

The Language of Doves.

Mr. Sibillot, described as an eminent French "columbophile," claims to have mastered the language of Doves, says the Paris correspondent of the "Daily Telegraph." From what he tells us of it, their billing and cooing seems less melodious than we had hitherto supposed. The following is a short vocabulary: "Ahis": "I love you." "Ooohoo": "I am pleased." "Brrroo": "I am very handsome." "Vroof": "I am afraid." "Broo coo": "I am angry." "Rrrooff": "Get away." Finally, when a Turtle-dove pays court to his sweetheart he murmurs, "Ha! Broo coo too kroor," and the lady "twigs" at once!

Poor Birds!

There is a very remarkable plant which grows in the colony of Natal, according to the "Eastern Guardian." Its popular name is the "corpse plant." It grows to a very considerable size, and its principal feature is a bell-shaped throat, something like the flower of an arum lily, but much larger and deeper, and opening into a hollow stem. It is almost black in colour, and covered with a thick, glutinous secretion. Its principal characteristic is its loathsome odour, strongly resembling that of decaying carrion. By means of this it attracts carrion-feeding birds to it. Once they alight on it, they are lost. Their claws become entangled in the secretion, the bell-shaped mouth folds up, and they are literally swallowed, feathers and all, and digested by juices secreted in the throat of the plant.

The Shows.

WALTHAMSTOW F.A.

Very successful table show of British held May 18th, at headquarters, the Workman's Hall. Some nice birds were put down. Mr. Billingsley judged. Mr. W. Hellens was awarded special for best bird in show.

GREENFINCH: 1, spl, 2, 3, vhc, Hellens; res., Pettit. LINNET: 1, 2, Hellens; 3, Pettit. REDPOLL: 1, Pettit; 2, 3, Hellens. A.O.S.: 1, Webb; 2, 3, Hellens.—H. C. Cooper, Hon. Sec.

DARLINGTON C.B.S.

Meeting held May 17th by a very excellent gathering of members. Mr. J. Paterson, on taking the chair, said that so many putting in appearance proved that the interest in the society was keen, and that all were doing their best to make it a success. The novices were very busy, as we had a table show of two British classes for novices. A judging competition followed, for which there were ten entries. Mr. M. Cornor was the winner, giving the nearest result to the judge's slip. Next meeting: Classification for nest feather show and the date for ramble. There is yet time for intending members to join and take part in the first feather show.

LINNET, ETC.: 1, spl, 4, Burton Bros.; 2, vhc, Gregnry; 3, Lawrence; hc, Grainger. A.O.S. BRIT.: 1, spl, 3, Lawrence; 2, Burton Bros.; 4, Grainger. Mr. R. Todd judged.—H. Todd, Sec.

SOMERSTOWN.

The Seymour Arms, Seymour-street, Somerstown, London, N.W. is open for singing contests. We had the first match on May 21st. The winner was D. Lewis; 2, 3, Pony Moore. Handicaps Tuesdays and week-ends. We had a very full house. No birds are barred—open to all comers.—P. Moore, Sec.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Quality Linnet singing contest held Prince Albert Hotel, May 21, when some very good singing was heard. Result: 1, Chippendale; 2, Sedars; 3, Madden. Judges, Messrs. Harry Allen and A. Binns.—J. Smith, Hon. Sec.

YORK.

Weekly Linnet singing contest held St. Lawrence Working Men's Club, Lawrence Street, when 19 birds competed. Some excellent singing was heard. Result: 1, J. Lee; 2, J. Firth; 3, W. Weaver; 4, J. Walker; 5, G. Gurden. Mr. Jackson kindly judged, and Mr. A. Kirby was timekeeper.—J. W. Smith, Sec.

GLASSHOUGHTON.

Glasshoughton and District Linnet Club open contest held West Riding Hotel May 21st, when we had the value of 10s. for special prize. We had 35 entries (1min. face, and 1 min. bluff). Mr. Kirk was 1st and 2nd, 51; J. Higgins 3rd, 46; Britt Nelson, 4th, 37sec. Mr. B. Midgley (Great Houghton) gave us an address and 2s. 6d. for another special prize, and we had a pleasant afternoon.—R. Taylor, Sec.

SALFORD.

We want all intending members who gave their names to join Salford Linnet Club, to meet at the Boat House Hotel, Oldfield Road, on May 28, at 7.30, to decide about a contest with members at an early date, with a view to having regular contests. Will fanciers kindly send postcard whether it is convenient to attend. Address, B. Wharton, 18, Mitton Street, Stanley Grove, Longsight.

DURHAM.

Linnet sing held Travellers' Rest, May 13, when 32 birds entered. Result: 1, 2, Wilson and Adams; 3, Boyd; 4, McQuirk. Also May 20, the Black Horse Elvet, where 16 birds sang. Result: 1, Foster; 2, 3, Feany; 4, McQuirk. Mr. G. Reed (Brandon) judged both contests. Timekeeper, Mr. J. Walton. Next contest, Black Horse, Elvet, May 28, when a cup valued £3 3s., and other prizes, will be given.—D. Trotter, Sec.

BLACKBURN.

Blackburn quality Linnet S.A. held usual singing contest for quality last week-end: 1, and sp, W. H. Topping; 2, E. Ashton; 3, E. Christopherson. 21 birds competed. The special prize was given by Mr. Lucas. Timekeeper, Mr. G. Lomax. Open-to-all-England contest for time and quality at Old Red Lion, Snig Brook, Whit-Saturday, June 3rd. Hoping all Linnet fanciers will come in good numbers.—G. Slater, Sec.

LEEDS.

Leeds Linnet F.A. quality singing contest held King's Head, Shannon Street, May 20, when 23 birds entered for four good prizes. Visitors came from Lancashire and all parts of Yorkshire. After very good singing the result was: 1, W. Farrow; 2, W. Siesons; 3, A. Butler; 4, J. Green. Judges, Messrs. S. Hardcastle, T. Johnson, and W. Naylor. Also May 21, when 35 birds faced the judges, Messrs. W. Naylor, Wilson Naylor, and S. Butterfield: 1, Appleyard; 2, 3, shared by A. Richardson and J. Bland; 4, W. Sissons.—Wm. Sissons, Hon. Sec.

HULL.

Hull L.F.A. held great open-to-all-England contest headquarters, Cartmans' Arms, Canning Street, off Brook Street, May 20, when some very good singing was heard. 1st, cup and championship, Fred Allen; 2nd (copper kettle), Broadbent; 3rd (vases), Norton; 4th (clock), Eccles; 5th (jam dish), Clark; 6th (clock), Dearlove; 7th (clock), Wakeling; 8th (clock), Mitchell. Also week-end contest, when 21 birds entered. 1st, Norton; 2nd, Eccles; 3rd, Broadbent. Judges, Messrs. Thundercliffe, Broadbent.—F. Allen, Hon. Sec.

LEIGH.

Extra Club contest, held May 30, Headquarters, Globe Inn. We had a grand entry of some 42 birds, and some very good singing for quality, but very poor for time. It seems all our time birds have gone off song. We gave 10 prizes 5 for time and 5 for quality—and our members were so pleased that we have decided to give prizes this week-end instead of money, as some would sooner have prizes. I hope all fanciers will note that we hold open-to-all England contest, May 27, Headquarters. I am sure the prizes we are giving will surprise all. We hope to break all records.—J. M'Allister, Sec.

CAGE BIRDS, 154 Fleet Street, London, E.C.

CASTLEFORD.

Open-to-all-England contest, held May 20. It was very well attended. We had visitors from all the leading Linnet clubs in Yorkshire to hear 56 birds sing for three good prizes. After a very close sing, the winners were: 1, S. Morley; 2, W. Nelson; 3, T. Dobson (Leeds), 4, T. Piper. Mr. B. Midgley (Great Houghton Club) gave us their views re getting a challenge cup to be competed for amongst all the time singing clubs of England. Should this meet with the approval of any of the time singing clubs, I should like to hear from their secretary.—Walter Dobson, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD.

Linnet singing contest held headquarters, Fitzwilliam Hotel, Milford Street, Attercliffe Common, May 20, when Mr. J. Grundy gave three special prizes (3 minutes' singing). 26 birds entered:—1, Thompson, 84sec.; 2, Watson, 68sec.; 3, Robinson, 61sec.; Worrall, 54sec.; Worrall, 54sec.; Watson, 47sec.; Driver, 52sec. May 21, also, Mr. J. Grundy gave 3 special prizes (3 minutes' singing), when 18 birds entered. 1, Watson, 73sec.; 2, Wadd, 62sec.; 3, Thompson, 51sec; Thompson and T. Robinson 46sec. each. Contest every week-end.—A. Browne, Sec.

Club Reports.

LANCASTER PRIMROSE C.B.A.

A most successful meeting was held May 13th, when Mr. Mullinor gave us a splendid lecture on Canaries and British Birds. This association is now under new management, and we wish to thank all exhibitors for their patronage. We hope to make new friends from all parts. We hope also to have a record show this year. Will any friends, having the welfare of the society at heart, and who would like to become members, kindly send their names and addresses on to me?—J. Johnson (45, Perth-street, Moorlands, Lancaster).

LONDON & PROVINCIAL O.S.

Meeting held May 18th, headquarters. A large number of members and visitors turned up to hear Mr. Robson deliver a lecture on "The Yorkshire Canary." This proved most interesting and instructive, proof of which was found by the very numerous and animated questions and remarks which followed. Questions were asked by Messrs. Crabb, Mortlock, Couzens, Matthes, Bamber. The following were elected members:—The Hon. Mrs. Bourke and Mr. P. H. Harris. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Robson and to Mr. Crabb, the chairman.—C. W. Law, Sec.

MANCHESTER & N. COUNTIES O.S

General meeting held May 15th, headquarters. After the usual business our worthy president (Mr. Bladon) gave us a paper on the Cinnamon Canary and the uses of Cinnamon blood, which proved very interesting. Mr. Bladon told us what was wanted, and the best way to get it; also the benefits derived from the use of the Cinnamon in other varieties. After the lecture he was asked a lot of questions which he answered to everybody's satisfaction. A vote of thanks to Mr. Bladon brought the meeting to a close. The next meeting night falling on Whit Monday, I am calling it for next Monday, May 29th, when I hope as many as possible will attend to make the classification for F.F. Show.—H. Boothman, Hon. Sec.

ILFORD AND DISTRICT F. & F.S.

General meeting held White Horse Hotel, May 9th, Mr. J. Smith in chair. The names of several judges for second monthly young stock and annual shows were put forward and the secretary instructed to write the same for terms, etc., the final selection to be made at next meeting, May 30. The new members elected:—Messrs. H. D. Cockman (Upminster), A. J. Matthews (Witham), H. C. Wood (Ilford), Jack Poel (Romford), J. Reed (Leytonstone), C. Small (Ilford), S. Summerhill (Ilford), Tomson (Seven Kings), and W. Smith (Forest Gate). At the termination of the general business a very interesting lecture was delivered by Mr. W. L. Rae, the subject being "Thirty Years in the Feathered Fancy." Although there was a very poor attendance, it was thoroughly appreciated by the members and their friends, as signified by the hearty vote of thanks accorded the lecturer at the conclusion.—J. H. Priestman, Hon Sec.

CODNOR PK. & EASTWOOD C.B.S.

Will members kindly refer to Rule 3 in new rule book, and Rule 4 old rule book, re subscription, so as to enable them to compete for the two gold medals for most points at the two first feather shows June 3rd, Three Tuns Inn, Eastwood, and July 15th Portland Arms, Jacksdale. Those who have not received schedule please apply for one, also those who have not received new rule card. We have made a good classification, so please show appreciation by entering a few birds, seeing that it is the first cage bird show ever held in Eastwood, Notts (so I am informed). There are 5 Nor., 6 Yorks., 3 Crest, 2 A.O.V. Can., 2 Mule or Hybrid, 2 Novice, and 9 British classes. Entrance fee, 1s. per cage. Mr. J. Acritt will judge. The show is open to all (except the novice classes, which are members only), birds to be staged by 12.30 p.m. There is an error in schedule in not stating that 12.30 p.m. is the time fixed for entries closing on show day. Schedules will be sent to any fancier requiring one.—J. H. Mitchell, Sec. (South-street, Greenhill-lane, Alfreton).

EDINBURGH AND DIST. C.B.S.

Meeting held Cairns Hall, Gorgie Road, May 16th—president, Mr. Charleton, presiding over a very large attendance. A report and letter were read regarding staging for annual show; this matter was, however, left over until Sept. meeting for further report. The classification of annual show came up for discussion, sub-committee's recommendations being unanimously adopted. The following is the order of classification:—Novice section, 13 classes, Crested 5, Border Fancies 14, Scotch Fancies 5, British and Foreign 15, Mules and Hybrids 4. A suggestion to include sweepstake classes failed to receive support. The judges' names will be announced immediately terms and arrangements have been completed. Decided to tender applications for the patronage of the Border Fancy Club, Scottish Plainhead Club, and British Bird and M.C. Also to secure Hyde's, Ramsden's, and other specials. Agreed to have a hand washing exhibition at Sept. meeting, and to hold a table show of Canaries at Oct. meeting, open to professionals and novices, arrangements for same being left over until Sept. meeting. A paper was then read by Mr. A. W. Watson entitled "Mule and Hybrid Breeding." Mr. Watson received patient hearing and was accorded a hearty vote of thanks.—J. L. Mackie, Sec.

DERWENT VALLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held May 18th, Headquarters, Mr. Barkas in chair. Decided, to alter date of F.F. show from June 24th to July 15th, owing to the bad breeding results. The majority of our members are having a bad season so far.—J. Lindsay, Sec.

PONTYPRIDD & DIST. F. & F.S.

At the meeting held May 20th the name of the society was changed to the above. Councillor Daniel Arnott, J.P., was unanimously elected chairman. Also decided to hold a members' show in September, and the ordinary open show at the beginning of November. Six gentlemen were elected members.—A. A. Gordon McLucas, Hon. Sec.

SITTINGBOURNE & DIST. C.B.S.

The annual ramble takes place on June 4 (Whit-Sunday), meeting at Bell Lane at 5.30 p.m. With the kind permission of R. S. Pemberton, Esq., we journey to Sorry Hill Estate Woods, "doing" Mincing Woods first, then returning to Red Lion, Milsted, for cold meat breakfast. Then on again to Sweets Wood, working our way back to Minsted, and arriving home about 1 o'clock. All fanciers intending to join us should notify me at 13, High Street, Sittingbourne, not later than May 31. Breakfast 1s. 6d. All fanciers welcome.—B. Tidy, Hon. Sec.

METROPOLITAN C.B.A.

Meeting held May 20, All Saints' Parochial Hall, Battersea Park, Mr. Macgregor in chair. Two new members were nominated and accepted—Messrs. Smithers (Addlestone) and Robertson (Battersea). Annual show fixed for November 11. Mr. H. Norman being appointed to judge; he is also judging the first young bird show on June 24. Any member joining now will be eligible to compete for cups and other trophies, which it should be noted are to be won outright this year. Mr. G. Harwood, 9, Frere Street, Battersea, will give particulars to intending members.—J. W. Burgess, Assist. Sec.

DUNFERMLINE AND DIS. C.B.S.

Usual meeting held Co-operative Hall, 20th May, Mr. J. Rankine presiding. Owing to unforeseen circumstances, the date of the ramble has been put back to 3rd June. The outing will take place to Pitreavie, kindly granted by Mr. H. Beveridge and Mr. Wm. Robertson. We are leaving the top of New Road at 1.30, by car to Halbeath, meeting friends there from Hill of Beath, Cowdenbeath, etc. We start the ramble from there at two o'clock, having tea in Inverkeithing at six o'clock. The guide will be Mr. Hutton, head forester, and the leader for the day Mr. Wm. Malcolm. The young bird show was then fixed as follows: Date, 29th July, in the Co-operative Hall, at 4. Classification: Scot. Fcy. cock or hen, any col.; Nor. yell.; ditto buff; Crest; C.B.; Bord. Fcy. yell.; ditto buff; A.O.V. yell.; ditto buff: common Canary; self. class, A.V., price 10/-; light Mule or Hyb.; dark Mule; British hardbill; small softbill. Bunting included. Mr. W. Cullen will take the Canaries, and Mr. W. Malcolm the remainder. Entry money 6d. per bird, prize money paid from entries. Arrangements are now being made by the committee for the holding of the third annual show about the beginning of November. Three new members admitted to membership.—Robert T. Campbell, Secretary.

CITY OF BRADFORD O.S.

A "Smoker" and Presentation to the Secretary.

A "Smoker" and presentation to our secretary, on his return to health, after four months' absence, were held May 20, at headquarters, before a crowded room, which shows the popularity of Mr. Rhodes as secretary. Mr. W. Wharton (in the chair) opened the proceedings with a few remarks, and called on Mr. Ridewood to give a selection on the gramophone. This gentleman gave us several capital records during the evening. Mr. Gilbert gave us a song, which was accorded a well deserved encore. Mr. Irlam then gave us a stump speech, entitled "All is not gold that glitters"—something out of the ordinary, and very well spoken. Our old friend and member Mr. J. S. Clarkson said: Having been asked to say something, I will go some nine or ten years back. The society was good then, financially, but things seemed to go gradually backwards. How it went that way I can't say, but in a year or two the balance in the bank had been reduced almost to nothing. About this time a young member was put in charge of the secretary's position, and for months and months he stuck to his post. The outlook was very bad, but he plodded on, and at last the sun began to shine on his efforts. The same member still hold the reins with a banking account of £22. Four months ago he was stricken down, and had to go under a very serious operation. We are pleased to say it has been very successful, as you will see, he looks better than ever he did. Our acting secretary made a suggestion that we should, on our secretary's return, make some small recognition of his services. So the outcome of that suggestion, which you all so liberally supported, is this beautiful oak smoking cabinet, and I here congratulate the committee on their choice. I will therefore call on Mr. Rhodes to receive on behalf of the members of the City of Bradford O.S., this small recognition of his most valuable services for the past 5 years. I have performed many pleasing duties in my long experience with the society, but I must say none have given me greater pleasure than this. May he live long and happy to be able to cherish this one small token of the members. Mr. Rhodes replied: It gives me the greatest pleasure to be amongst you all once more, but this beautiful cabinet has nearly taken all the speech out of me. I have always tried to do my duty, but I cannot take all the honour, for without the splendid support of the members I could have done nothing. As for this present I am that taken aback I can hardly say anything, but I thank you one and all, and shall cherish it as long as I live. I thought this was only a "smoker" welcoming me back to health, so you will excuse my shortcomings. (We wil. forgive him.) Mr. Clarkson said it was Mr. Rhodes' abilities alone that had brought him the hearty support of the members. Mr. Barnes then gave a song, followed by Messrs. Irlam, J. Dennison, and Theaker, who contributed. Mr. F. Rhodes made his debut in "Somewhere" in fine style. Mr. Morement created an uproar with "Mother up-to-date." Mr. T. Forham moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Clarkson; Mr. F. Ludbrook seconded, Mr. Clarkson replying. Mr. J. Lane moved a vote of thanks to the artistes; Mr. Inman ably seconded. An item of business was the election of Messrs. J. R. Taylor and F. Rhodes as representatives on the Cinderella Fund Committee. This ended one of the most pleasant evenings we have ever had.—W. Morement, pro tem; J. Roe, Assist. Sec.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything.

DUBMIRE'S WORKING MEN'S CLUB C.B.S.

Very good meeting, held May 21. We settled the classes for the First Feather show, and appointed Mr. Widowfield (Tynedock) as judge. It is the same fancier as was talked about in last year's "Annual," by Mr. Hutchinson, of Newcastle.—E. Hann.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Fortnightly meeting held Fawcett Street Cafe, May 13, Mr. Farrer presiding over a good attendance. Decided, to hold our picnic at Corbridge on Whit Monday, providing there is an excursion on that day. Will all members who intend going kindly let me know at next meeting, on May 27?—J. Jeffrey, Sec.

RADFORD & DIST. (Notts.) O.S.

General meeting, May 9th, when the schedule for First Feather Show, for June 10th, was settled. Mr. T. Barker appointed judge. Classes included for novices only, and a medal given for most points in these classes. This course of letting novices compete among themselves will, we think, encourage young fanciers and increase our membership. A medal was also given for most points in other classes. Both medals were given by Mr. Oliver.—G. Lawrence, Sec.

CLYDEBANK AND DIST. C.B.C.

Meeting held Clydebank Shipyard Dining Hall, May 18, Mr. Sheriden presiding. A letter was read from our hon. president regretting he would be unable to be present owing to illness, but promising to assist us at an early date. Classification for first feather show fixed up, when it was arranged to give 4 classes for Nor. Plainheads (which is sure to be strong, this being the favourite variety amongst our members), and one class for each of the other varieties. Following new members proposed and seconded: Messrs. J. Robb and T. Spratt.—J. Hart, Sec.

EDINBURGH NORWICH C. & M.B.S

We have again engaged the Bucclench Parish Church Hall for the annual show on November 18, and have secured the services of the following gentlemen as judges: for Norwich, Mr. R. Martin (Kirkintilloch); for Border Fancy, Mr. H. Bennet (Kelso); and for British bird and Mule section, Mr. J. Pendrigh (Edinburgh). We have no meetings during June, July, and August; next meeting Sept. 7, 7 p.m., when Mr. Steel (Dalkeith) will give us a lecture on Foods and Fallacies. I am arranging a ramble to Musselburgh on June 24, when C. Sykes has kindly consented to show us around the district. Will members please note, and keep themselves clear for above dates.—J. Finnie, Sec.

ECCLES AND DISTRICT C.B.S

In commemoration of our first anniversary, we held on May 10th, at headquarters, a supper and smoking concert, kindly given by our worthy president, host, and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Tims. We had a most successful evening. A fair gathering of members and friends sat down, and after Professor Griffiths had passed the words of grace did full justice to a most excellent supper, which was a compliment to our hostess as a cook, and was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone. Our friend and able pianist, Mr. Shepley, opened the concert with an overture. We proceeded with excellent songs and music, for which the artistes were heartily applauded. Mr. Kilner, Mr. Shaw, Mr. Monk, and the pianist contributed. The concert was brought to a close by all singing "Auld Lang Syne," and the National Anthem. A vote of thanks was proposed to our host, hostess, and artistes, who responded with the toast of "The Society," and hoped that this would be one only of many such concerts.—H. W. Jones, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Meeting held May 17, Mr. T. C. Crawhall in chair. Decided, we require five championship and two novice classes for our patronage. Members requiring Ramsden's colour-food to state quantities they require to Mr. Crawhall at next meeting. That Ramsden's special be given for second best bird at challenge cup show; winner of challenge cup debarred; birds competing for this special to be fed on Ramsden's food. That diploma be given to winners of challenge cup and Ramsden's special. Medals to be given as in previous year. Decided to have subscriptions for championship trophy. The secretary in moving a vote of thanks to the chairman, Mr. Crawhall, made reference to the sad circumstances that had led to his parting with his stock, and thanked him on behalf of the members for all he had done for the society in the past, expressing the hope that the time was not far distant when he would be able to take up the Fancy again. The proposition met with a hearty response from the members, thus bringing to a close a very pleasant evening.—R. Tindale, Hon. Sec.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

An excellent concert (styled a "Coronation concert") in aid of the funds of the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S., was held at the headquarters of the society, the "Reindeer" Hotel, Rye-lane, Peckham, S.E., on May 22nd. Mr. John Bright Crowe, who presided, was supported by Messrs. R. L. Crisp (who acted as chairman when Mr. Crowe left at a late hour), H. E. Tringham and J. Robson. There was a very fine attendance, which included a large number of ladies. A capital programme was gone through, Mr. H. W. Tomsett (the popular assistant hon. secretary) being responsible for its arrangement.

The Chairman, in opening the proceedings, said that the society was in a very flourishing condition, and those who were at the head of affairs—Mr. Hodson (the secretary) and his fellow officers were deserving of very great praise. He then called on Mr. Hermann Sands for a pianoforte solo, which was followed by plenty of good singing by a large number of admirably selected artistes, including Miss Lena Corry, Miss Ellie White, Mrs. Lucy, and Messrs. Mark Lee, Ernest Bewsey, Stephen Moorcroft, C. Price, Fred Wilson, —. Barclay, and C. Howes. Mrs. Gertrude Brown accompanied throughout the evening in a manner which left nothing to be desired.

The event of the evening was the presentation of a gilt framed picture to a lady. Copies of a journal in one number of which the word "picture" had been previously written in pencil, were given out amongst the ladies present, and the fortunate holder of the marked copy proved to be Miss Pearson (a friend of Mr. H. E. Tringham's). The winner of the picture was congratulated, and was evidently pleased with the pretty gift.

A vote of thanks to Mr J. Bright Crowe, proposed by Mr. F. Cole, and seconded by Mr. L. J. Richardson, and another vote of thanks to Mr. Crisp, on the motion of Mr. Robson, brought a very happy occasion to a close. Mr. Tomsett, the musical director, was congratulated on all hands, and it was generally felt that whilst the Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S. has among its members such an able man, it need never fear any inability to provide a good concert.

KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

Meeting held May 16th. Mr. J. Stenhouse (president) in chair. Agreed to use lifting tickets in a different manner than formerly at open show; they have to be sent on to the exhibitor with his slips. The delegates that were at West of Fife League meeting gave their report, which was considered very satisfactory. The work of the society being in a very forward condition, it was agreed to close the meeting. Some of the members then had a nice ramble through the south part of Blairadam Woods, which finished a very enjoyable evening.—A. Dickson, Sec.

STOCKPORT B.F.A.

Special general meeting held "Boars Head" Hotel, May 16, when a very fair number of members were present. Mr. S. Mason occupied the chair. The chief item on the agenda was the First Feather show. After a lengthy discussion it was decided to hold three Saturday afternoon shows in place of the usual midweek F.F. show. The dates fixed as follows: June 24th, July 8th, and July 22nd. Mr. F. W. Nelson will judge the first. Will the members who were absent kindly notice the above, also that Mr. Nelson has promised £1 and W. Stafford 5s. towards the special prize fund? Subscriptions are due. New members will be welcome.—W. Stafford, Sec.

COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

Meeting held Arcade Temperance Hotel, May 17th, Mr. J. Simpson presiding. Estimates were submitted re show printing, the settling of which was left over till next meeting. A letter was read from Scotch Fancy judge intimating he would be unable to come to Cowdenbeath on November 18th. Another judge was nominated, and secretary instructed to communicate with him. Hall for annual show was again considered and a deputation appointed to carry out the necessary arrangements. The secretary submitted report from the Cage Bird League meeting, which was adopted. A discussion took place regarding rules for the League, and recommendations were sent to next meeting. Sub-committee submitted copies of rules for society and schedule rules, which were read and left over for final settlement next meeting. A vote of thanks to the chairman brought the proceedings to a close.—Joseph R. Reid, Sec.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

General meeting held May 11, Mr. F. J. Weaver in chair. There was a good attendance, when the following resolution was carried: "That we hold three nest feather shows, the first to be held at headquarters, June 15, for which the following classes were drawn up: 3 Nor., 3 Yorks., 1 Mule. Second show to be held at the Stamford Arms Hotel, which is to be the annual F.F. show; conditions later. Third to be held headquarters in August." Will those members who were not present kindly note that points will be counted at the shows for the proposed members' cup; so please do not forget to nominate your birds. A letter was read by the secretary re the proposal of the Midland Federation of C.B.S., which our members regard as the finest suggestion they have heard of for many a day. Three new members were duly elected in Messrs. Vaughan, W. Singleton (Blakenhall), H. Thomas (Walsall). Any other fancier intending to join please communicate with me before June 13, when he will be eligible to show his birds at the June show.—J. Gibbons, Sec.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

The various methods of making egg-food were discussed at a meeting held May 17th. Messrs. Lewis and Hands gave practical demonstrations, which were keenly watched by those present. Mr. Lewis used hard-boiled egg, and the same weight of bread, two days old, crumbled with the hands and then passed through a seive, made of perforated zinc, of medium-sized holes, nailed into a wooden frame. He then broke up the egg and forced it through the same seive with a knife. To this he added a teaspoonful of maw and the same quantity of castor sugar. These were well mixed together, and were then ready for the food tins. Mr. Hands's method was very similar, the difference being that the bread was not passed through the seive, and the ingredients were well mixed together with the hands. An interesting discussion followed, one member advocating the chopping up of lettuce and mixing with the egg and bread; another preferred soaked rape, while a third deprecated mixing the food with the hands.—A. S. Treasure.

NEW CROSS AND DIST. C.B.S.

The society's first ramble, which was to Hildenboro', took place on Sunday last, May 21, it being a splendid success. Fifteen members, eager to learn all they could in regard to wild bird life, met at New Cross Station, for the 9.25 a.m., for Hildenboro', under the excellent care of Messrs. Pope and Meades. I am sorry to say that Mr. Barton, the secretary, and several other members were called upon for special duty (they being railwaymen), and were to their regret unable to join us. The weather was all that was hoped for, and right well did the members take advantage of it. Arriving at Hildenboro', the first thing was to partake of light refreshments and arrange matters for the day's gathering. Nest hunting was the next order of the day. Our desire was soon granted us, for when about two minutes' walk from the station a nest was spotted. I think it was impossible for even the smallest nest to miss the eye of our fanciers—everyone was eager to find the first nest. This one was situated on the extreme end of the branch of a large pine tree. After examination it was proved to be that of the Chaffinch, with a full clutch. After an explanation of the bird and its habits, we jogged along through the country until we reached the homes of the Linnets. These proved to be very plentiful, it being an easy matter to find nests of this species. We now started off for Nizel Heath in the hope of finding Mr. Goldie at home. On our way we found almost every species of British bird. After walking for a time we found ourselves at the place where our hopes led us to look for Mr. Goldfinch, but we were not so fortunate in finding this species—not even one could we see. Being defeated, we started off for tea, which was greatly welcomed. This was followed by another hour or two's view of the country, which brought us into Tonbridge. Here the party hired boats and enjoyed themselves on the river for an hour; after which we caught the train from Tonbridge for London. This brought the ramble to a close after a very enjoyable day.—Barton and Hearn, Secs.

Ramsden's Pure Peppers have arrived. They are of beautiful colour and quality. Grown by experts, ground under Government supervision, and guaranteed absolutely pure. Young birds thrive on Ramsden's Peppers. There is no pepper or colour feed on the market to equal Ramsden's. The pepper that holds the Palace record.—Advt.

Allow me to express my satisfaction with CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. It is most interesting and helpful. It is just packed full of things a fellow wants to know. I might also say that I get your valuable journal, CAGE BIRDS, every week—a treat I very much enjoy. The various articles are very interesting indeed.—Robert Walker (Pittsburg, Pa., U.S.A.).

The following gentlemen, writes Mr. Alex. Miller, sec. of the City of Dundee C.B.S., have been appointed to judge our open show on November 25:—For Crests, Mr. J. Young; for Plainheads, Mr. W. Hampton; for Scotch Fancies, Messrs. J. Stenhouse and J. Strachan; for Border Fancies, Mr. T. Arnott; and for British birds, Mr. R. V. Raine.

Will all members and friends of the Birkenhead Canary F.A., writes Mr. A. E. Lloyd, the sec., please note that our nest feather show will be held on July 8, and our old bird show on December 9, at the Co-operative Hall, Catherine Street, Birkenhead? We have engaged a well-known popular judge of Yorkshire and Norwich Canaries and British birds—Mr. J. W. Metcalf, of Liverpool.

We are now in a sound financial position, writes Mr. James Irlam, hon. sec., Sale and District Open C.B.S., and intend running an open show again this year—on November 17 and 18. No classes will be cancelled. This, I trust, will be the means of increasing the entries, as our show has been guaranteed against all loss. There are already two silver cups, and we have the promise of another valuable special for members only. I should like all members and intending members to send in their names and subscriptions on or before June 12, so that we can see what names to keep on the books. I hope to see this year beat all previous years, so I trust we shall receive the support of old and new friends.

We have received a copy of the British Roller Canary Club's handbook for 1911. The membership, we gather, is now over 200, and the Club is in a good position financially, the balance in hand being £7 8s. 7d. In writing to us the secretary (Mr. J. W. Norris) states that the Club has succeeded in the matter of the cup, the amount subscribed being £11 11s.

Will members kindly note that in future meetings will be held on Wednesdays, instead of Mondays, as formerly, in the Academy Hall, Fort Street, writes Mr. James Sloan, hon. sec. of the Ayr and Dis. C.B.C. The next meeting will be held on May 31, when I trust the turn-out will be more numerous than at recent meetings. Classification for open show and other important matters comprise the agenda.

I have been a reader of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, for many years, and I am sorry to have to tell you that I have to give up my birds owing to ill-health, writes Mr. J. Moore (Ramsey, Hunts). I have been under the doctor for eight months, and now have to go into the hospital. (We are sure our readers will heartily sympathise with Mr. Moore in his misfortune. We hope he may have a speedy recovery to health.—Editor.)

Considering that the North Wales C.B.S. was only formed last February, and that the total membership now number 87, we are confident of a splendid show on Whit Monday, writes Mr. J. W. Jones, the hon. secretary. Schedules have been sent out, and if any member has been overlooked will he please apply for one at once? We wish to remind secretaries and others that our open show has been fixed for Boxing Day, December 26.

Will fanciers please note that I have been appointed secretary and treasurer of the Halifax O.S. in place of Mr. Thackray, who has resigned, writes Mr. Jno. J. Dunn, 67, Hartley Street, Battinson Road, Halifax, to whom all communications should be addressed. Mr. F. Burdekin, 20, Tennyson Street, Lee Mount, has been appointed assistant secretary in place of Mr. Whitaker, who has resigned owing to ill-health. A speedy recovery for him is the wish of every member.

We have received from Mr. Jeffrey Walsh, the well-known bird and food specialist and cage maker (Pheasant Aviaries, Penny Street, Blackburn), a copy of his new catalogue of bird cages, aviaries, cage fittings, bird-room appliances, bird seeds and foods, etc. It is a very fine catalogue, running into over 100 pages, and is profusely and very helpfully illustrated. In it will be found full particulars of the numerous specialities in foods, cages, etc., supplied by Mr. Walsh, whose business is conducted on the sound principles of straightforward dealings and the highest quality wares at the lowest possible prices. Everything that a fancier requires—from the stock of birds down to the very least of his appliances, fittings, etc.—is to be had from the Pheasant Aviaries. The catalogue may be had post free on application by mentioning CAGE BIRDS when writing for it to Mr. Walsh.

Two magnificent samples of colour-food have been sent for our inspection by Mr. J. W. Ramsden (11, Josephine Avenue, Brixton, London). One is the pure tasteless (sweet) pepper, and the other the hot Natal. "Ramsden's peppers" have become a household word with bird-keepers and breeders, their merit having stood the searching test of time, and the peppers which have been obtained for the 1911 season we say with confidence will still further enhance their high reputation. The tasteless is a particularly grand pepper, the colour being exceptionally deep and fiery, while it is guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act to be absolutely pure and harmless and free from all impurities and adulterations. The hot Natal is also sold under the same guarantee, and is likewise a splendid pepper for colour; it will meet the approval of those who believe in the use of a little Natal amongst their feed. Fanciers should make a point of seeing these peppers for themselves. Samples will be sent by Mr. Ramsden on receipt of a penny stamp to defray postage; write him to the above address.

Yorkshire Canary Club.

Will all members of the Yorkshire Canary Club please attend the annual general meeting to be held at the Market Tavern, Godwin St., Bradford, on Saturday, May 27, at 6 p.m. prompt? A hearty invitation is extended to fanciers desiring to become members.—John Greaves, secretary.

National Green-marked Y.C.C.

The annual general meeting of the National Green Marked Y.C.C. will be held on May 27, at 3 p.m., at the Market Tavern, Bradford. All members are urgently requested to attend. Business: Annual report and balance sheet; suggested additions, etc., to rules; result of election of officers for 1911; etc. All cash specials won by members will be paid at this meeting.—F. Armstrong, hon. secretary.

Southern Norwich P.C.

Will clubs wishing to take up the patronage of the Southern Norwich Plainhead Club for show season 1911 please apply at once to the Secretary, 34, Rotherhithe New Road, London, S.E.? The patronage will be balloted for amongst committee and the officers of the society, when clubs will be duly informed of the result. Members are notified that Rule 3 will be strictly enforced as to the payment of subscriptions. Will any fancier wishing to join kindly apply as soon as possible, as it is important to join before the end of July? The secretary will be pleased to forward novices any particulars, as it is likely the Club will be giving away some good and useful specials.—F. S. Matthes, hon. sec.

Our Queen's Birthday Canary

A Happy Idea of the Fanciers of Norwich.

Readers of CAGE BIRDS have doubtless already been made acquainted with the fact that Queen Mary has graciously consented to accept a Canary and cage from the bird-keepers of Norwich as a memento of her birthday. This interesting event has received wide-spread publicity in the columns of the daily and weekly newspapers. The fanciers of Norwich are to be heartily congratulated on planning so felicitous a method of commemorating the natal day of our beloved Queen—a method which redounds to the credit of the hobby of bird-keeping.

How It Originated.

On the occasion of our annual smoking concert this year (writes Mr. R. Roll, the secretary of the Norwich Alliance All England C.B.A.), our President, F. J. Lambert, Esq., on proposing the toast of the Association, suggested it would be an appropriate proceeding for us to send a Norwich Canary to Her Majesty the Queen as a Coronation and Birthday gift from the bird breeders of Norwich. He then took the matter up with the Town Clerk, who placed the same before the Lord Mayor of Norwich, who, in turn, communicated with the Queen's Private Secretary. This gentleman laid the request before Her Majesty, and she has very graciously consented to receive the Canary from the breeders of this City through the medium of our Association. I enclose you a copy of a communication I have received from the Queen's Private Secretary, Mr. Wallington. It will be seen from this that the President, Mr. Lambert, Chairman, Mr. Freestone, and myself will attend at Buckingham Palace on Thursday, May 25th, to hand the Canary and cage to him on Her Majesty's behalf.

The cage, a brass one, is guaranteed all British manufacture, and is simple yet chaste in design. It was selected by Her Majesty personally, and has the Royal Arms in the centre of the front, and the Arms of the City of Norwich at each corner.

Her Majesty's Letter.

Buckingham Palace.
3rd May, 1911.

Dear Sir,—I have submitted your letter to the Queen, and am commanded to say that Cage No. 1 will be very acceptable to Her Majesty. I shall be delighted to receive the President, Chairman, and yourself, at Buckingham Palace on 25th May in the morning.

I am, yours faithfully,
E. W. WALLINGTON.

R. Roll, Esq.

Choosing the Bird.

The committee were anxious to obtain as fine a specimen of the Norwich Plainhead Canary as the City could produce, and invited breeders to submit specimens for their inspection. The birds were taken to the club-room of the Norwich Alliance C.B.A., on May 22, and the task of selection was no light one, for the bird had to be not only as typical as possible and excelling in colour and quality, but a fine, free songster, to boot. A long examination and many consultations were necessary before the choice was made between the many grand birds put before the committee. This fell upon a young (1910) bird which was generally conceded to be a splendid example of the Norwich breed. It turned out to belong to Mr. George Campling, whose delight on learning of his good fortune can well be imagined. He has been a breeder of birds for upwards of 40 years, and has from time to time won a large number of prizes at the shows. By trade he is a shoemaker, in quite a humble way.

The visit of the committee to Buckingham Palace we shall hope to deal with in our next issue.

Another Scottish Sensation.

Remarkable Allegations against a Judge.

An account has reached us of some astonishing happenings at the recent meeting of a society in the vicinity of Glasgow. As the matters concerned, however, are apparently to be the subject of further investigation, and, possibly, it is rumoured, of legal proceedings, we only give a general indication as to their purport. It is alleged that a certain well-known judge and exhibitor lent a bird (or birds) to a certain party to be exhibited under himself, in his capacity as judge, at one of the large Scottish exhibitions. One of the accusers is the person who alleges that he had the loan of the bird (or birds). The party accused gives a point-blank denial to the charge, which he characterises as devoid of truth.

The Beginner in the Canary Fancy.

By
Robt. J. ELLEBY.
(Ardwick.)

It has often been said that unless there were recruits continually joining the Fancy, the Fancy could not prosper. To a certain extent that is true, and it is for persons just entering it, and who are in want of a few simple instructions that these notes are written.

How to Begin.

The first question to ask is how shall we begin? Shall we begin at the bottom rung of the ladder, and climb up gradually to the top, or make purchases from champion exhibitors? I hold it best to start at the bottom, because if you do so, you will gain knowledge by experience, and what can be better? If you do decide to start so, you will not necessarily require a great amount of cash, because only a few shillings, probably less than twenty-five, will buy both birds and cages.

Having so made up your mind, the first consideration are the cages in which the birds will have to be kept. They will require to be a fair size, so that the birds may be kept in health and be happy.

Worth Their Weight in Gold.

In purchasing the first birds there is always the difficulty of finding a fancier who has a reliable strain of "feeders," because without good feeding hens (which are really worth their weight in gold) you will make little or no progress the first season. I may here say that I have never bought a good feeding hen during the many years I have been in the Fancy. You may think that I have not paid sufficient price for them; well, I can say that I have paid anything up to £3 each. The hens I have bought have caused me considerable loss and annoyance, but the losses have not broken my heart, because I am still going on. But I hope you may meet with a kind fancier. You might meet with one near where you live who would help you, and possibly sell you one or two of his trusted hens; and with a fair sized cock bird you may make a start.

If you have your choice, have a marked buff cock and two yellow hens, one of which should be heavily marked. You might then breed a very nice foul green, as well as Yellows and Buffs.

I am supposing you are going in for Norwich, which are so much admired and loved by thousands. In breeding Norwich Canaries, the one thing aimed at is bulk, not length; so when you buy your birds you should remember this, and select them fairly stout and of a good colour. Moreover, if you wish to produce good coloured birds, your stock birds should possess green blood; remember that unless you have green blood in your hen as well as in the cock, you will find to your disappointment that your birds will not come anything like what they ought to do, and you will be far behind others if you should happen to use some of the best of what you breed for stock birds.

Three Important Points.

So here are the three important things to be considered if you wish to make headway. First, raise up a few good feeding hens; secondly, get rather stout stock birds to begin with; and thirdly, buy birds which contain the valuable green blood.

With regard to cages, let them be fairly large. Nest baskets I prefer, because the air can get to the young when the mother is covering them with her body; also there will be less sweating, which is a very troublesome complaint in the warm days. I use nest baskets, and have never had a case of "sweating."

Do No Interfere.

When your birds are sitting, do not interfere in any way with them. Do not remove the eggs, as some advise; leave them alone. Wild birds do not have their eggs removed each day and put back again, so there is really no need, I think, for you to do so. Then as time goes on your young birds will appear.

The hen should then have a little egg (boiled hard and chopped fine); give this to her twice each week, and on the second day when the mother is off feeding, peep into the nest to see if the young ones are alive; and continue to do this. Should a youngster die in the nest, remove it.

I generally take the cock away from the hen when she has laid her last egg. You may please yourself, unless the cock pulls nest to pieces or upsets the hen; then you must remove him. In the meantime, he can be paired up with another hen

When the young are about 17 days old they will begin to perch. You should now think of putting them into a small nursery cage, which should be hooked on to the front of the cage containing the mother, when she will feed them through the wires. Hang the nursery cage sufficiently low so that the mother cannot get at their tails to pull them out, as it weakens them to have to grow a second tail; also the tail becomes much longer.

Be particular at breeding time to keep the cages clean. Fresh water should be given each morning and night when the youngsters are being fed, and only a little green food and crushed hemp seed should be given, when the young are about three or four days old. What is left should be taken out of the cage in the evening.

When to Remove the Youngsters.

When the young ones can eat for themselves, they may be removed from the mother; this will be between the 24th and 28th day. Continue to feed them as before, until they are six weeks old; then gradually get them on to mixed seeds. After that attention must be paid them because the moult begins then to take place, and they must then have a watchful eye kept on them as they often fall sick without any apparent cause.

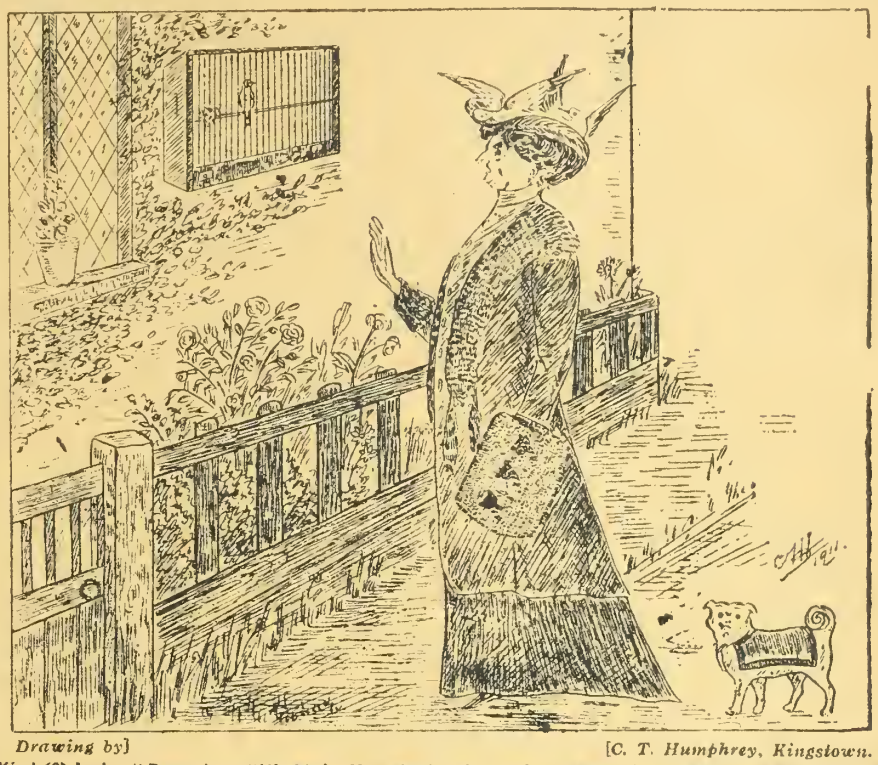
I always use an antiseptic saline, and I never have any contagious disease, though I have had hundreds of birds in my room at one time. If fanciers only knew the value of it, they would use it, and not be troubled with that scourge known as "bird fever."

When you have got your birds nicely moulted, select for future operations the best of them for yourself, choosing those that are nice and full-chested, and the hens having the shortest wings and tails.

By the end of the breeding season the shows will be coming on, and no doubt you will most likely go and see what sort of birds catch the judge's eye. The Norwich are much improved the last few years.

The Sort of Bird to Win.

In closing, I may just state what a good Norwich show bird should be to win. The body should be short and stout, nicely rounded when looking at the front, wide across the shoulders when looking over the back; it must have short wings, carried well up on back, and a well carried tail; it should be fine in feathers, not of the long, leafy kind; it should stand nicely clear of the perch with good feet; and last and most important of all, it must have a big, wide head, either rounded or of the cushion shape, with good cheeks and thick neck well set on body. The bird should be of good even colour. A great deal is said about the length—6½ inches. But a good bird need not be that length to win; remember bulk is wanted, not length.



The Young Naturalist.

*Never Again.

Last year my father had a cat and a Canary which were great friends. The cat was called "Tibs," and the Canary "Dick." One day a strange cat jumped through the window. "Dick" not being afraid (he thought it was his friend "Tibs") merely looked to see what he was going to do. He had not long to wait, for in less than half a minute the strange looking cat sprang up on the table and snapped poor "Dick" up into its claws. Happily "Tibs" was just coming into the kitchen, and he bit the cat very hard. This made him drop "Dick" and ran to the door., He did not escape, for Jane the cook, seized the broom and chased him out of the house. He never dared touch "Dick" after this.—Sent by Charles Bridges, age 12, 15, Dovedale Street, Failsworth, nr. Manchester, Lancs.

The Lost Magpie.

A friend of mine, who is a great lover of British birds, has amongst his collection a Magpie which is very tame. He calls it "Jack," and the children are very fond of it. The dog and "Jack" were great friends, and both ate off the same dish. The dog was put away, and the next day, to their great surprise, "Jack" disappeared. After a while they found out it was flying about the neighbourhood, and they went in search of it, and saw it. They took tempting bits of meat to it, and got it quite near, but it flew away again. "Jack" was very fond of mice, so they tried it with a dead mouse, but it flew away again and brought one of its own, and laid it down beside it. They had "Jack" almost caught, but they had to give up the chase. After being away from the beginning of November, 1910, it made its appearance in the garden on January 25th, 1911. When the children came home from school they were delighted to see "Jack" back again. They at once got its cage and put a bit of cheese in it, and "Jack" went into the cage and ate the cheese. So they closed the bird in and kept it there for a day or two, and now it is its old self again, flying about the garden at its liberty.—James Dick (age 12), 9, Brodie Street, Bainsford.

*A Strange Nesting Place.

While an employee of the Uttoxeter Gas Works Company was cleaning a lamp on the Heath, Uttoxeter, quite recently, he found a Tom-tit's nest containing seven eggs. Previously passers-by had noticed that the bird paid frequent visits to the lamp-post.—Sent by Doris Lycett (age 14), Apedale View, Chesterton, Staffs.

Some Recent Arrivals from Abroad.

By W. E. TESCHEMAKER, B.A.

The European Rock Sparrow.

A single specimen of this interesting species was recently given me by a lady residing in Italy. As its scientific name (P. petronia) suggests, it is a bird of the mountains and the rocks, and very partial to those old ruins which are so frequently met with in the south of Europe. It is found throughout the whole of Italy, in Sardinia, in the Pyrenees and Basses Alpes, and is common in Greece, nesting in the crevices of rocks and occasionally in holes of trees. Unlike our Sparrow, it is a shy bird, and in the nesting season shuns the neighbourhood of man. It is a thick-set bird, quite as large as our Sparrow, but very different in appearance. The head and back are light brown, streaked with dark brown; above the eye is a broad stripe of buffish white and another on the nape; the under parts are whitish, and the under tail coverts boldly barred with brown. Its most characteristic marking is a patch of bright yellow on the throat. It is not one of the handsome Sparrows, such as the Spanish species (P. salicarius), which has the whole of the upper breast and flanks strikingly marked with black on a white ground, but is interesting as being intermediate between this and the Eastern type, which has the whole underparts yellow, such as the Cinnamon Sparrow of the Himalayas, imported a few years since by Capt. Perreau.

More About Redpolls.

The same lady very kindly gave me four Alpine Redpolls, caught in Liguria, which have interested me greatly. They appear to be a race of the Mealy Redpoll, but distinguished by the remarkably bright shade of red suffusing the whole of the breast, the striping on the flanks being deep crimson. My correspondent also told me something which I not only did not know, but should never have guessed, namely, that Redpolls will not stand the heat of an Italian summer in captivity, although Siskins do well there both in aviaries and cages. When we recollect that the Siskin nests in the pine forests of the north of Scotland and that the Lesser Redpoll may often be found breeding in osier beds in the extreme south of England, this seems very curious, though it explains one point, which was never clear to me, namely, why the Siskin is the most popular of all cage-birds in the South of France.

Whilst on this subject, I may mention that I have had an opportunity of inspecting Mr. Cooper's Redpoll, which was referred to in this column recently. It is a great pity that its untimely death prevented him from exhibiting it, for, even in death, it was beautiful, and in life it must have been extremely handsome. The whole of the crown was deep umber; the throat and upper breast pink, with a very small black bib; the rump almost pure white, and also the underparts, there being just a few dark markings on the flanks; all the tail feathers, the flights and the wing-coverts being broadly margined with white. When Mr. Cooper described it as smaller than a Mealy he was evidently speaking of its apparent size, because, by actual measurement, it was larger, its length being 5¼ ins., and wing measurement 3 ins. Its beak also was much longer and stouter. As it did not seem to correspond well with published descriptions of type specimens of either Cones', Hornemann's, or Holbooell's Redpoll, I sent a full description of it to Mr. H. F. Witherby, who seemed to find the same difficulty in identifying it. The general conclusion that I have come to is that, although there undoubtedly is a northern race of the Mealy Redpoll which differs very markedly from the latter, yet that the distinctions between the above three forms are not sufficiently definite to separate them as distinct species. We might perhaps call them species in the making.

The Reddish Finch.

A Continental dealer, who knows my partiality for uncommon birds, recently sent me a pair of tiny Finches which he described as "Bourbon Grosbeaks," but which I had no difficulty in recognising as S. nigro-aurantia. Of all the South American Grosbeaks that I have seen these were quite the smallest—smaller even than the little Parva Finch. This rarely imported species comes from Brazil, where it is seen in some numbers in the millet fields. The male is cinnamon coloured, with black head and blackish wings and tail, and a broad and distinctive band of white across the primaries. The female is of the usual olive-brown colour and has a corresponding white band on the wing, or, perhaps I should say, this particular specimen had; it may have been a male in immature plumage. They measured 3¼ ins. in length, the wing, from the flexture to the tip of the longest primary, being only 1⅞ ins. Unfortunately these charming little birds did not survive the long journey. How is it that the Continental dealers can get hold of so many rare species? Also, how is it that they can sell them so cheaply?

The Marked Yorkshire Canary.

How to Build Up a Strain.

By R. E. HELLIWELL (Halifax).

Mr. Stobart presided over a good assembly of members and friends of the Sowerby Bridge and District C.B.S, who had a very interesting evening, at the Wharfe Hotel, on April 27th, to hear Mr. R. E. Helliwell give the following lecture. Mr. Helliwell was listened to very attentively, and his lecture was enjoyed by all.

Technical Marks Defined.

Mr. Chairman and Fellow Fanciers: Having been asked by your chairman to give you a paper on the above subject, I might say it is a pleasure to me to do so, and I hope both young and old fanciers will obtain a little knowledge from it. The first point is to learn what is considered a technical marked bird. The principal points are, eyes, wings, and tail. Any other marks are not considered technical marks at all. A bird that is marked on both eyes, both wings, and each side of tail is considered a six-pointed bird, this being the highest grade of variegation. I might state also that a four or six-pointed bird is termed even-marked or variegated. These two birds are eligible only in classes headed "Marked," "Variegated," or "A.O.V." But bear in mind that these marks must be clear and distinct, and not attached to any other marks.

The two-pointed bird, the three-pointed bird, and the five-pointed bird are considered to be unevenly marked, and if you have a bird marked with two technical marks along with any other tick this also is considered an unevenly marked bird.

The ticked bird, in my opinion, is a bird having one technical point only, or a technical mark along with any other body ticks, or one having a separate tick on any part of bird. Such a bird I consider a ticked bird, but if I am not mistaken the definition of a ticked bird is a bird having one separate technical mark along with any other variegation on its body, and this is so considered by all the principal clubs, Cinnamon or Green Marked. So, gentlemen, if you follow on these lines you will not be far wrong in the classification.

I think I have now explained very clearly what is meant by the technical points of the marked bird and the ticked bird, cinnamon or green marked. I also take it for granted that this applies to the Norwich Plainhead and the Border Fancy Clubs.

Eccentricities in Markings.

Now it is a great benefit for us to try and breed as near as possible to these marks, and if we do so we must look out for that bird called the heavily marked one. From the crosses I am going to mention we are bound to get sometimes both lightly marked and heavily marked ones; ticks and clears will also crop up sometimes. A heavily marked bird we may term an eccentric marked one. What I mean is marked anywhere about the body. Sometimes these marks are attached to the technical points.

I will illustrate how to obtain these principal points. At the present time there is a good opening for this variety, as we have the Green Marked Club progressing favourably more so than the Cinnamon Marked one, but at the same time I think there is plenty of room at our Union shows for a class specially for the heavy marked bird (yellow and buff combined). Now, if I am not mistaken, the Green Marked Club was formed practically for this particular bird, but, in my opinion, it is ignored. I think that if it was considered more, and catered for, the general Fancy would value it far more. I am sorry to say the general feeling is to ignore them in the bird room; I think you will agree with me in this respect.

Method of Producing the Points.

The question now is, how have we to produce these points, and what is the best method? Well, I have tried all ways, so I will explain the best and quickest way to attain our object. In my experience, I find the greatest percentage of markings come from the hen's side, green or cinnamon marks. Therefore, in pairing up, I always mind to have, if I can, as good a marked hen as I can possibly get, as clean and neat in marking as possible, especially the eye marks. Above all, these are the hardest to produce, as we can breed wing marks wholesale. As regards the wing marks, they want to be marked on the secondary flights, about three to four feathers, and not on the outside long flights, nor up the middle of the back. A bird marked thus is termed a saddle marked one.

You may start first with a cinnamon marked hen. Mind, it must have technical marks, or it is of no use. Either yellow or buff, it may be, but it must be well marked on eyes above all. In recommending cinnamon blood on the hen's side I do so because, as I said before, you get the greatest percentage of markings from the hen. Also, I might state, the cinnamon marked bird is full of the marked strain, if you get them from a practical breeder, who has been breeding for years for these particular points. The green-eyed are not as extensively bred yet as the cinnamon strain for purely marked birds, but they are better in type than the cinnamon marks, and stronger, and the best for colour producing. From the cinnamon blood you get that soft silky feather, but the birds deteriorate in colour. A big percentage you will find sometimes white in feather, but with a pinky appearance.

You must pair this cinnamon marked hen to a dark-eyed cock, either marked, or from a marked strain. You get stronger young this way than by pairing two cinnamon marks together; and you get both cinnamon and green marks, cocks and hens. By the reverse mating the whole of the cinnamon marks will be hens, providing your cinnamon marked cock is bred from cinnamon marks that have been bred in for generations.

I might tell you now that we shall have a job to find a reliable strain, as there are so many who cross their birds for fresh blood that there is no guarantee in this respect. But the green-eyed ones will be cocks.

In pairing two cinnamon marks together I find you are losing type and shape, because you will find the cinnamon marks are deteriorating in these points. There are some good birds, but they are few and far between. They have not the excellence, on the whole, of the green marked bird, as an all round Yorkshire. You must arrange the best birds your stock will allow you to pair together. You must not think I am condemning the cinnamon marks; not at all, as I like to see a good cinnamon mark, and I have bred good birds this way. If there are any cinnamon marked breeders here I feel sure that if they try one or two pairs dark-eyed and vice versa (both ways) they will be on the up-grade for improvement in their stock. You will lose nothing by doing so, as I feel convinced that this is the best way to produce the bird we are aiming at, especially if you are going in for cinnamon marks. Mind you, they are no use for exhibition if they have no technical marks on them; that is one of the main points, with type and feather. I also find that by pairing cinnamon and green together you get darker cinnamon colour.

A Believer in Pedigree.

At the present time I have two pairs together paired the same way, and if I am lucky to get some young I shall have a decent bird, no doubt. Bear in mind that you put decent birds together, with pedigree at the back of them. I maintain that a good bird will have pedigree even if you purchase it haphazard. If we could only trace it back it would be found to have a good pedigree somewhere. Good pedigree means good birds. You are practically experimenting with several varieties, clear, ticked, unevenly, even-marked, and heavy marks, cinnamon, or green marked. You can pick from these the lightest marked ones to pair together for clear breeding or to pair to birds from clear blood; then you will have a good foundation of colour in their veins to work on.

The old saying is, how are we to get rid of the heavy marked ones? Well, where there is a will there is a way. Sell them. Now, I don't mean to say put all your stock up for marked breeding; it is a mistake to do so unless you fancy marked breeding; but try two to three pairs, which will be quite sufficient to go on with. If a fancier favours this variety it is all right, but the majority favour clear and ticked breeding. Bear in mind that you will, however, have it to do sooner or later, if you want to be successful on the show bench in the Yorkshire varieties, or any other, at the present day.

In pairing up, providing I have some decent marked birds, I prefer putting two even-marked birds together, if the marks are clear and distinct from other marks. They can be either heavy marked or lightly marked. I don't care how heavy the eyes are marked, but I don't like heavy wing marks, if I can avoid them. Three to four feathers are quite sufficient in each cock or hen. I might say I like heavy eye marks on the hen's side mostly, as I find they moult out, especially the cinnamon marks. I am putting these birds together for marked breeding only; but for clear, ticked, or unevenly marked breeding, I prefer one, two, three, four, five, or six technical marks on the hen's side, paired to a clear, green, or pink-eyed cock, bred from clears. Work them the best your stock will allow, either yellow or buff cock or hen. If you are not breeding for marks as a particular object, from the latter pairing you will get, as I mentioned before, clears, ticks, unevenly, sometimes even-marked, and heavy ones. But for even-marked breeding I prefer the markings well balanced on both sides. Pair up like to produce like; that is my motto. I am proud to say that I have bred from this method two birds, a yellow cock and a buff hen, that have gained high honours at the Crystal Palace, and other shows, this last few years; but I am sorry to say that my two best birds are both dead. Still, I have them set up to look at, and they are good examples. I am hoping to produce another good bird or two if I am in luck's way.

Now, I like to stick to the way in which I have been successful, and if you, too, gentlemen, have a good method, stick to it, as there is no royal road to success. But bear in mind that success depends on pedigree in your hobby. Don't forget to have in your stock a bit of breed. What I mean is Belgian blood. But don't get inferior blood—that is, Belgian and Scotch Fancy combined, as there are crossed birds of this kind about. And mind dropped tails. This cross keeps your birds slim, straight, and of good position. This, along with other properties, helps you to attain success.

As regards your stock birds. I mind you get size and colour from the cock's side, and quality and position from the hen's side. I like my cock bird as long as possible, and as slim and narrow at the shoulder as possible. The hen I like a medium one, as I think that if you have a big hen you are losing quality and shape—I mean for stock purposes; only, mind you, with all the Yorkshire properties combined. But if you have a good big hen, a show bird, so much the better; but it is only a few who have such hens to breed with.

Just a word now as regards legs. I prefer decent-legged birds, both cocks and hens, for this is one of the main points in the Yorkshire bird. I mean clean-legged, and not set too far up the body, as the birds overbalance and lose the grace of the Yorkshire bird, that is, position.

You must discard for breeding birds marked thus: Chest, back, rump, cap, and neck; but if you should breed a good bird marked thus test its abilities, as you never know what they may throw. But they are detrimental to marked breeds, as a rule.

Whatever variety you go in for, you must make up your mind about it, and persevere to attain your particular object. You must bear in mind that you cannot build up a stock in one season.

A number of questions were forthcoming from a good meeting of members and friends, and these were answered satisfactorily by Mr. Helliwell.

CHESTER C.B.F.A.

Meeting held May 9th, Nag's Head Cocoa House, Mr. Bracegirdle in chair. The letter from Mr. Hopkins re the formation of a union for Lancashire and Cheshire was again read, and after a discussion it was decided that we are not in favour of the proposed union.—J. Swindley, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS ROLLER C.C.

Meeting held May 6, at 55, Briggate. Decided, to hold our annual contest on November 10 and 11, in the Leeds Temperance Societies' Hall, York Street. Also Mr. H. Best promised to give a paper on his methods and experience in the breeding and rearing of the Roller Canary.—H. L. Davis.

REDHILL C.B.S.

At a meeting held May 2nd, at Mutton's Hotel, a very interesting and instructive lecture was given by our old friend Mr. H. Potter of Redhill. Although the lecturer is not a large exhibitor, he is keenly interested in our British birds, and he dealt at length on "Our Country's Birds and how to distinguish them." You may often see our friend on a 14-miles ramble on Reigate Hills and Walton Heath (in spite of nearing his three score years and ten) admiring the feathered tribes. He dealt with the classes, orders, families, sub-families, genera, species and individuals by which we are able to distinguish our birds. Mr. Potter also had on view coloured plates of every British bird, namely, 398, which proved very attractive. A hearty vote of thanks was given to Mr. Potter, to which he replied. This brought a very enjoyable meeting to a close.—A. W. Bacon, Hon. Sec.

ATTERCLIFFE AND DIS. C.B.S

Meeting held Horse and Jockey Hotel, when the chief item was arrangements for nest feather show. The attendance was only moderate, and the committee cannot understand why members will not come to such important meetings as we like to suit all members, but we cannot do so if we do not know what they want. The members present, however, took a keen interest in the schedules of previous years and finally decided to have the same classification as last year. Also decided, to alter the date of the show from June 17th to July 15th, as many members think June too early. The show will be held in the friends' adult schools, if possible, and the classification as follows: Can. Champ. classes for Norwich and Yorks., 3 classes each; the Novice Classes the same; Mule or Hyb. 2 classes; A.O.V. Canary 1 class; British, 7. We made three new members in Messrs. Dyett, Eason, and Exton, and we give them a hearty welcome. Decided, to have a ramble round Wentworth on Sunday, July 9th, together with the members of the Parkgate Society. As some of the members of that Society know every inch of that district it should be a grand day's outing, and we hope all members will give or send his name for same by the next meeting, when I hope to give full particulars. At our next meeting we are having a table show of nest feather birds for novices and members; we hope there will be a good muster of birds. Friends are given a hearty invitation. The chairman (Mr. L. Havenhand) threw the meeting open for discussion, and we had an hour's debate, which was led by Mr. J. Perry, who gave us a lecture to start with; and as his subject was on the breeding season, he was followed with keen interest. Several members expressed their views. A lot of questions were asked of Mr. Perry, who answered them very ably. An interesting evening was finished with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Perry.—W. Richinson, Sec.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE

Widespread Evidence of Approval.
A Junior Branch.
"Humanitarian League" on the Warpath.

Notes by the Secretary.

A very pleasing communication comes this week from Mr. Singleton; see Views of Members. Such a letter as this shows with what enthusiasm our members are taking up CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and supports my statement of last week, that there are many bird keepers who will know nothing of the existence of the LEAGUE unless they see your badges. There will be, as in Mr. Singleton's case, no difficulty in getting them to join, once they know about the LEAGUE.

Two Young Members.

Mr. Peck, of Bexley, in sending a further list of introductions, includes the names of two young members, Bernard Chas. Norton, 5½ years, and Master Robins, aged 9. He says they are the youngest fanciers in their district, Dartford, and have both won prizes at the local show. May they go on as they have begun. He asks if he or any other individual will be able to compete against any big cage bird society. No; nor will the societies be able to compete against him. There are two sets of prizes, one set for societies and one for individual members, and neither will interfere with the other. £20 altogether is to be won, £12 by societies and £8 by individual members. The details have already been published, and I hope to find room to repeat them and to announce other important matters next week.

A letter from the Hon. Sec. and Treasurer of Cheltenham C.B.S. conveys the intelligence that at the last meeting of the society CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE was discussed, "and met with general approval." "The majority of the members present," says Mr. A. S. Treasure, the Hon. Sec., "signified their intention of joining." The competition among the societies for our prizes promises to be as keen as that among our individual members. Secretaries of societies should note that, besides the possibility of winning one of our prizes for the introduction of members, their members may allocate half their subscription to the fund for the purchase of special prizes to be awarded at their own show.

A Junior Branch Established.

In response to the suggestion of many correspondents, I have pleasure in announcing that it has been decided to establish a junior branch of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, open to members who are under fourteen years of age at the date of joining. The subscription to the junior branch will be sixpence yearly, half the adult subscription, until the young members attain the age of twenty-one. Badges, which are, of course, optional, the same price, sixpence each. More about this next week.

Although I have two or three times notified that CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE badges are not supplied to non-members, remittances for badges only continue to be received, and I now have quite a batch of these awaiting further instructions from those readers who have sent them. If those who have sent these applications will send on the shillings for membership, I will at once forward the membership receipts and the badges; or, if they do not intend becoming members, I will return the sixpences, less postage, upon hearing to that effect.

Not a Moment too Soon.

At the moment of going to press there comes to hand a pamphlet published by the "Humanitarian League," and entitled "The Other Side of the Bars: the Case of the Caged Bird." In this pamphlet the extremists have laid their cards on the table, and openly state that their object is to put an end to the keeping of any birds, large or small, Canaries or wild birds, in a cage of any kind.

Next week I shall deal fully with this precious document. Its publication shows that CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE has come not a moment too soon, and I want every reader to join at once and support us in our efforts in the protection of a hobby which appeals to hundreds of thousands of our fellow-countrymen and countrywomen as an innocent and instructive occupation for their spare moments, and as one which may, under proper conditions, be pursued absolutely without the cruelty which our opponents claim is inseparable from it.

MORE VIEWS OF MEMBERS.

"Can you give me any idea as to how members are coming in from Bradford and district? I would have great pleasure in pushing the effort forward if you think they are not coming fast enough from here. There ought to be a lot, as we have over a thousand breeders in the vicinity."

Bradford. S. DEAN.

REPLY.—CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE has only been established three weeks, and we have a good few members from Bradford. Considering that even the breeding of Canaries is threatened by the faddists, and that in Bradford efforts have already been made with the object of putting an end to this branch of a hobby that is pursued by so many Bradfordians, it would have been thought that every Bradford man who is a Canary fancier would have joined the LEAGUE and have apportioned half of his subscription money to the Defence Fund. The opponents of cage-bird keeping would have little chance if the local members of Parliament knew that a thousand of their constituents were banded together in support of their hobby. Individually, a bird fancier can do nothing; but a thousand of them, with CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE behind them, would be in a very different position. I thank you very much for your kind offer, and shall be glad to assist you in any possible way. May I say that every member you introduce will be counted to your credit in the race for our £5 and £3 prizes?

H. J. F.

I am now making a further suggestion, viz., Do you not think it would be advisable to have some circulars printed showing the object of the society, and also all the advantages derived by becoming a member? These circulars could be distributed by members, and 1 for one would be pleased to take 100, and in order that it would not he a loss to CAGE BIRDS, you could make a small charge per 100 circulars, just enough to cover the cost of paper and printing. I called on Mr. W. Swaysland, the naturalist and bird judge, Queen's Road, Brighton, the other day, and he said he would join and send up his subscription at once. I think he would be a very good addition to our society.

A. HOLLINGSHEAD.

Hove, Brighton.

REPLY.—Your suggestion is being acted upon. As soon as a short draft of the objects of the LEAGUE is ready copies will be widely distributed. As to your reference to Mr. Swaysland, I would only say, "So do I." Now, friend Walter, come along. H. J. F.

Thanks for receipt and LEAGUE badge received. The badge is very neat, and very cheap.

Coventry. H. ADKINS.

Defence and Not Defiance.

Sir,—It is with pleasure I give you my opinion of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. I should have written before, but I thought you would be too pushed for space, as so many have written to you in praise of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. In the first place, I must congratulate Mr. Fulljames upon being appointed the first secretary of the LEAGUE. There is one thing that seems to be a well-known fact, and that is that CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE has come to stay. I believe that CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE is the only body that will melt the iron hand of the faddists, thereby allowing us, as bird fanciers, the right to keep birds, which they say we have not a right to do at present. I am sure CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE will do all in its power to stamp out cruel practices of any kind in connection with bird-keeping or bird-dealing. I am asking everyone who I think is a bird fancier if he has heard of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE; if he says No, then I take my CAGE BIRDS from my pocket and read him some of the objects of the LEAGUE, and I ask him to take CAGE BIRDS every week, so that they may read the good advice given therein, at the same time asking him to become a member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. I will do all I can to help CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE in the Rhondda Valleys, and seeing there is such a great number of bird fanciers in these valleys, and that Porth, the place where I live, is the junction to both the Valleys, I have a good chance to meet many bird fanciers. In conclusion, if there is anything I can do to help CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE I will do it with pleasure. My best wishes for CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and may its great object be "Defence not Defiance."

ARTHUR H. C. LEGG,
Hon. Secretary, Mid-Rhondda C.B.S.

REPLY: Many thanks for kind offer of assistance. This is what we want. There is no help so good as voluntary help, and I am already assured of this from many quarters. Dont forget there is £5 to be won, quite outside of the special prizes which will accrue to your society from the allocation of half the subscription money of your members and friends.

Smart Suits 10s.6d.

Why Pay £2 or £3?

Bright days make clothes look shabby! Have you bought your new suit yet? If not, don't pay £2 or £3. Deal through the post with H. THOMAS and CO, the well-known Wholesale Clothiers, of 321, High Holborn, London, W.C., and save pounds.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE is a splendid means of keeping fanciers together in a body, and fighting against those who are trying to stop a harmless fancy.

Grimsby. F. GILLESPIE.

I am pleased to send names and subscriptions of the following gentlemen to join the CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and hope to send others later. They are not exhibiting members; in fact, two of them have not seen our paper, CAGE BIRDS, yet. I showed them the badge and just told them the objects of the LEAGUE, and had no difficulty in obtaining their subscriptions.

W. J. SINGLETON.

Wolverhampton.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE is a grand idea. It will mean a lot in extending the hand of friendship among fanciers. May it be a great success! Unity is strength!

Castleford. A. TOWLER.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

G. H. PECK.—Yes; the two young fanciers named are the youngest enrolled members of the League up to the present. Thanks very much for your efforts at recruiting. Hope your bicycle tyres will last you the season. Please see my note above for a further reference and a reply to your other question.

A. S. TREASURE.—Thanks for letter and kind promises of support. An answer has been sent by post.

A. MUNDAY.—Please see reply to Mr. A. Hollingshead in my notes above.

W. BINNS.—Many thanks. Every one helps.

H. ADKINS.—Very many readers who have already joined the League are not members of any bird club. It is not necessary to be a member of a bird club to become a member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. It is the private bird owner who has had hitherto no organization to look after his interests who should join the League.

HENRY J. FULLJAMES,
Secretary,
Cage Birds League, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist, or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on o separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems) will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an oddressed stamped envelope. Queries of on ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped oddressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Dinner Fund (London).

(9).—All queries must be addressed the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards ore not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mules and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Wild Bird Lite—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc. of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his question for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Canaries in Gas.

A. W. F.—Put the birds on a staple diet of plain canary seed for a week. Every second day give a small piece of bread and milk prepared by soaking stale bread in a mixture of two parts milk to one part lime water, drain off all surplus fluid, sprinkle with maw seed, and give to the birds. Give a spray of chickweed, or two leaves of dandelion on the alternate days. Restrict the diet to this for a week, and during the time give six drops of syrup of rhubarb aud a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea in the drinking water every second day. At the end of the week add a fourth part of summer rape to the staple diet. Give each pair of birds a teaspoonful of egg food with half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal part maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure, mixed in it every second day, and on the alternate days a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, black rape, and yellow mustard; and give a little dandelion daily. In the drinking water give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day for a week. Keep the room well ventilated, but avoid draughts in the cages, and replace the dish of carbolic with a dish of a deep crimson solution of permanganate of potash, changing it as often as it turns to a muddy brown colour.

Moulting Borders.

J. A.—Yes, it is necessary to use some preservative fluid with the mixture you enquire about, otherwise it will not keep good many days, and the ingredients are often wasted. The following is a good formula, and will keep good indefinitely. Get 3d. of hay saffron, and 3d. of cochineal from a chemist. Bruise the cochineal grains, and add all together to a quarter-pint of rum. Allow it to stand and macerate for a week or so, giving the bottle a good shaking each day. Then strain off the clear liquid for use. At the commencement of the moult give twenty drops in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water daily for a week or ten days, then give thirty drops about every second day for remainder of the moult. On the alternate days twice a week give a little egg food, slightly dusted with saccharated carbonate of iron, and sprinkled with maw seed. Give a liberal supply of marigold and nasturtium blooms. I do not think dandelion blooms are of much, if any, use, but the above-named are useful, and may be quite safely given. It is only right to caution you that this system of moulting Borders is not strictly legitimate, and if you 'ow do it, so that the birds show distinct traces of colour feeding, you would run a great risk of having the birds passed unnoticed, or even disqualified.

Birds Flying Loose.

N. King.—Except the two particular birds forming one pair—Canary and Linnet—you do not mention what kind of birds all the 28 consist of, nor the proportion of sexes, or size of room, so I can only give you some general advice. So far as feeding and general management are concerned, you will find all you need in "Canary Breeding for Beginners." In allowing the birds to fly loose and breed in the room, you must not expect to breed from any particular mating you wish, because, even if you mate up the birds in cages and then liberate them to fly about, they will not adhere to your selection of partners, but pair up according to their own ideas afterwards. If you particularly wish to breed Mules, then you would need to turn in only hen Canaries and cock Finches. Or you might put in, say, Canaries and hen Goldfinches and cock Linnets and cock Bullfinches, thereby increasing the chances to four varieties of Mules or Hybrids. The proportion of cocks to hens should not be greater than one to three or four. Under this system cages would not be necessary. You should put up instead around the walls small bushes, twigs, etc., to provide nesting sites and cover for the hens nesting. Small bushes of evergreens afford the best cover. If the Canary and Linnet are confined in the cage, the hen may not he quite ready to nest in earnest. Still, it would do no harm to throw a piece of cloth or something over that part of the front of cage immediately in front of nest-box, just to give a little more privacy. Nothing else is necessary.

An Acknowledgment (A. W. F.).—Thanks for your letter. Shall be glad to hear result of treatment.

A Fine Brood (J. Clegg).—It is not so common an occurrence as we would all wish for a hen to lay six eggs in one clutch and bring up six strong, lusty youngsters from them, but it cannot be called a great rarity. Neither is it a record-breaker. It is just a trifle uncommonly good nothing more. I congratulate you on your success.

Canary Seed (No Nom-de-plume).—No. 1 is a good all-round sample of fine quality. No. 2 is not so good in quality. No. 3 is not quite so well ripened. In order of choice they stand 1—3—2, with not very much to choose between them, except that No. 1 is quite the best all round. They are all on the small side, but clean and bright.

Outdoor Aviary (Tree Climber).—If you are hard pressed for space indoors, you might transfer the young to the outside aviary for the remainder of the breeding season—say the next three months, or until October if the autumn should be nice and mild. This is the utmost I would advise you to do, as the construction of the aviary, as it stands, being only half-inch match-boards, is totally inadequate for a permanent residence all the year round. You should get the handbook on "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages," which our Manager would send you post free for 2 3, and see if you cannot convert this structure into one that would safely house your birds the year round.

Swollen Tongue (E.G.).—Sorry to hear the bird died, and under circumstances which prevented you sending the body for post-mortem, which would have been most advisable, and the only satisfactory way of determining the real nature of the trouble. It is quite within the range of probabilities for it to have been cancer, but the asthma theory may be dispensed with. The breathing symptoms would arise from the bird's inability to close the beak. To be on the safe side, you should thoroughly cleanse and disinfect the cage before keeping another bird in it. Thanks for sending report.

Egg-binding (Ikey).—I really cannot tell whether it was you that caused the egg-binding or not without more detailed particulars of your general management. You should get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. post free, or take "Our Canaries," which would keep you on the right track in managing your stock, when this trouble should be conspicuous by its absence. Keep them on a diet of plain canary whilst sitting, and when they are coming forward for laying again, give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts inga, black rape, and millet, every second day; keep a piece of cuttlefish in the cages; and get a little old mortar from some demolished building and smash it up and strew liberally among the sand on the floor of the cages. Give a fair supply of green food daily—chickweed, groundsel, lettuce, or watercress, in the order named for preference, but strictly avoid dandelion for these hens.

Cause of Illness (G. G. K.).—I have no doubt the bird had a slight apoplectic seizure, and question the wisdom of "feeding him up" to force him into breeding condition again this season. You would do better to put him on the retired list for the remainder of the year. The aperient you gave him would do good, but the turpentine was useless and unnecessary. For the next month give a staple of plain canary only, and a liberal supply of chickweed or green plantain stalks daily, with just a scrap of bread and milk twice a week. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of buckthorn and a crystal of sulphate of soda every second day for a week, and in the next week six drops of tincture of gentian and four of dilute sulphuric acid every second day. Keep it quite quiet and free from excitement, and leave the rest to Nature. That is all you can do.

After Egg-binding (Vulcan).—I'm afraid I don't quite follow you when you say "twice they parted with egg, but in every case no egg could be seen, etc." If the hen or hens are really egg-bound time after time there must be something wrong with your general management, or most likely they are in an overfed condition. Put them on a diet of plain canary only as staple for one week, and every second day add a pinch of white millet. Give a liberal supply of chickweed, lettuce, or watercress daily, but no dandelion. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of buckthorn, and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea every second day. After this give a pinch of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days a pinch of a mixture of equal parts millet, inga, black rape, and linseed. Continue giving the green food daily, and keep a supply of cuttlefish in the cage, and when the hens are again coming forward for laying get a little old mortar out of some demolished building and smash it up and strew it on the floor of the cages. I would advise you to take not more than two nests of eggs from these hens this season, and after that turn them into a large flight or aviary for the winter.

Broken Leg (J. R. L., Acton).—You did right to cage the bird alone. See that the cage is kept in a quite quiet place, and avoid fluttering or disturbing the bird as much as possible. If necessary, throw a light cover over the cage to keep him from being flurried. The perches, or perch (one would be enough as a rather small cage is preferable) should be placed low down, and be of a fair size, and placed so as to give the bird the least amount of effort to get upon, or about, them. Keep the floor well strewn with clean sawdust, and see that the seed and water are easily get-at-able. Keep the bird under these conditions until he voluntarily resumes activity, and again uses the leg freely, which may be in about a month from time of accident. Do not attempt any mechanical remedy whatever.

Not Nesting (W. H. Lovelock). (1) Give the Yorkshires a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give a small teaspoonful of egg food, with a third of a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts maw, sesame, and gold of pleasure seed mixed in it, and on the alternate days a small teaspoonful of equal parts hemp, black rape, inga, millet, and a half part of yellow mustard. Give a liberal supply of green food, especially dandelion, daily. Two or three mealworms a day, if you have them, would be very useful. In the drinking water give a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea every second day for a week. Beyond this you can do nothing but patiently await the course of events. (2) Treat the hen that sits on nest without laying by giving only plain canary seed and a liberal supply of dandelion daily for a week, and sulphate of soda in water same as No. 1. Afterwards feed the same as No. 1, and omit the soda. When the other hen that has had young is ready to go to nest again, do not hesitate to take the cock from this hen to put with her, as it is very doubtful whether this hen will do any good this year. You should get the part of "Our Canaries" dealing with "squatting hens," and read what is said there on the subject. By the way, I should be glad to hear the result of this bird's attempts at breeding, both this year and next, if you would kindly report it, referring to this reply.

Birds and Books (Indebted).—By changing the cocks as you did at a crucial moment, you seem to have succeeded in producing a Mule and pure Canaries in the same nest. Had you left the Goldfinch in at first, you see all would have been well, notwithstanding your doubt about his performances. You should now wait until the young are out of the nest and beginning to feed themselves nicely before you reintroduce him, so as to avoid all risks of the hen ceasing to feed them when re-mated. Providing neither the last year's cock nor his mother are inbred to any appreciable extent, and are both strong and healthy, there is no reason why you should not mate them either this year or next. But do not interbreed again with any of their progeny. You will find a list of all our books in various parts of the paper. "Cage Bird Hybrids" is far and away the best thing you can get in this line. By the way, it was not 7d. per week, but per month. Now, however, the work is complete, and can be had ready bound, on easy terms, as advertised on the back page.

Four in One (G.E.C.)—(1) Certainly, in quite warm weather such as this it is not only advisable, but very beneficial to allow the hen to bathe whilst sitting. Leave the bath on for a couple of hours morning and afternoon on last day or two of incubation. (2) Yes, plain canary seed is quite sufficient whilst sitting. A pinch of rape about three times a week may be given, but is not really essential. If the cock is running all the time in the same cage as the hens, of course he gets the same treatment as the hens. (3) Give a very little egg food on the thirteenth morning after incubation has commenced. The young will probably hatch during the day, and if they do, give a little fresh egg food in the afternoon. After this continue the supply regularly, fresh two or three times a day, and in small quantities at first, gradually increasing it from day to day. (4) In ordinary cases begin to give green food on the third or fourth day, but should the hen show signs of not beginning to feed young, you may give a little greenstuff from the first.

Continually Moulting (F. Holme).—If you are quite satisfied the bird is in no draught, you should see that there is no extreme variation between day and night temperature, and that it is not too high up near the ceiling where the air is generally stuffy and impure. If the bird has hitherto been accustomed to quite normal temperature it would doubtless benefit from a few weeks in a healthy outdoor aviary. Feed it on plain canary only and a liberal supply of chickweed daily for a week, and during this time give a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea in the drinking water every second day. After this give a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape as staple. Every second day give in addition half a teaspoonful of crushed stale sponge cage with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet, linseed, and teazle. Give a little green food daily. In the water give 20 drops of chemical food every second day until moulting has ceased.

Roller Organ (Songster).—Glad to hear previous advice was so successful. (1) A Roller organ is a mechanical device specially designed and constructed for producing notes similar to the song of a good Roller Canary, and thereby supplying the place of a tutor for young birds when the old birds are out of song. Sorry I cannot give addresses here. Send to one or two of the largest Canary dealers who advertise in our columns for a catalogue, and say what it is you want, and you will soon find the want supplied. Or you may see organ advertised in a short time from now. The price is about £3 10s. (2) Judging from your description the Roller hen may be a cinnamon variegated, but cannot say for certain. Treat her as advised in first part of reply to "W. H. Lovelock," and exercise patience. She will probably set to work in earnest before long. She may be a very young, late-hatched bird.

Canary Querists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "House's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Yorkshire Canaries," 1/-, post free.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

A Feather Puller.

Bristol.—I have looked up my former reply, and find there is little more that I can devise to assist. You must persevere with the treatment. It is your only hope, and when you least expect it, the bird may give up and permit its plumage to grow. But a confirmed feather-puller or biter seldom entirely gives up the habit, though they may leave off for a period and then get a relapse, but you will know how to treat it at once if such should be your experience. Continue exactly on the lines of our previous reply, but, in lieu of the quassia solution, use a weak solution of fir tree oil, and avoid as far as possible getting it into the bird's eyes. Also paint the bare areas with Spratt's "Pennakura," and if this is non-effective, then try painting with bitter aloes. I should be pleased if you would report progress again in another month.

Value of Talking Senegal.

J.A.W.—I am sorry indeed to hear of the loss of your bird, and the value of such an one was, of course, just as much as you could get for it. I have a Parrot I would not take £50 for, but I could not get that amount for it. Most certainly, a lowish value for the bird would be half as much again as the sum you name, but the question is whether you would not be better advised to accept the best offer you can get without a trial, than to run the risks of the view the judge would put upon expert evidence. If you can get the sum named, plus your solicitor's expenses, my advice is accept it. The value of your bird hangs upon its talent and tame demeanour, and all things considered, I should place it at from eight to ten pounds. It has been some time since I named it for you, and it was then a young bird. Has it altered in plumage much? I should be greatly interested if you would describe it to me, so that at this stage I could definitely verify the previous identification. It would be helpful if you would send me a rough diagram of the bird, showing roughly shape of tail, etc., and marking out the colour areas, and writing the colours in the various areas.

A Sick Blue-front.

M.B.S.—Dissolve 3 grains of bromide of potassium in a little syrup and give direct to the beak. This is one dose and must be given slowly, or an appearance of choking is produced, with such exhausting effect at such periods as during or previous to the seizures. Repeat the dose before (if possible), or after each seizure. Continue the magnesia every fourth day, so long as the voidings are not watery loose. Diet: A seed mixture of two parts each of canary and white millet and one part each maize, hemp, oats, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds. Well mix and keep a supply in the cage. It can also have a little boiled maize two or three times a week (this only keeps fresh one day). Boil till soft, then drain away all water and supply to the bird when cool; also ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuits, and a little boiled potato or other vegetables, if unseasoned and without gravy. Add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed mixture. Report progress about ten days hence, and I will try and assist you further.

Pennants and Rosellas.

Pennant.—Pennants and Rosellas will not agree together in the same cage, though either alone will agree with Cockatiels, Budgerigars, and Lovebirds, provided they are not in too confined a space. Both Pennants and Rosellas have been bred in captivity. The latter are the most free breeders, and the former to get good results should have an enclosure to themselves. The best nest receptacles are small barrels, hung up longitudinally, with a hole cut in one end for entrance—well cleaned oyster barrels answer well enough. The head of the hen Pennant is a trifle rounder than that of the male, also she is slightly smaller and the crimson areas are slightly less intense, but the difference is not great, and only applies to adult birds. Their principal seed mixture should consist of canary and white millet, with a few oats, little hemp, paddy rice, and only a few sunflower seeds occasionally; green food ripe fruit, and plain biscuits, the latter may only be eaten during the breeding season. Pennants are scarce at the present time, and have been rather uncommon for the last two years, though in the past they have been at times fairly plentiful.

Treatment for Constipation.

Wright.—Only give a small quantity of water, and let this consist of equal parts of Dinneford's Magnesia and water till relief is given, and then give at half this strength twice weekly so long as the voidings are not watery loose. Milk sop is bad for the bird, but give it one or two more lots till the bowels are moving more freely, as you can make it the medium of administering tasteless castor oil by stirring into it three drops of the oil, but both the milk and oil should be stopped as soon as the bowels have properly moved. The magnesia should then be sufficient to keep them properly regulated. Give the following seed mixture: Two parts each canary and white millet seeds, and one part each oats, hemp, paddy rice, grit, and sunflower seeds. Well mix and keep a supply in the cage. The other items of the diet you name can all be given. If it will eat ripe orange, a little might be useful at this juncture. After you cease giving the milk sop, if it appears to yearn for the sop, a small quantity of sponge cake sprinkled with sugar and moistened with warm water could be given with safety. If relief is not given, say a week hence, please write again with full details. Our Nutshell Booklet, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our Manager, should prove useful.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

Parrot with Swelling.

J. Baxter.—It would be well if you informed me how you are feeding this bird. Keep the swelling well cleansed with tepid water, and the next time it bursts after well cleansing out the wound, apply a little healing ointment. Keep the bowels well regulated, but they must not be allowed to remain watery loose. One teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, every third or fourth day should suffice, and, on the intermediate days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Also well examine the mouth and throat, and if there are any whitish specks to be seen, put a little honey and borax into the bird's mouth twice daily. This can do no harm, at any rate. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, or animal food of any kind whatever. You do not say what kind of Parrot it is, so I cannot attempt a seed mixture, but the diet should consist of seeds (according to species of Parrot), ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, with grit, cuttlebone, and water for drinking and bathing. See rules re replies by post. If it is a Grey Parrot our Nutshell Booklet, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our Manager, should help you as to general treatment.

What Disease? (J. Comey).—Without a post-mortem examination it is impossible to say definitely what your bird died of, but it appears to be without doubt either an internal rupture or dysentery, and your details certainly point to the latter. You should have repeated your query when the bird did not improve, as it might have been possible to have treated the bird successfully if you had been able to describe the later symptoms. As a matter of precaution, I should first paint the cage with crude parraffin and then, after an hour or so, well scald it out with boiling water (perches and utensils) and finally swill with cold water and leave in the open for a couple of days for sun and air to complete the purification. Only your letter has reached me so far.

What Parrot? (A Lover of Birds).—It is impossible for me to attempt to name your bird from the meagre details supplied. Repeat you query next week. Give some idea as to size, whether tail is long or short. If you will tell me the source you got the bird from, also whether it is a young one, etc., I shall be pleased to name it for you. In the meantime, feed it on canary and white millet seeds, with a few oats and a little hemp, also green food and ripe fruit. A pinch of grit to be added to the daily supply of seed. Offer water three times a day.

Passerine Doves (F.A.B.).—This interesting and minute species is a free breeder in a roomy aviary, but very wild in a small one, and, during the incubation period would, I fear, be always dashing off her eggs when anyone approached her vicinity. In the most retired part of your aviary hang up a box (about 6 or 8 inches square), with a strip about 2 inches deep across the front; also hang up half a cocoanut husk and leave them to make their choice. In a friend's aviary three pairs were reared by one pair last season, and the food supplied was white and spray millet, plus what green and live food they picked up in a large wilderness aviary. They are quite harmless, so far as small Finches and Waxbills are concerned, but Doves are very quarrelsome with their own kind.

Parrot or Cockatoo? (Perplexed).—Yes, all the names you quote refer to one and the same species, commonly known as the Roseate or Rose-breasted Cockatoo. It raises the head feathers when excited in the form of a semi-crest. The majority of Roseates do not make much of talkers, yet I have met with really talented birds of this species. Keep it where it will hear plenty of conversation; talk to it when it is restful, and make a fuss of it generally, that is, as soon as it is fairly tame. You must avoid scaring it. You cannot teach it till it is fairly tame. Newly imported birds can often be obtained for 7s. 6d. They usually make chummy and interesting pets; their acrobatic antics and grotesque demeanour being really amusing.

What Parrakeet (E. Thornton).—I thought nearly everyone knew the Moustache Parrakeet, and this is what misled me when your query came to hand last week, just as we were going to press, with no time to compare descriptions. There are several local races, all of which are sold as Javan, Banded, or Moustache Parrakeets, first by one name and then by the other. They differ but little in colouration and size, the greens being a little bluer, greyer, or yellower in the respective variations. Their value is but small. Newly imported, they can often be bought for 4s. 6d. to 7s. 6d. per pair; established and talking 20s. to 40s., according to talent and condition.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Hand-rearing Magpies & 'Daws.

A. W. O. Mason.—You should have no trouble in hand-rearing either a Jackdaw or Magpie. If you mix finely-minced hard-boiled egg with an equal quantity of very stale bread crumb, and moisten it with new milk when feeding, you should get along all right. If you get several young ones, however, you will find it cheaper to use thoroughly scalded and mashed-up puppy biscuits (of best quality), with which you can mix the egg in the proportion of three parts biscuit to one of egg. You can give the youngsters mealworms, by all means, and smallish garden worms, cut into suitable pieces, should also certainly be supplied. Also you can frequently chop up a piece of lean mutton or beef (mince it up finely) and give amongst the food; or a little tender cooked meat can be given. Personally, however, I fight shy of meat as much as possible (especially so for very young birds), for I am certain it upsets the stomach of most birds (sets up diarrhœa), especially when much is used raw. I prefer boiled or stewed rabbit flesh to all other, when obtainable. Mix a good big pinch of fine grit amongst the food now and again, or about half a teaspoonful of powdered cuttlefish bone. You can give the birds a drink of plain water after each meal, if you like. If any nestling should get a touch of diarrhœa (which is unlikely if you give the cuttlefish or grit), well mix a saltspoonful of prepared chalk powder (from any good chemist) amongst a portion of the food fed to it. Repeat after an interval, if it seems necessary. Take them from the nest when about 10 to 12 days old. Keep the birds very clean and as warm and cosy as possible.

Hand-rearing a Nightingale.

R. Y. N.—You would find it best to have by you a good practical book dealing with the feeding and management of insectivorous birds, such as the Nightingale. I recommend you to purchase Mr. Norman's book on "Softbills" (price 1/1, post free, from CAGE BIRDS). I respect your opinion, but my own experience with Nightingales tells me that they certainly feel the cold weather, and keenly, too, no matter what food is supplied to them. I speak of birds kept in cages, for I know of an instance where they wintered in the South in a very large outdoor aviary, and were singing at Xmas-time. As regards the hand-rearing, if you mix best quality ants' eggs (freed from all rubbish) with equal parts of stale sponge-cake, or of crushed biscuit (such as Maizena wafers), and hard-boiled yolk of egg (beaten up fine), you have a food which will accomplish this. As the youngsters grow, at the time of feeding, chop up some mealworms and add to the portion required. The food must be moistened to a sloppy consistency (like cream) with new milk. The food, also, must be always quite sweet and fresh, and now and again a pinch of powdered cuttlefish bone should be stirred amongst it, and now and again give a few drops of warm water (not hot). All the small flies and grubs you can capture, with smooth caterpillars, should also be given. If you can get some live ants' eggs (they are to be bought), use them freely; they will bring you success. Keep the youngsters snug and cosy. For general directions consult Mr. Norman's handbook on British Birds. The young birds should be taken when nine or ten days old, and kept in a warm place, especially at night, and scrupulously clean. They are tender-mouthed, and care should be exercised not to hurt them when feeding.

Hand-rearing Hawfinches.

E. D. Evans. I don't believe in taking any young Finches from their parents at too early an age; let them show their feathers nicely before you remove them. I would sooner have to "cram" them at first. Up to the twelfth day (from the 10th to 12th) is safe enough. The food to be used is the usual kind that is, egg and biscuit. Crush two Maizena wafers or Osborne biscuits, and well mix with them a hard-boiled egg, using a fork to do this with, one with thin prongs. Mince the egg up finely and the whole can be passed through a potato "squeezer" (or masher). When feeding take the required quantity of this mixture, and make it the consistency of thin paste (or of cream) with new milk. See that it is always sweet and free from the slightest taint of sourness. The egg food must be made fresh at least once daily. Often I put in a good pinch of Plasmon powder, which I am never without in my bird room. A few small cut up pieces of mealworm may be dipped in milk and popped into their mouths pretty frequently; likewise any house flies you can capture should also be fed to them. As the youngsters grow, add a little soaked and just sprouting summer rape to the stock food. Steep the rape seed in cold water, which thoroughly change every day. It will soon begin to germinate (burst), and is then ready for use, dabbing it as dry as possible in a cloth before mixing it in the food. Note other replies given this week. I recommend Mr. Norman's book on "Hardbills" to you as a helpful guide to keep by you.

Song Thrush and Missel Thrush (Constant Reader).—The Song Thrush and Missel Thrush are somewhat alike in form, markings, and colouration, yet sufficiently distinct as to be readily identified. The Missel is considerably larger (two inches, roughly speaking), is lighter in colour (light ashen-brown instead of dark olive brown), while its breast markings are wider (i.e., tend to spread across the breast, while in the Song Thrush they are narrower and run downwards). The under wing coverts of the Song are yellowish—orange-yellow in a rich coloured specimen—while in the Missel they are white; further, the latter bird has white tips to the outer tail feathers, and the Song Thrush has not. A really good Missel Thrush is an excellent bird for show purposes, and its song is very loud and free.

Canary on Bullfinch Eggs (R.G.L.).—Yes; a hen Canary will sit on a Bullfinch's egg and hatch and rear the young Bullie. This has very frequently been successfully accomplished.

Identity of Bird (T. Widdowson).—The bird is evidently a Green Singing Finch, a well-known foreign bird—no doubt an escape from captivity. If it has no song, then it is probably a hen. It often happens that these "puzzles" turn out to be escaped, or released, foreign birds.

A Goldfinch Problem (Olive Green).—I still think you are mistaken as to the sex of the bird, and I say this with all due respect. A hen Goldfinch when caged alone will "sing" during the spring and summer sufficiently to deceive any number of people with regard to its sex. Your description of the song, "about four notes for two or three minutes at a time," reads uncommonly like a description of the song of the hen. A healthy house-moulted hen will sing almost incessantly, as will also a hen Linnet. If the bird is tight in plumage, bright of eye, and sprightly of movement, you need not worry as to whether it is getting "too much seed." It takes a great deal of that kind of thing to upset the average Goldfinch.

In An Aviary (H. Donaldson).—(1) Aviary number one would accommodate nicely from 24 to 30 small Finches, and aviary number two about 10. The latter is not a good size, the depth (eighteen inches) being insufficient. (2) Sometimes a Lark will dash about rather wildly when confined in an aviary of medium size, more especially when human beings are around. If you obtain a bird already used to captivity you will minimise the likelihood of trouble on this score. I have known cases where the soaring habit of the Lark has proved a nuisance, and even a danger, in a small aviary. The bird will keep in condition, and also sing.

Loss of Feathers in an Aviary (Miss F. Louis).—I think you are testing the holding capacity of your aviary rather unduly. I should have thought 20 to 24 birds ample for the floor space at command. It is quite likely that the loss of feathers is due to fighting, and that this is contributed to by the overcrowding. You say there is not any fighting, but I venture to think you are mistaken. It is the rule rather than the reverse for Finches to fight and strip (more or less) one another during the breeding season. Bullfinches are very prone to this. I know I always have trouble of this nature if I have any mixed lots of birds at this time of the year. I have a Chaffinch now which looks a sad wreck so far as plumage is concerned. I never spotted the actual culprit, but feel sure it was either a Yellowhammer or a Greenfinch, which, with others, were in the same flight. I have known scores of such cases, too, in the aviaries of my friends.

Waders, etc. (T.W.H.).—I have never had the pleasure of keeping Little Grebes, Ruffs, Reeves, Knots, Dunlin, Redshank, Sandpipers, etc., so cannot give you any information concerning them. They are not "cage birds," of course, and until my rich old aunt leaves this "vale of tears" and makes it possible for me to settle in the country and own a wild-fowl lake, why, Little Grebes and the like are among the unattainable things of life. Mr. Finn, speaks well of the Ruff (including, of course, the Reeve, the female) as an aviary bird, and recommends the usual soft food (insectile mixture of coarse grade), also raw rice, wheat, millet, and canary seed, with worms and minced raw meat when the latter delicacies are unobtainable. I do not recommend you to start with Reed, Sedge, and Marsh Warblers if you have had no previous experience of keeping delicate softbills. They are summer migrants and would probably all fail to survive the winter. Further, the Marsh Warbler is rare and not easy to obtain. I have only seen one living specimen, and that I owned myself three summers ago. Few bird-keepers, I fancy, have owned examples. You want to read a treatise on the feeding of such-like insectivorous species, say "Meating-off and Feeding Softbills" (post free 7d. from CAGE BIRDS).

Linnet and Hen Canary (Invalid).—Interference with, or even continually looking at, hen Canaries whilst sitting will suffice to cause some of them (young, or nervous, hens in particular) to desert their nests, especially if they have been sitting one or two days only. Let your bird have another nestpan and some nesting material, and she will soon put a fresh nest together. Leave the cock Linnet with her during the period of incubation. They are not often meddlesome; I rarely find it necessary to part a Linnet from his mate. Screen the nestpan judiciously by pinning a piece of brown paper on the cage front. Then let well alone. Don't overdo it, of course, and block out all the light.

A Blackcap's Cage (American).—(1) The size you mention is a good one (18 by 14 by 9), but, personally, I should go to at least 20ins. for the length, and 24ins. is not too much for a stock cage. (2) I do not advise you to have the top and back lined with green baize. Simply have them enamelled in the usual way. Thanks for relating your experiences with the Linnets' eggs placed under the Canary. It is a little unusual, however, for eggs to go so long without warmth after having been sat upon only (apparently) two days, and you might not be so successful next time. You were fortunate, too, in getting the hen Canary to feed them, seeing there was a difference of 5 days in the ages of the two lots of youngsters.

A Mating Matter (G.E.E.).—(1) It is quite a common practice to take one nest of Canaries from a hen before running the cock Goldfinch with her. I very often do so myself. (2) It is not necessary for the beak of a Goldfinch to be quite clear before he can fertilise eggs. I have frequently had good eggs from a Goldie whose beak showed a dark streak at the tip, and this year has proved no exception. A white beak is a very good sign, of course, but I place more reliance upon the vent of the bird (whether he is properly "sprung" or not), in the same way as with a cock Canary. If a bird is properly "sprung," he doesn't need a clear beak to assist him to fertilise eggs.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird: for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Mr. John Glennon.—You inadvertently used the term "cock bird" in your description. It was a hen bird, and death arose from peritonitis consequent upon disease of the oviduct.

Miss Lena Rochford.—Hen died of rupture of a blood vessel on the lungs, following congestion. There was a large blood clot surrounding the heart, and the vessels of the lungs were highly congested. This is a not infrequent occurrence with hens sitting, and generally associated with a weak heart.

E. Kavanah.—Your bird died of apoplexy; there was a blood clot on the surface of the brain, and the coverings of the brain were in an inflammatory condition. Rupture of a blood vessel on the brain surface results, and death occurs almost simultaneously.

W. Berry.—Liver disease caused death of Grey Parrot; the body was very emaciated, and in a dropsical state. This dropsical condition denotes disease of some standing, and is brought on through debility. The primary cause of the liver affection is the introduction of some irritant matter taken in with the food.

G.C.A.S.—Your bird was affected with laryngitis, an affection in which the larynx becomes irritable and inflamed, the parts are swollen, and noise occurs when breathing. It originates in the first place from cold, and sometimes assumes a chronic form, as in this case. Death resulted from exhaustion of the inflammatory process to the lungs, causing death from pneumonia.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

An Address Wanted (David Evans).—To give address without permission is against our rules. Send your communication in a sealed, stamped envelope, and we will see that it is forwarded to the gentleman you name.

A Matter of Pedigree (W.H.T.).—We will take the matter up for you, if you wish, providing you comply with rule 8 under "Questions and Answers." Your Canary query has been sent on to our specialist, Mr St. John, who will deal with it in his columns.

Figure Four Trap (E. Greenwood). Can you tell us the date, or thereabouts, upon which you saw the drawing of this trap? No doubt we could supply you with the issue in which it appeared.

Photographs (T. Nicholls; W. Rowley).—Thanks for the photographs. Will try to find a corner for them in the near future.

Press Cuttings (T. Potter, J. Cox, and others).—We are much obliged to you for forwarding the paragraphs from newspapers.

Canary Breeding for Beginners

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Post Free 7d.

A practical, up-to-date guide to Canary Breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner in the hobby.

Contains many helpful illustrations, and deals very fully, and in an easily-understandable manner, with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing, and moulting the young, colour feeding, training for show, etc.

All the details of bird-breeding explained, while it shows the way out of all difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

Canary Rearing Two Larks.

Sir,—I have put two young Larks under a hen Canary which failed to lay any eggs, and she is feeding them well, and will bring them up.

An Appeal for the Widow of a Blackburn Fancier.

Sir,—Please publish the following additions to the fund being got up for the benefit of Mrs. F. G. Johnson, vide the appeal made in Cage Birds of April 15 last: W. and H., London, 1s.; Mr. S. H. Mays (Wansford), 2s. 6d.; Mr. Butterworth (Blackburn), 5s.; A Friend, 6d.

Song Thrush Nests Under a Railway Carriage.

Sir,—No doubt readers will be interested to hear that to-day (Saturday, May 20) I found the nest of a Mavis (containing four eggs) built on the springs of a third-class bogie railway carriage here (Craigie, Perth). I have the nest and three of the eggs in my possession now, one of the eggs, unfortunately, being broken. I have heard of nests being found in such a position, but until now I have never seen one.

Joe. McCondach.

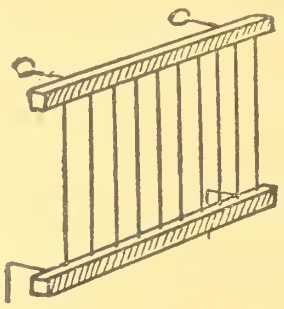
A White Canary is Bred in Coventry.

Sir,—I have bred a white Canary. It was in a nest of four. His brothers or sisters are very heavy marked birds, and its parents are a green buff hen and clear yellow cock (Norwich). Is it uncommon or not? I should like to know, being only a novice. I have read of white Canaries in your value paper Cage Birds, but not bred off such a pair as mine. I have 12 young altogether, 8 Canaries and 4 brown Linnet mules. H. Adkins.

Coventry.

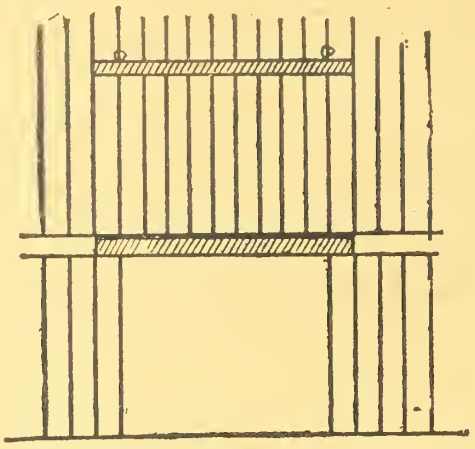
[We presume our correspondent does not mean that he has bred just an ordinary clear buff youngster—such a bird would look very light in colour in its nest feathers. He would do well to ask one of the many experienced Coventry fanciers to look at the bird and give an opinion.—Ed.]

A Young Linnet Problem.



Sir,—I see in Cage Birds that a gentleman wishes to know if he were put young Linnets into cages, whether the parents would continue to feed them. If he were to put them and the nest also into the cage, and put it as near where he took the nest from as possible, they would most probably still feed them. I have known it to be done. Put the cage, however, as near to the place where the nest was situated. A Constant Reader.

Sir,—Will you kindly allow me to answer a few questions regarding Mr. H. Metcalfe's Young Linnet Problem? Yes, Mr. Metcalfe, you can successfully get a few young Linnets if you take them when they are about ten or twelve days old, and put them in a small cage close to their own nest, well hidden away from prying eyes; also from Hawks, and stoats, and weasles. I have had a lot of birds killed by these pests. Also, you should put plenty of clean sand in the bottom of the cage, as they will otherwise get so dirty that you will be very much ashamed of yourself when you have a peep at them. Try, too, to keep them well under the bush, so as to keep the great showers off, as I have also found a number drowned. The cage is the main thing. It should have a wood top, and the wires should be very close together. I also cover it with quarter mesh netting. If you observe these few points while the young ones are a month or five weeks growing, you can safely take them away without much trouble. J. Govier.



The Northern Yorkshire C.C.

Sir,—At a meeting of the Northern Yorkshire Canary Club held May 18, the secretary (Mr. R. Tindale) voiced the feeling of all members when he moved a vote of sympathy to the late secretary and present chairman, Mr. T. C. Crawhall. He said he wished to assure Mr. Crawhall of our deepest sympathy in the sad circumstances which led to his disposing of his stock of Yorkshire Canaries. There is no doubt it has been a very great sacrifice, as it is a hard thing to part with the result of years of labour and thought, to say nothing of the expense involved in getting a good strain of birds together. Only those who have done this can realise what it means. There is no doubt Mr. Crawhall has been the pioneer of the Yorkshire Canary in the North of England, and the N.Y.C.C.—as he says himself, it has been his "pet bairn." He was never happier than when working for the Variety or the Specialist Club—always ready to help or give advice where it was needed. We all hope the time is not far distant when he may take the birds up again. Still, the cloud has a silver lining (as most clouds have), as the N.Y.C.C. is to retain Mr. Crawhall as chairman. The proposal was carried with acclamation and heartily supported by Messrs. Tomlinson, Dix, Atkinson, and several others. Mr. Crawhall, in responding, said he had always done his best for the Yorkshire Canary, and the N.Y.C.C., and hoped he would be able to do so in the future.

An Easily Made and Fitted Cage Door.

Sir,—May I send you my idea of a cage door for wood bar fronts for those who make their own fronts? I find it very convenient when hanging on a bath or a nursery cage, as I can lift them right up out of the way, and can rest on the bath; and there is no harbour for red mite, etc. You will see by the sketch that the two end wires of the door are bent over the top to form an eye to run on the wires in cage front, and the bottom to form a hook to rest on front rail; or when it is lifted up it will hook on cross bar. I think the illustration will explain.

The English Scotch Fancy Club.

Sir,—Would you kindly insert an enquiry for the address of the present secretary of the English Scotch Fancy Club? I have written to Mr. F. Harrison, 145, Balby Road, Doncaster, but find he has removed.

A New Fanciers' Society and Show for Halstead.

Sir,—Fanciers will no doubt be interested to learn that a fanciers' society has been formed at Halstead, Essex, with a twenty mile radius. A members' show of cage birds, etc., has been arranged for July 8. Anyone interested, who would care to join, will be welcomed. I shall be pleased to give anyone the necessary particulars. A. C. Sayward,

Fixed Prize Money at Sheffield Shows.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. J. Woolhouse's letter in your last issue respecting the above, I still maintain that the statement in my report was correct, as we still claim to be out of the ordinary in giving fixed prize-money, viz., 4s., 2s., and 1s., equal 7s. per class in all, for a sixpenny entry fee of five entries at both Nest Feather and back-end Members' Shows. I admit that Walkley C.B.S. is the only club in the district that does likewise. This proves in itself that my statement of "out of the ordinary" is correct. The general rule is "prize-money on the sliding scale: 6d. entry fee." The society then keeps 1d. out of each entry, the remaining 5d. going to prize fund. This is the system adopted by the Sheffield C.B.S., of which Mr. Woolhouse is assistant secretary. I notice by the report of meeting of the Sheffield C.B.S. that they are having 47 classes in all for their Nest Feather Show, and are going to pay equal prize-money, viz., 7s. per class. They will have to get an average entry of 17 birds per class. I hope they will, but am afraid it is doubtful.

John A. T. Woodall,
Press Correspondent, Sheffield O.S.

Sir,—I was surprised on looking through my Cage Birds to-day to find a letter from Mr. J. Woolhouse under the heading as above. He says, by the report of the Sheffield O.S., they are giving fixed prize money at their nest feather show, which they claim to be out of the ordinary in the Sheffield district, and which he would like to point out is not so. Mr. Editor, with your kind permission, I, as secretary of the Sheffield O.S., would like to confirm the report which appeared in your valuable paper on May 13, and also to state we have a rule, No. 14 (a copy of which I enclose), which clearly states that prize money for members' shows be 4s., 2s., 1s. for 5 entries; entry fee 6d.; and which I contend is out of the ordinary in the Sheffield district. Mr. Woolhouse says the Walkley C.B.S. has given fixed prize money for several years; this I grant him; but not on the same principle as the S.O.S. The Walkley C.B.S. was started some 2 or 3 years ago, and perhaps it will surprise Mr. Woolhouse to know it was I who gave the gentlemen, who are personal friends of mine, the outline of a society, also classes, etc., to provide, and, if at all possible, to give fixed money, no matter how small. So they decided to meet a few days before a show, when each said what he was willing to show, and they therefore arranged the few classes so as to be able to pay fixed prize money. There is every credit due to the few who have worked hard for this little society. But, Mr. Woolhouse, where does the sore hurt? Why don't you out with it, and not hide under the cloak of the Walkley C.B.S.? Fanciers of Sheffield have long since got tired of carting their birds about for a copper or two, and the Sheffield O.S. is alive to the fact. I notice in Mr. Woolhouse's report of the Sheffield C.B.S in to-day's issue, that they are giving an extended classification, to give everybody a chance. Twelve classes for British. I can see something out of the ordinary in the way of prize money here. It will be a lucky chance if the winners clear their carriage fare. Forty-seven classes in all, which means 800 entries before your members get per class what the S.O.S. members get for 5 entries per class. Now, Mr. Woolhouse, the Sheffield O.S. has something out of the ordinary in Sheffield at their next meeting, June 13, a table show of foreign birds with 18s. prize money, and no entrance fee. Buck up, Mr. W., and come and join the society that gives fixed prize money—a society that is only 5 months old, and has a membership of 70. Everybody welcome. T. Bishop, Secretary S.O.S.

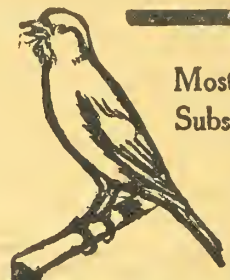
A Ringed Swallow Caught.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. F. L. Weaire's enquiry re a Ringed Swallow caught, I think it must be the one that was caught here last June. The ring I placed on its leg was a metal pigeon ring numbered 13, cut down to fit the leg. It was one of four that always roosted here in one of the greenhouses. This year, on April 19, three put in an appearance here, and took up their old roosting place over the greenhouse door, and the fourth has come recently, and may be seen in the old place every night. I have not disturbed them to find out if the ringed one is with them, as I thought that if I could get some rings more suitable I would try and ring more of them this year. Perhaps some kind reader of your paper could inform me where I might get some. I must thank Mr. F. J. Weaire for taking the trouble to write on the matter, as it is not the first I have rung in a like manner, but the only one I have heard anything of. J. Foster.



[The authorities of the University, Aberdeen (Natural History Dept.), have offered to supply such rings as are referred to by our correspondent—vide their letter published in our issue dated March 25 last.—Ed.]

An Appeal to Cinnamon Canary Breeders

And Owners of Siamese Cats.

Sir,—With your permission, I venture to make an appeal to fanciers of the above for help in an investigation on which I have been engaged for some time past, and in which it is essential that I should examine as many specimens (dead) as possible of the young of these two animals. It is possible that at this time Cinnamon Canary fanciers may have young "dead in shell" or dying at various stages of growth after being hatched, and that breeders of Siamese cats experience the loss of a pregnant queen or the death after birth of one or more kittens. These I would earnestly ask to be good enough to forward to me—addressed The Pathological Department, College of Medicine, Newcastle-on-Tyne—the bodies as soon as possible after death, accompanied by a note giving the age at which death took place or the duration of pregnancy or period of incubation in cases where these were not satisfactorily terminated. I shall be only too pleased to pay any expense of carriage.

Points for Hybrid Breeders.

Sir,—Can any reader of Cage Birds inform me what I should give the following birds—a cock Bramblefinch paired off with large Plainhead prize-bred Norwich hen? The hen had two eggs, but these were addled, as some of the other birds pulled out a portion of the nest and the eggs got under the remainder. I have watched them pair off again the last day or two, and the hen is again building. Would they require a good insect food and mealworms should I be fortunate enough to get eggs and have them hatched? Has anyone known of this cross having been produced? Any information regarding the feeding I should be very pleased to receive. The birds are in a large outdoor aviary. I have also a cock Turtle Dove crossed with a Ring Dove hen. In the first nest they hatched out two, but one fell out of the nest and I did not notice it. But when I found it I took it in and put it before the fire; but it was to no purpose, as it was already dead. They went to nest again and brought out two, both alive; and they reared them and got them out of the nest. They are sitting again on two more eggs. The three young ones are growing nicely, each showing the parentage of both birds; and I think they will make very pretty birds when they are moulted. I thought others might be interested to read of the occurrence. I think one of the secrets of success in Hybrid breeding and getting the birds to cross is to hang the cock bird which it is intended to pair with the hen of whatever species on the front wires of the cage, so that when he sings the hen will call; then, when the cock bird is tried with the hen, they are more likely to pair. That is how I personally have got the pairing done. I do not remember having seen this mentioned in any experiences previously recorded in your columns. Inquirer.

The Quality Notes of a Linnet's Song.

Sir,—We should like to read and learn through the columns of CAGE BIRDS all we can about the different way fanciers sing their Linnets in the quality clubs in England. If the secretaries would be kind enough to put into writing all the notes they count, then we should perhaps be able to follow a good bird if we had one. WALTER DOBSON.

The City of Glasgow O.A.

SIR,—Regarding our half-yearly meeting, which was held on May 20, I wish you would call the attention of your readers, especially those members of the Society who were not present, as well as those who left early, that there was passed a motion to appoint a "Special Committee" to make an enquiry into the alleged judging of his own birds by one of our judges at our late show. The course I mean to adopt, so that we can get at the truth, is this: Appoint a committee consisting of Scotch Fancy members, advertise the meeting, giving ample opportunity to these men of getting evidence by inviting same from both sides, these men to give a ruling on the matter at a general meeting called for the specific purpose of deciding one way or another on this case, which in the interest of the Fancy and in the interest of the Glasgow O.A. must be cleared up. I trust you will give this space in your valuable paper.

DAVID BLACK, President.

The Cost of Carriage of Exhibition Birds.

Sir,—In CAGE BIRDS of May 13, in the article upon the Roller Canary (by "Schoolmaster"), I read the remarks headed "Off to the Shows." If the statements therein were correct, it would answer all right for exhibitors. But I often pay the 1½ per cent. insurance as well as the compulsory 50 per cent. extra charge upon live stock. Since reading the statement by "Schoolmaster," I have called their attention to it at Ashbourne Station, so that they could make enquiries and have no trouble when the show season comes on. The clerk in charge has taken the matter up with the railway company and has had a reply from the head office that paying the insurance would not do away with the 50 per cent. extra charge as "Schoolmaster" states. I should like to hear further from the writer about it, and to ask what railway company is conveying exhibits on the terms he states? It would certainly be a great benefit to exhibitors if it could be allowed by railway companies. J. M. WILLIAMS.

Are Show Managers, etc., Asleep?

Sir,—The very sensible letter published in your issue of May 20 above the nom-de-plume of "Scotch Fancy" is most opportune. You, with your bright and instructive journal, assisted by a staff of experts, have done your best to improve and uphold the Fancy, and now, sir, I think the time has come for fanciers and fanciers' societies, show managers, etc., etc., to realise that they must do something towards that end themselves. The first step undoubtedly must be the raising of the prize list value. To expect breeders and owners of valuable birds to continue to risk them at shows for a paltry 14s. or 10s. first prize and a 2s. 6d. special is ridiculous and absurd. No doubt that class of prize was all right in the old days, when a few local fanciers held a show in the club room of their favourite "pub." They expected no birds from long distances to be entered, and they certainly never expected the rare and interesting foreign birds one sees exhibited to-day. But at present we expect at our shows an improved class of birds without ever dreaming of offering improved classes of prizes. The whole thing is unbusinesslike and absurd. You could not have made CAGE BIRDS the success it is without an expenditure of money and energy, and show managers will not improve their shows and the whole Fancy at the same time without an expenditure of both energy and money. The Briton is proverbially sleepy, so I suppose things will go on the same until some American sees money in it, and runs the "hull durned show" for his own benefit, then we shall wake up and say, "Well, who'd 'a thought it?"

H. MOORE.

The Fancy in Ireland.

Sir,—From a letter in last week's issue, as I am the person referred to as "corresponding secretary," it would appear that I am purposely refraining from reporting meetings of the City of Belfast N.C. and Y.C.C. I have kept from writing to CAGE BIRDS solely in the interest of the Fancy, as I think no good can be done as the matter stands. The President's letter (Mr. Adams) should have sufficed as regards the position of the above club. Two more honourable members than the President and Secretary (Mr. Bamford) it would be hard to find. I am saying this with full knowledge, as I have been an active member since the Club was formed. The allegations made in letters written against members of our club are in the main outside the purview of our club. But the remarks re the cup winning Yellow from Dublin certainly comes within the club's duty. A certain member went about the show alleging that the cup winner and other winners were not bred by the owner. Now, from Mr. Birse's letter it would seem that I was one of the parties. I am a fancier, however, and can take a beating with grace. The officials of our club told this party to prove his suspicions, so he set to work gathering evidence. This is the reason I have been keeping silent—until something had been proved. I confess I was disappointed at the last meeting, when the whole thing ended in smoke. This party was the mover of a resolution to confine this club's membership to Ulster, so as to save the secretary trouble attending the railway. The latter part I agreed with as being necessary. But the resolution has not that effect. Why not confine the membership to Belfast? The reason is obvious. With regard to my being afraid to write letters, well, the party who says so doesn't know me. With regard to the notice of motion to expel the member who is writing letters to CAGE BIRDS, a more coercive motion could not be tabled, especially from a member who prides himself as being an apostle of free speech and honesty of purpose.

Is it a Record Egg for Size?

Sir,—On visiting a friend of mine on March 1 to see his stock of Canaries, they appeared to me very interesting, the room itself being a picture of cleanliness for a working man's hobby. I soon found out that I had fairly caught the "Canary fever," so I tried my hand versus my patience at the game. First I bought suitable boxes, also ready-made fronts (these being so cheap). Then I soon purchased six birds (two cocks and four hens), all from a breeder who informed me that he never allowed his birds greenstuff (every man to his own opinion, of course). I was then advised to buy CAGE BIRDS, from which I soon learnt a few hints by experienced men. I placed my birds together on April 10, and started following the hints given in "C.B." Now, I am very pleased to say that I have one nest of three young, four weeks old; one nest of three, three weeks old; and the other two nests adorned with five eggs each. The hen belonging to the first nest laid an egg on a recent morning (May 20) just over an inch in length, ⅞in. in diameter. Is this a record? I am told it must be. I am also informed by my friend, the seller of the birds, that he has only had two eggs from all his stock of birds, and the hen refuses to sit on them. Therefore I think patience is on the same level as experience in some cases in the hobby, or else my luck is properly "in." I sincerely wish CAGE BIRDS and its readers a good bumping and successful season. J. ALFRED BATES.

Northern Counties Border Fancy Club.

Sir,—At the meeting called by Messrs. Peel and Smith re the formation of a Northern Counties Border Fancy Club a good number of Border enthusiasts turned up. The matter of opening this club was well discussed, and it was agreed by all that it was very much needed, as the "wee gems" in this district were very much neglected. It was moved by Mr. Currah and seconded by Mr. Smith that we form a Northern Counties Border Fancy Club, and it was carried unanimously. Our worthy friend Mr. Shepherd, an old and young Border fancier (he having again returned to his first love) was elected chairman, and the vice-chair was filled by that red-hot Border fancier, Mr. Currah. The post of secretary was then handed over to the tender mercies of the writer. It was decided that the radius of the club be the counties of Northumberland and Durham; that the meetings be held in Lockhart's Monument Cafe, Grainger Street, Newcastle, on the first Monday of each month at 7.30 o'clock. The next meeting falling on Whit Monday, it was decided to hold it on June 12 instead. Subscription, the usual sum of 2s. 6d. We appeal to all lovers of the "wee gems" to rally round and do for the "midget" what has been done for the "long 'uns' in this district. Don't delay, do your share, and the ball will keep on rolling until the "wee gems" are at the top of the tree. Anyone interested in the midget of the Canary tribe is welcome as a member. At the next meeting the rules will be discussed and the methods to be used during the coming show season; also the bolding of table shows, etc. Now, ye Border fanciers, we are the last on Tyneside to have a specialists' club of our own, so put your shoulders to the wheel and show the North that, if last, you are not going to be by any means the least. I shall be pleased to enrol anyone, and the busier you keep me putting names down the better I will like it. J. N. F. SCOTT.

Cuckoos in Surrey.

The Cuckoos appear to be unusually plentiful in the county of Surrey this year. If this is so, it will be a bad season for the Pipits and Hedge Sparrows. To rear a young Cuckoo is no easy task. The foster-parents are generally feeding them every three or four minutes.

Under the White Rose.

AN interesting little affair took place at the headquarters of the City of Bradford O.S. last Saturday evening. The members and friends gathered together to make a presentation to their esteemed secretary, Mr. F. Rhodes, who has been under an operation; and all are thankful that it has turned out entirely satisfactorily, and that Mr. Rhodes will again be able to take up the reins of office that he has so well handled during the last few years. The present is in the form of a smoking cabinet. It is a mark of appreciation for services rendered, and a thankoffering to mark his restoration to health. May he live long to use it. There is no doubt be has piloted the society safely through troublesome times.

ADJOURNED general meeting of the Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C. took place last Saturday, and everything has been got into shipshape for the coming season. It now rests with the committee to carry out the instructions and schemes laid down by the members. The latter can be of great assistance by helping them in regard to new members, etc.

THE Y.C.C. hold their general meeting to-day (Saturday), and the members are expected to turn up in full force. There is always something interesting for discussion, and the year's work will have to be got into order. Therefore, those who have anything to bring forward for the benefit of the club are invited to attend.

NATIONAL Green Marked Y.C.C. also hold their annual meeting to-day, and this will enable fanciers who are members of both, and who have some distance to come, to kill two birds with one stone and save expense. They will be able to get into touch with other members, and know more of the working of the club. This club is the latest of the specialist socicties, and is making good progress. And the popularity of the bird it caters for is going up by leaps and bounds; it bids to become recognised as one of the most prominent subvarieties of the Yorkshire.

I HEAR that a little party of the Y.C.B.B. and M.C. had a nice outing last week-end, and saw plenty of the birds so dear to them. But one of them will have to take some fisherman's waterproofs with him next time. Are they getting in training for the suggested ramble? The club has a strong invitation for a ramble to Hardcastle Craggs, under a good guide.

"STRAIGHT 'UN."

Wild-Bird Life.

A Rare Migrant.

Among the thousands of birds added to our list by the spring migration, there are doubtless many which do not come under the heading of ordinary visitors. During the summer months our hedgerows and trees are so densely clothed with leaves that it is at times difficult to identify birds that are well known, either by their plumage or characteristic attitudes and movements. So that, however keen an observer may be, he undoubtedly passes over rare species in the course of his rambles in the breeding season. As proof of this, we frequently have no record of certain birds until the time of the autumn flitting, when from somewhere along the coast we have news of some rare species which must undoubtedly have spent the summer with us. Last autumn more than one specimen of the now rare Norfolk Plover was shot by sportsmen while seeking other game. At one time this handsome bird was fairly common, and Gilbert White appears to have taken a special interest in it. He calls it "remarkably eyed, with bill not above two inches long." The reason for this remark is obvious to those who know the bird. One of its local names is Stone Curlew, on account of its resemblance to the ordinary Curlew, but it has a shorter bill and large yellow eyes. White further describes its habits very truly: "Some of them pass over my house almost every evening after it is dark, from the uplands of the Hill and North Field, away down towards Dorton, where, among the streams and meadows, they find a greater plenty of food." The Stone Curlew haunts wide, extensive heaths and rough open country. The ground cannot be too rough or broken, with patches of heath, furze, and briars, but no trees, for these birds love the dry open country, and only descend to the lower ground at night to feed. Although such spots are annually becoming scarcer in Britain, yet the writer knows of one or two where this handsome bird returns year after year. The bird is shy and wary, and difficult to approach. But with care and caution, and good glasses, one can get a sight of him in his native haunts. To lie prone among the heather and note every action of such a rare species is worth all the trouble of stalking him. And although the writer's cabinet is minus a clutch of these Plovers' eggs, the collector's craze is not strong enough to tempt him to take them.

Heron's Constancy.

Herons probably pair for life, as the same nest is used year after year. It is an early breeder, generally laying its eggs in April, and in some cases in the latter part of March.

Eggs of the Nightingale.

The eggs of the mate of the "King of Songsters" are totally unlike any other small bird's eggs. They are generally olive brown in ground colour, very faintly mottled with reddish-brown. Four to six is the number usually laid.

Placing Nests on the Ground.

It is not generally known that the handsome Girl Bunting will occasionally build upon the ground, generally selecting a hollow on a bank or placing the nest close to a tuft of grass at the foot of a tree. We know of a Blackbird's nest built upon the ground, with the ivy growing around it, and quite a charming picture it makes.

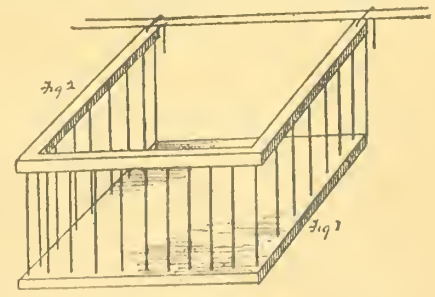
No. 510.

An Easily-made Seed Crusher.

Sent by Mr. G. Godwin, 10, Birchmore Road, Gloucester.

I send you a sketch of a seed crusher, for which get four pieces of board and make it to a box. Get a 1lb. stone jam jar which is ribbed, and a 1lb. treacle tin. Make some holes inside the latter, so that it will be like a grater. But make so that you have the rough side to go against the jar. Groove one hole in each side of the board, so that the jar will fix in firmly.



Then bore one hole in one board, and run a stout piece of wire through it and through the tin; and let it just enter into the board the other side. Have it soldered fast inside the tin first. Then put the lid on the tin very firmly. Solder it all round, and also make the handle tight. Then put the side board on and bend your handle. Lay the contrivance flat on the table, and put the seed in the top. Turn the handle, when seed will be crushed.—G. Godwin.

No. 511.

A Green-food Holder.

Sent by Mr. C. P. Hamond, 8, Queen's Terrace, Otley.

I enclose a sketch of an easily made little box for holding green-food on to the cage front. First of all cut a piece of wood 2in. square (Fig. 1) and bore holes round three of the sides, half an inch apart. Then cut three pieces of wood 2in. long and half-inch wide, as in Fig. 2, and join together; bore holes half an inch apart as before. Then cut your wires about two inches long, and fix in the pieces of wood as in diagram. All that is needed then are two pieces of wire fixed into the two upper ends of the holder, and bent over so as to hook on to the cage-front.—C. P. Hamond.

First Steps in Foreign Bird Keeping.

It need not be gathered from the fact that previous portions of these articles have treated upon keeping foreign birds as a mixed collection, either in large cages or in an aviary, that they may not be kept as individual cage-birds, or at least as individual pairs. A pair of any of the birds mentioned in the three lists (given in No. 480) would be an ornament to any room, and, excepting for the Whydahs, the cage need only be quite a small one. A box cage with a foot of ground space would be quite ample for the accommodation of a pair of Waxbills, and one say 18 by 12 by 10 inches for a pair of Finches or Weavers, and in the simplicity of their feeding and the very little mess they make there is scarcely any trouble involved in their keeping. A tray of Canary and white millet, with a spray of Indian millet, will last them for days, and the tit-bits mentioned in the instalment to which I have referred above, are just optional additions that may be given as and when convenient.

The cage will not need more than a weekly cleaning of the sand-tray, and the only daily attention which will be required will be the giving of fresh drinking water and a small bath. A very necessary fitment for their comfort is one of the small rush nesting-places that may now be bought so cheaply, for nearly all of these charming little creatures prefer to sleep in such a contrivance rather than roost on a perch. Further, they will spend much of their time during the day in popping in and out of their hiding place, or nesting side by side therein, with only their tiny heads peeping out from the small entrance hole. Truly, from the majority of small foreign seed-eaters not much must be expected in the way of song, for our ears cannot catch the notes of some of the species, although we can see that the birds are singing. What is lacking in audible music, however, is more than compensated for in beauty, and this may be of the kind which most appeals to the taste of the owner.

Marvels of Colouration.

If gorgeous colouration be a desideratum, nothing more beautiful may be imagined than the Gouldian Finches, either the Red-headed or the Black-headed. There is a third variety much less frequently imported—the Yellow-headed. No pen-picture can even remotely convey the wonderful beauty of the plumage of the Gouldian Finch. Blues of all shades, cobalt, ultramarine, purplish, call them what we may, they are all there, and what is of one shade one moment is quite different the next, according as the bird shifts its position. Then who shall describe the greens and yellows? As many as are in an artist's list of colours are in the living bird, and all shining with a brilliancy which the cleverest painter could not apply to paper. How, then, may a writer do so? I give it up. Suffice it to say that the hen is less brilliant than the cock, and her breast is lilac where his is shining purple blue.

Gouldian Finches may be bred quite easily in captivity. An ordinary Canary-breeding cage will answer for the purpose, but the nest-box had better be screened off in some way, so that a degree of privacy may be afforded the sitting hen. Egg-binding, that scourge of the foreign-bird breeder, is very prevalent with Gouldian Finches, and may be in a degree obviated by the provision of a piece of cuttle-fish bone at which the birds may nibble, although it is better by far to prevent egg-binding by preventing the laying during what is here an improper season. Birds coming from the Antipodes are mostly exported during the summer season (at the place of exportation) and arrive here, consequently, during our winter, or in early spring. Acclimatized birds gradually accommodate themselves to our seasons, and after a year or two come into breeding condition at something approaching a proper time, but when first imported they want to breed in the winter, and their systems are quite unequal to the strain of egg production. The sexes should therefore be separated if a desire to breed during the winter is evidenced, unless there be convenience to keep up a constant warmth of not less than 65 degrees. The nesting material may simply be a small bunch of hay, but an ordinary Canary nest-bag will assist the hen in binding the bents of hay together.

There is no foretelling with certainty the colour of the heads of the progeny. The probability is that the young of a similarly coloured pair will resemble their parents in face colouration, but a pair of either colour may produce young that differ from their parents. Thus from a pair of blacks we may get either blacks, reds or yellows, and all this adds to the interest of their keeping for breeding. It is not even necessary for the parent birds to be alike in head-colour, for in nature they undoubtedly cross with one another, and a cock of either kind may be paired with a hen of its own or of a different colour.

As I have in previous instalments written, more than once, of the extreme simplicity of the menu necessary for the well-doing of foreign seed-eaters, it will be well to say here that this does not quite apply to Gouldian Finches. Many find these beautiful birds short livers, and this, I think, is because they do not offer them sufficient change of diet. Besides the Canary and millet, which suffice for most foreign seed-eaters, Gouldian Finches must have wild seeds. The best of all is grass in the ear, but many other wild seeds will be appreciated and very helpful. Groundsel, shepherd's purse, chickweed, thistle, etc., will all be useful in their turn, and may be given whenever procurable, care being taken, of course, not to offer them when frost-bitten.

A "Nutshell" by my fellow contributor to Cage Birds, Mr. Wesley T. Page, treating fully upon the Gouldian Finch, has recently been published, and those who would keep these living rainbows can hardly do without the extended information to be therefrom gleaned. That they are great favourites with foreign bird-keepers is certain; they are imported yearly in very large numbers, and one would think that a class for these beautiful Finches would fill at any exhibition.

Although none of the foreign Finches may quite vie with the Gouldian Finch for gorgeousness of colouration, there are many which approach it closely. Who could fail to be impressed by the extreme beauty of the Nonpareil Bunting or of the Pintailed Nonpareil, of the magnificent, if spiteful, Australian Fire-finch, the Painted Finch, the Diamond Sparrow, and many others in our lists? Or, if a quieter kind of colouration appeal to our fancy, there are Waxbills galore from which to choose—Violet-eared, Blue-breasted, Black-cheeked, Golden-breasted, in fact, all of them. If we wish to study the marvellous transformation which takes place at the coming into "breeding plumage" of many of the foreign birds we have ready to our hands the Weavers which at one time of the year have no more colour than the common House-Sparrow, and at another are resplendent in shining crimson, gold and black. Nor need we lack choice if it be song that is our standard; the Green and the Grey Singing Finches, the Alario Finch, Saffron Finch, Avadavat—but I must stop, or I shall be giving the original lists all over again.

A Gifted Songster.

In these articles I have purposely omitted the consideration of those foreign birds which are insectivorous, or fruit or honey-eaters, and among which are some of the most gorgeous in plumage, and the most gifted in song, for their treatment scarcely comes under our heading of First Steps in Foreign Bird-keeping. I must, however, make one exception, and this is in favour of the Indian Shama. Of all the foreign birds that have ever been in my possession, the king is the Shama.

At a recent London show I met a gentleman whom I had not seen for something like fifteen years, and he mentioned in conversation that in that long-ago time I advised him to buy a Shama as an ideal cage-bird. He had not forgotten the circumstance, and thanked me for the pleasure he had derived from adopting my recommendation. His Shama had lived with him for several years, but had been long since dead, and he had remained without a bird of any kind. He now wished me to recommend another purchase of some kind of a pet bird, and my response was "Buy another Shama." This advice I would now take the opportunity of repeating to any of my readers who may only wish to keep one bird. For the combined qualities of gracefulness of shape, smartness of carriage, intelligence and docility as a pet, and beauty of plumage, although clad only in black, russet-brown and white, absolutely no individual bird may be mentioned in the same breath as a Shama.

The Linnet, etc.

Feeding & Preparing for the Show Season.

By. J. NICHOLSON (Skipton).

A lecture delivered before the Leeds C.B.S. on May 6.

I am a great believer in hemp seed for the Goldfinch. I have known birds kept in cages for 8 or 10 years to be fed on nothing else. I am doubtful if they would live for that length of time on any other seed.

The Bullfinch and Its Treatment.

The Bullfinch is a general favourite, but more especially the hen bird. I have eight of them at present paired up—five with Goldfinches, one with a Canary, one with a Linnet, and one with a Hawfinch. This last pair are feeding each other through the wires of the cage at present, and if I am lucky enough to obtain any result I will let you know later on.

I have never gone in for the cock Bullie, and my reason is that I can never come across one having the amount of red on the breast that I see on those exhibited on the show bench, and I have caught scores in my time. Another reason is, I do not think it is a wise plan to have the cock bird in the same room as the hen when you are hybrid breeding.

I feed Bullfinches the same as the Goldfinch, only instead of hardheads and thistles, I give docking seed, of which I gather a lot when they are ripe. The Bullfinch likes these best of all. I also give crushed sunflower seeds.

We seem to have a lot to say and write about the feeding of our pets, but we sometimes forget the most important thing, and that is the drinking water. I find that the water gets stagnant a lot sooner in the case of British birds than in the case of Canaries owing to their eating so many different kinds of seed, and I think that a lot of birds are lost through neglecting to give them fresh water daily. The first sign is that the bird looks thick, and immediately I detect this I put one teaspoonful of sulphate of soda in a gill of water. I give them this for one day, then put them in a large flight if possible, but not with a lot of birds. If the weather be cold, keep them warm, and if you see any sign of their drinking too much water, mix some Parrish's Chemical Food in it.

In conclusion, I should just like to say that our hobby is splendidly catered for in our weekly paper, Cage Birds. Any fancier who misses getting it loses a treat, because every week there is something new and always most valuable information about our pets. But there is one particular thing for which it is invaluable, and that is the "deposit system," and I would advise every fancier to make use of it, either when sending away for birds or selling any; and insist on the buyer doing the same, unless you know your man. There are several "sharpers" on the look-out each week for any new advt. in its columns. They will write and ask you to send your birds on at once, and as soon as they get hold of them that is the last you hear of them. I think it would be a very good thing for every society to have a black list of these sharpers.

An Interesting Discussion.

Mr. Chittenden asked how to detect a faked Linnet, as he had seen many which were described in the show reports as of marvellous colour, and he had heard various opinions from big exhibitors, some holding that the birds were stained, and others that they were the natural colour, made so by feeding. Holding the bird up to the light was a test he had heard mentioned, but even so he thought that a man must be a faker to detect a faked bird.—Answer: You cannot tell by holding the bird up to the light, as great care is taken not to touch the whites of the wing. And I may state that it is impossible to bring out this dye.

Mr. Chittenden: How would you deal with these faked birds?—By putting them back.

Mr. Battye here remarked: I think markings, type, and carriage are a big consideration, and in the case of a bird possessing these qualities besides being a good colour, it would make it a serious matter to put it back, which would be tantamount to disqualification.

Mr. Chittenden: I have what is known as a lemon-breasted Linnet, and if you saw him you would think he was colour-fed; and as Mr. Battye said, would it not be serious to put a good coloured bird back, as generally they have good markings, and are usually big birds?—If judging, I should give preference to the natural-coloured bird, providing he possessed other good qualities.

Mr. Norton remarked: I also am of the opinion that faking wants stamping out. It is disappointing to go to a show and see these faked birds at the top of the class.

Mr. Battye replied to this: It is alright for a casual visitor, but the greatest responsibility is with the judge, who had to try and give satisfaction to all concerned.

Mr. Chittenden: These cases generally get exposed, and I cannot say anything further than that at the present time experiments are being carried out, which, if successful, will put an end to faking; but I think the Fancy is now clean and the judges honest. Consequently, it was the novices who were the greatest offenders; they listened to the "old hands," then tried the dodge themselves, overdoing the process, and consequently the case was glaring.

A member asked if the lecturer had ever stained a Linnet?—Yes; I stained one for a lecture at York, and took it along with two others, one of which was my champion Linnet that gained 8 first prizes out of 11 times, under prominent judges; and the members there placed the stained Linnet first.

Mr. Battye informed the audience how he came across some Canaries which had been stained; when the feathers were blown, underneath was found to be pure white, proving how clever some fanciers were at painting. But if you saw a Linnet dark on top and light underneath, you could, he said, put it out with confidence.

Mr. Chittenden: It is possible to get British birds various shades by feeding. For instance, Bullfinches, if fed entirely on hemp seed, will in time turn completely black. This seed will also make Linnets very dark. You can, too, vary the colour in Greenfinches by using a great number of hardheads.

Mr. Hornby asked the lecturer if he thought washing with carbolic soap would influence the colour?—No; I do not think so. As I mentioned before, my old Linnet got 8 firsts and was only shown 11 times, and he was never washed. I prefer to show them as natural as possible. I simply spray them, and put the bath on regularly.

Mr. Flint proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer. He had himself profited considerably.

Mr. Chittenden seconded the vote of thanks.

Our old friend, Mr. Overend, said it gave him great pleasure to support the vote of thanks, and he was in sympathy with the lecturer re the faking business, although nobody had done more faking than he had; but that was years ago, when the best faked bird won. Things were different nowadays. It was the best bird that won now. Talking about colour, he said: I have had the birds all colours. One bird in particular I made black by colour feeding. I have tried to make them blue, but have lost them in the process. I have tried hundreds of experiments. These remarks tickled the company, and this concluded a red-letter meeting.—W. A. Wilson, Hon. Sec., Leeds C.B.S.

FANCIERS AT CRICKET.

The "Early Birds" crow over the City and Suburbanites.

The members of the City and Suburban A.C.B. played one of two annual matches with the "Early Birds" C.C., on May 20, in the Paddington Recreation Ground, Maida Vale, W. The game was a very enjoyable one, and there was a good sprinkling of onlookers (despite the unfavourably cold weather), who saw an exciting finish, the "Early Birds" winning by only the narrow margin of two runs. The Cityites batted first and put up 84 runs, some of their "crack exhibits" being palpably below exhibition form, and finishing very low down in the list. The "Early Birds," though not bird-keepers, are a lusty lot, their captain in particular being as fine an example of the correct chubby Norwich type as one need wish to set eyes upon. Some of their "cracks" also failed with the bat, and when the last man went to the wickets 15 runs were still needed for victory. One of the remaining batsmen, however, a man of weight and sinews (a real fine stock bird) laid about him to such good purpose that the arrears were hit off before his partner succumbed to a fine catch. Now all the Cityites ask for is an opportunity to avenge the defeat. The umpires were Messrs. Abel and G. E. Weston. For the City and Suburban A.C.B., Mr. A. Pooley scored 22, and Mr. V. Wynn 15; while Mr. Powell Owen took six wickets for 25 runs. For the "Early Birds" Mr. Tugwood played a good innings of 20, and Mesrs. Hunt, Tomlin, and Greenham for 18, 13, and 11 respectively, while Messrs. Collier, Lightfoot, and Tomliu shared the bowling honours. Scores:—

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

Advt. Manager, "Cage Birds."

IDEAL RINGS.

Still another improvement; larger numbers and year, which are all embossed and not sunk like all the other kinds; can be seen without catching bird. English made, not foreign rubbish to lame your birds. Cannot fill with dirt. Can be had with year on or without, are very light, but strong enough so that a bird cannot nip them to the leg. As maker to the Aberdeen University. Pedigree Book for 128 pairs, 6d. each. Rings, 6d. dozen, 2/6 half-gross. No solid rings made. Foreign Orders promptly attended to.

SANDIFORD'S COLOUR FEEDS, ETC.
THE ONLY REAL COLOUR FOOD ON EARTH.

Read below for Proof.

Send your orders at once. Sure to run short, and can't get any more this season. There's a great scarcity in new crop. Mr. J. E. Davies, Stockport, May, 1911.—"Sir, I have much pleasure in saying that your colour food has during the past year given me every satisfaction, having secured over 50 firsts, also seconds, etc., besides N.P.C. Challenge Cup. This is second year in succession. Two firsts, fourth, and champion diploma Crystal Palace, 1911, and my birds were as bright a colour at Crystal Palace after being washed eleven times as they were at commencement of season. At Crystal Palace six out of the eight champion first prize Norwich." Never saw any colour food, only my Royal Red. Every winner in champion Cinnamon section bar one third. Never saw any but my colour food. Another big winner in Yorkshires, who won two firsts, seconds, etc. Mr. Ambler, Morecambe, writes: "April, 1911.—Sir, I can say I got a better colour from your feed than any I have ever tried." Scotland's greatest winner this last season. Mr. G. Mitchell, Brechin, writes: April, 1911.—"I have used your colour feed for years, and have found it to be all that you claim." Wales' greatest winner, Mr. D. H. Tedstone, Brecon: "Sir, I am pleased to inform you that I not only won the Welsh Cage Bird Cup. I won the solid silver Norwich Cup, the Leach Challenge Cup scores of firsts and specials, etc." I could fill this paper with testimonials like above; which should prove you need not try any other. Prices: Royal Red, 2/- lb., 2 lbs. 3/6, 5 lbs. 7/6, 14 lbs. 17/-; Hot Natal, 2/- lb., 2 lbs. 3/8. Honey-made egg crumbs, in use by scores of Crystal Palace champions, 8d. lb., 7 lbs. 3/6. Grand for rearing youngsters and using to mix with my colour feeds. Send for samples and directions. Established 1879.
